PRESIDENT THINKS CONGRESS SESSION HAS SPENT ENOUGH

Two Points Stressed at Conference Are Holding Down Appropriations and Adjournment.

ROUGH ROAD AHEAD OF AID FOR FARMER

Pending Bills Call for $360,000,000, but All of Them Can't Be Passed Without a Deficit.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Senate and House leaders emerged from a conference at the White House today with two things in mind—holding down appropriations and adjourning.

House leaders saw prospects of quitting for the summer by May 15 and some of the Senators thought it would be possible to finish up the legislative program early in May and then consider the impeachment of Federal Judge George W. English of East St. Louis.

The conferees got a very definite impression that the President thought appropriations had gone far enough for this session, and Representative Tilson (Rep.), floor leader in the House, expressed the opinion that it would be best for Congress to adjourn and go home inasmuch as "we have no money to spend."

Hard Road for Farm Relief.

It was gathered that farm relief legislation which would place an immediate tax on the Treasury would have a rocky road to travel, but none would say definitely whether the pending measures were in this class.

Another bill, which some of them expect to be vetoed, is the measure to increase the pensions of disabled Spanish War veterans. The President now has this measure and is waiting on the opinion of Director Lord of the Budget as to how it will affect Government finances.

After the conference Tilson issued this statement:

"Farm legislation was not specifically referred to, except as directly connected with the financial problem, but there was considerable discussion of the legislative situation in general with particular reference to bills proposing large increases in the annual expenditures of the Government.

Bills Call for $360,000,000

"On the House calendars there are bills increasing pensions, retirement annuities and other annual expenditures by approximately $360,000,000, very nearly the amount by which taxes were reduced.

"Means may be found for taking care of some, but it is certain that all, or even most, of them, cannot be passed without a deficit.

"I am not familiar with all the bills pending on agriculture, but it is my hope that a bill will be reported by the Committee on Agriculture, which can be passed without endangering seriously the financial policy of the administration. I am holding time for the consideration of an agricultural bill. I hope such a bill may be passed by the House."

Tilson hoped for passage of the $36,000,000 omnibus, Rivers and Harbors bill and some of the Senators, on the basis of their conference, held hopes for the administration's co-operative marketing bill, the McFadden branch banking bill, the public buildings bill, ratification of pending debt settlements and other measures not calling for appropriations which would embarrass the Treasury.

Other House leaders have declared Muscle Shoals legislation, war veterans' bills and several other subjects will be dealt with.

Besides Tilson, the guests included Senator Curtis of Kansas, the Republican Senate leader, Speaker Longworth, Chairman Madden of the House Appropriations Committee and Representative Dickinson of Iowa, one of the House farm leaders.

RIFF PEACE DELAYED AGAIN

Dispute Among Participants Halts Official Opening of Parley.

By the Associated Press.

ELAIOUN, Morocco, April 24.—The official opening the peace conference between the French, Spanish and Riffian delegates has been postponed again. Private meetings today between Gen. Simon, Senor Lopez Olivan and Si Mohammed Azerkane, the Riffian "foreign minister," failed to bring about the desired agreement respecting preliminaries.

The Paris and Madrid governments have been asked for final instructions.

REEDS IN SENATE, JIM AND DAVE, FIND THEY ARE COUSINS

In a Conversation They Learn They Had Same Great-Grand-Father.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The two Reeds in the Senate, James of Missouri and David of Pennsylvania, have recently discovered that they are cousins. Senator Reed of Missouri made it known yesterday in a chat with newspaper men. Discussing their family trees a few days ago, he said, they learned that they had the same great-grandfather, and that their fathers were not only first cousins but also friends. Hence the Senators are second cousins.

Aside from the relationship, however, they resemble each other only in courage and ability. Reed of Pennsylvania is generally regarded as the coming Republican leader, and the successor to the late Boies Penrose. The fame of Reed of Missouri needs no description. Both are last-ditch fighters, crafty, pertinacious and forceful. In the cloakrooms they are the best of friends; on the floor of the Senate the cousins fight each other with joy and satisfaction.

BLANTON, TOLD THAT HE LIES, SPOUTS SOME FIGHTING TALK

Applies Unprintable Epithet to Commissioner Fenning; Women Gasp and Both Amend Words.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Fighting talk passed between Representative Blanton (Dem.) of Texas and Frederick A. Fenning, a District of Columbia Commissioner, at a House committee hearing today, but there was no fight. Blanton, who has accused Fenning of illegal practices as guardian for mentally incompetent World War veterans, uttered an unprintable epithet after Fenning had called a recent statement by the Texan "a lie."

Women spectators gasped, committee members looked concerned. Blanton later apologized and withdrew his remark, and Fenning reluctantly modified his statement also.

Blanton has demanded the impeachment of Fenning, involving in his charges Dr. William A. White, head of St. Elizabeth's Hospital for the Insane here, and several Veterans Bureau officials.

Fenning denied the charges today, replying to each of Blanton's counts of alleged misconduct.

WOULD REPATRIATE PRETENDER

Bill Introduced to Let Duke of Guise Return to France.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 24.—A bill to permit the Duke of Guise, pretender to the throne of France, to return to France was introduced in the Chamber of Deputies today. French law now does not permit the head of the House of Bourbon to remain in the country.

The measure is said to have been promised considerable support. Its proponents, many of them of the moderate and center parties, based their claims upon the Duke's gallant services for France on the battlefield, where he won the Croix De Guerre for bravery. The papers remark upon the fact that, while the Duke is a Catholic, the measure was introduced by Edouard Soulier, a Protestant clergyman, and a Republican of the National bloc.

LESS LIQUOR SOLD ON OCEAN

Dry Law Cuts Sales on Mauretania 50 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Liquor sales on Transatlantic liners have fallen off 50 per cent under the influence of the Volstead act, officials of the Mauretania said today.

Eastbound sales are from 50 to 75 per cent higher than westbound sales. On the line's recent Mediterranean cruise for American tourists, less liquor was sold than ordinarily is consumed on a round trip Transatlantic voyage.

INVESTIGATORS URGE HANDS-OFF POLICY IN MEXICO

No Evidence of Religious Persecution Found, Merely Test of New Educational Program.

LET CALLES TRY PLAN, THEY ARGUE

Committee, Headed by Jewish Rabbi, Includes Members of Congregational and M. E. Churches.

By the Associated Press.

EL PASO, Tex., April 24.—Mexico is not persecuting any religious faith, but is trying to prevent interference with a program of education for Mexican people, a committee of 17 from the United States reported here today on its return from Mexico City.

The committee, which is composed of a Jewish rabbi and representatives of the Congregational and Methodist churches, recommended a hands-off policy for the United States until the Calles Government has had an opportunity to try out its program designed to bring Mexico out of a "condition brought about by centuries of abuse and oppression."

Included in the committee were former Gov. William Sweet of Colorado; Albert Coyle of Cleveland, representing the labor press, and J. S. Edwards, president of the Fruit Growers' Association of Redlands, Cal.

Calles a Tolerant Man.

The committee members described Calles as a tolerant man, eager to improve the spiritual, material and economic condition of his people through an intensive educational campaign.

The Rev. Frank Hampton Fox of El Paso, another member of the committee, emphasized the economic and educational necessity for the Mexican Government's attitude toward religious institutions.

"President Calles assured us that the Government meant to be fair to all churches, both Catholic and Protestant," Dr. Fox said. "Protestants have uniformly conformed with the law. They have no trouble. We believe he is honest and if let alone will work out his problems and Mexico will become a prosperous country."

Coyle quoted Calles as saying: "We respect all cults and are tolerant in every sense. The Mexican Catholic priests have always tried to keep the people in ignorance and vice because these are the best weapons for the enslaver, the powerful and the clergy.

Problem Hard to Understand.

"The present Government is doing an intense educational work, and, incredible as it may seem, the priests are the greatest obstacles. It is impossible for you to understand this because the conditions under which the priests of your country work are entirely different.

"In all Latin-American countries union between the priests, and the big business interests is traditional."

SAYS HE TRANSPLANTED HUMAN TOE TO HAND

New York Surgeon Tells of Operation on Man Who Lost Third Finger in Machine.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 24.—Successful transplantation of a toe to replace a finger is reported by Dr. J. E. Fuld of New York, in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The operation, termed by Dr. Fuld as valuable not only in giving a more sightly hand, but in giving those whose occupation requires exceptional use of the fingers an opportunity to continue their work, was performed last September.

The remote third of the middle finger of a man was cut off while he was operating a bread slicing machine. Dr. Fuld was called promptly enough to find a favorable opportunity for transplantation. The little toe of the right foot was chosen as the member to be substituted.

CITY-USED GASOLINE TAXABLE

State Attorney-General Issues Opinion to Counselor of St. Louis.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 24.—Gasoline shipped to the City of St. Louis in original containers, for use in automobiles and trucks owned and operated by the city is subject to the State gasoline tax law and the tax of two cents a gallon must be paid on it, despite the fact the motor vehicles are used in city service, Attorney-General Gentry ruled in an opinion issued today to City Counselor Muench of St. Louis.

MUSSOLINI IS A SICK MAN AND DOCTORS CAN'T AID HIM

Racked by Disordered Digestion, He Eases Self by Playing Violin — People Refuse to Talk About His Condition.

By the Associated Press.

BASIL, Switzerland, April 24.—Premier Mussolini of Italy is a sick man. This was learned during a visit to Rome by a special correspondent of the Associated Press, but with the same energy with which he has struggled for new Italian unity he is striving with all hopes to gain victory over a disease upon which science has not uttered its last word.

Suffering from an ailment which attacked his digestive powers, he works longer hours than any man in Italy and his fight has touched the hearts of the Italian people.

He attends necessary official luncheons and dinners, but partakes only of milk or rice. He never complains, even to his intimates.

When alone in his apartment after a strenuous day of physical and mental effort, his body wracked by pain, he takes from its case an old violin and by song and music he seeks to render unreal and impotent his personal enemy and his personal danger.

The Romans know of the heroic struggle he patiently is maintaining, and perhaps more than any single thing it has increased their admiration for him.

Some Italians told the correspondent that his struggle explained Mussolini's exaltation of spirit, for he was trying to conquer the disease by realizing its nothingness and its incapability of preventing him from going on with his unfinished work of reconstructing the Italian state.

In this connection a kind of unwritten gentlemen's agreement, based on common courtesy to a fellow man, has been formulated that the people generally shall stop talking about the premier's condition.

The Italians say they have advanced far enough in the domain of mental science to be convinced that the more the world discusses Mussolini's malady, the harder it will be for him to win that victory which the physicians confidently deem to be within a range of reasonable probability.

ELLEN KEY, SWEDISH AUTHOR, NEAR DEATH

By Her Writings and Studies She Exercised an Influence Over Countrymen.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, April 24.—Miss Ellen Key, famous Swedish author and lecturer, is near death.

Ellen Key, known as "The Pallas of Sweden," was born in 1849. Her biographical and critical studies are distinguished by their remarkable originality and she is credited with exercising considerable influence over the minds of the last generation in Sweden.

"The Century of Childhood," published in 1901, and comprising a philosophical survey of the progress of elementary education in the Nineteenth Century, has been called the finest of her books. Some of her best essays were collected under the title "Thought Pictures," published in 1895. Another of her outstanding volumes is "Human Beings," a study of the Brownings and Goethe, brought out in 1900.

HEAD OF PRISON HOSPITAL AT LEAVENWORTH DISMISSED

Dr. A. F. Yohe Removed on Order From Attorney-General, Following Investigation.

By the Associated Press.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., April 24.—Dr. Albert F. Yohe, physician at the Federal penitentiary here for the last 20 years, has been dismissed by order of Attorney-General Sargent, it was learned today.

Yohe said he could assign no reason for the issuance of the order, but assumed it was the result of an investigation which has been under way here for some time. No charges have been preferred against him so far as he knows, the physician said. Other prison officials refused to discuss the dismissal.

A year ago B. F. Tice, acting as chief clerk, was suspended by telegraphic order from Attorney-General Sargent.

MISSED BEING MILLIONAIRE

Philadelphian Jumps Off Bridge Because He Sold Out Too Soon.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—Matthew McCann's failure to hold property in Florida which made the purchaser a millionaire led him to jump from the Walnut Street bridge into the Schuylkill River today in an attempt at suicide. He was rescued by police.

McCann said he came to America 30 years ago from Ireland and lived in Florida. He bought about 30 acres of land and permitted it to be sold for taxes eight years ago. The man who bought it at Sheriff's sale made a million dollars profit on it recently, McCann said he learned.

MacDonald's Hair Cut Short.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24. — Ramsay MacDonald has had his hair cut so short and his moustache trimmed so close that many of his friends laughingly charge him with disguising himself. Longish hair and large moustaches are numerous in the Labor party leadership and for years England's only labor premier wore his iron gray curly hair long enough to satisfy the demands of the artist colony in Chelsea.

ELEVEN FLOGGERS OF YOUNG WOMAN WAIVE HEARING

Farmers and Wives Will Be Tried at July Term of Court in Pemiscot County.

THEY CHARGE THEIR VICTIM IS VAMPIRE

She Was Beaten With Switches Until She Bled When She Laughed at Offer to Pray for Her.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., April 24.—Eleven men and women, who flogged Mrs. Ila Newcomb, 20 years old, on April 16 because her conduct displeased them, waived preliminary hearing today and will be tried at the July term of Circuit Court.

A large crowd gathered in the new Pemiscot County Courthouse to hear the testimony, and went away disappointed when the defense attorney unexpectedly waived the hearing.

Mrs. Newcomb was there in her Sunday dress of black satin. She wore no hat over her bobbed light hair. Her cheeks were heavily rouged. She was accompanied by a farmer's wife, who nursed an infant while court was in session. Mrs. Newcomb smiled toward friends and ignored the defendants who sat behind her.

Jim Smithpeter, leader of the band, says he and the others will admit their part in the flogging and accept their punishment, whatever it be. "But we did nothing wrong," he adds. "That girl was vamping the whole neighborhood, married men and boys, and deserved whipping."

Offered to Pray for Her.

"They're hypocrites," retorts Mrs. Newcomb. "I didn't do anything wrong, and even if I did, it was none of their business. See these black and blue marks? Well, after they beat me, they said they would pray for me. They better pray for themselves."

The defendants are Smithpeter, his wife and daughter, Clara; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Gentle, Mr. and Mrs. Arch McGrugen, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McGrugen, Wesley Smith and Mrs. Stowe.

All parties to the case are tenant farmers who share the crops with the landowners. All live around the settlement of Tyler in Pemiscot County, about 20 miles south of Caruthersville. Most of them are tenants on the cotton and alfalfa plantation of H. M. Whitener, said it was there the flogging took place.

Mrs. Newcomb had been working on an adjoining farm. She is separated from her husband, two children and her parents, who reside in Bragg City, Mo. She is 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 115 pounds and is pretty except for hard lines about the mouth and eyes and her misuse of rouge.

Rescuer Held Back.

Clad in a man's shirt, overalls and cap, she was sitting on the Whitener tract near a road at noon a week ago Friday, talking to Adrian Corkran, 17 years old, who was plowing his father's acreage, when the Smithpeter family and associates appeared and made her prisoner. They marched her 200 yards to a thicket. There the women in the band accused her of misconduct and asked her to repent, so they might pray for her. She laughed in defiance. They obtained switches and beat her about the body until she bled. In her own words "they beat the shirt off me."

Harry Colbert, a tenant farmer, started to her rescue, but was held back by an outer guard of men with revolvers and shotguns. He then went to Caruthersville and notified the county authorities, who asked that the girl be brought before them.

Saturday night Colbert and Thelmer Goodman, 18 years old, found Mrs. Newcomb at the home of her employer, where she was hiding, and started to take her to Caruthersville. As they were crossing the Whitener farm, Smithpeter and other men appeared with weapons and took them into custody.

Colbert, Goodman and Mrs. Newcomb assert their captors threatened to lynch them with a rope and threatened to shoot them. This is denied by Smithpeter. The three were finally taken before Whitener and agreed to leave the State of Missouri. Mrs. Newcomb did go to Arkansas, but was brought to Caruthersville Sunday. Justice Phillips then issued warrants charging the eleven men and women with felonious assault and also charging the men with exhibiting dangerous weapons. They

SISLER AND HORNSBY HIT HOMERS ALMOST AT THE SAME TIME

Only Few Seconds Separate Drives of St. Louis Managers Here and in Pittsburg.

An unusual feature of the games of St. Louis' two major league baseball teams yesterday, was the hitting of home runs by Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals and Manager George Sisler of the Browns within a few seconds of each other.

The play-by-play account of the Cardinals' game in Pittsburg showed that Hornsby hit a home run off Pitcher "Babe" Adams in the ninth inning. The telegraph wire was telling the news in St. Louis when the flash came from Sportsman's Park that Sisler had driven the ball into the pavilion for four bases in the fourth inning of the game with Chicago, off Pitcher Thomas.

The two drives were made about 3:43 o'clock, St. Louis time.

Mueller was on base when Hornsby made his hit. Sisler was the first batter for his team.

STREAM OF LAVA, 250 FEET WIDE, ROLLING TOWARD VILLAGE

Eruption From Mauna Loa Slowly Approaching Honomalino, Only a Mile Away.

By the Associated Press.

HILO, T. H., April 24.—A stream of lava 250 feet wide, juggernaut of the Goddess Pele, rolled slowly today from the volcano Mauna Loa toward the seaside village of Honomalino, only a mile away. Household goods, with horses and cattle, were removed from ranch houses and the village. Honomalino is close by the village of Hoopuloa, destroyed a few days ago by volcanic flood.

Mauna Loa, which was clearly visible from Hilo, apparently was calm, but smoke rose from near its lofty summit. The Hawaiian volcano observatory recorded two tremors today centering beneath Mauna Loa. Indications were that the volcano's activity was decreasing.

COOLIDGE STANDS FOR CAMERA

Women Sightseers Snap Him on White House Lawn.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—An innovation to presidential practice was given by President Coolidge today when he permitted sightseers whom he had just greeted in his office during the noon hour to photograph him at will on the lawn south of the White House.

Mr. Coolidge had stepped to the lawn to be photographed with delegates to the International Electrotechnical Commission, which is in session here. As he started to return to his office several women sightseers started to snap him with their cameras. Noticing them, he returned to within camera range while dozens of other camera enthusiasts trained on him and snapped at will.

HEARING IS ENDED; NO HOPE FOR WET BILLS, PROHIBITION TO STAND AS IT IS Chairman Harreld Forecasts Adverse Reports Based on Preconceived Notions of Senators.

WHEELER, CODMAN MAKE CLOSING PLEAS

Anti-Saloon Leaguer Says Real Issue Is Hard Liquor —Other Cites Perilous Conditions.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The three-week war of words between the wets and drys, conducted before a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee appointed to examine various damp bills pending in Congress, came to an end this afternoon with oratorical blasts from the attorneys for the contending factions.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Antisaloon League and the leading dry lobbyist of the country, spoke for the bone-dry cause. Julien Codman, a Boston attorney, represented those seeking a beer-and-wine modification of Volstead act.

Examination of witnesses had closed earlier in the day. The last to appear was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews, in charge of prohibition enforcement, who said in reply to a leading question by Senator Harreld of Oklahoma, dry chairman of the very dry committee, that he did not favor a change in the Volstead act to permit the sale of beer.

Stands by Original Testimony.

Andrews, however, stated that he did not desire to repudiate his earlier testimony that sale of nonintoxicating beer, under Government regulation, for consumption on the premises where sold, would probably be "helpful" in prohibition enforcement. That statement had called down on Andrews' head the wrath of some of the more extreme of the dry leaders. His testimony today was applauded in formal announcements from the W. C. T. U. and other dry organizations.

Just before he adjourned the hearings sine die, Harreld rose to a question of "personal privilege" in order to deny that he had been arbitrary in any of his rulings. That charge, he said, had been made by some of the representatives of the wets "and even by some members of the sub-committee."

The latter reference was to Senator Reed of Missouri, who acted throughout the sessions as inquisitor for the wets and in that capacity engaged in frequent heated clashes with Harreld and other drys on the committee.

Says Fear Inspired Charges.

Harreld said that the "fear of an adverse report" by the subcommittee on wet bills was probably in the background of the complaints against his rulings.

Harreld said it was not incumbent on the subcommittee to make any report on the hearings. The limit of its power, as he understood them, was to report back to the full Judiciary Committee.

"Personally,' he added, "I am not in favor of making any report for publication at all as it would be in the main only the preconceived opinions of various members of the committee."

Harreld's statement confirmed what everybody has known all along, namely that there will be no favorable report from the subcommittee on any of the wet modification measures or on the Edge proposal of a nation-wide referendum on prohibition.

So far as both the subcommittee and the full committee are concerned, the modification bills are dead. That applies, too, to the present Congress as a whole.

There Will Be No Change.

There will be no change in the dry laws, except perhaps to make them tighter, by this Congress.

Wet leaders feel, however, publicity gained for their arguments through the Senate hearings have measurably improved the prospect of an ultimate amendment permitting the legalized sales of wines and beer, "nonintoxicating in fact."

What had been anticipated with zest as the biggest act of the whole show—the intended cross-

MOTLOW RESISTS JACK DANIEL TRIAL AT INDIANAPOLIS

Hearing on U. S. Plea in Tennessee for Order Against Former Distiller, Two Others Continued.

REMUS DESCRIBES BUYING OF LIQUOR

Says He Doesn't Remember Talking With Any of Defendants After Deal in June, 1923.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 24.—A six-hour hearing was held in Federal Court here today, in the Government's effort to force Lem Motlow and his two business associates, T. A. Heffernan and Harry Dahlman, to trial in Indianapolis on the charge of participating in the conspiracy for unlawful removal of whisky from the Jack Daniel warehouse in St. Louis in 1923.

George Remus, former millionaire bootlegger, head of the syndicate which bought the Jack Daniel distillery stock from Motlow, was a witness for the Government. The case went over until next Friday, when the Government promises to offer additional evidence.

In the hearing, before Judge Gore, two matters are being argued simultaneously. One is the Government's application for a writ of return, under which the three men may be forced to answer the charges at Indianapolis. In this, the Government is appealing from the decision rendered here last fall by Commissioner Luck, who held that the Indianapolis indictment did not show probable cause of guilt of the three Tennessee men. The Commissioner's decision enabled Motlow, Heffernan and Dahlman to avoid the trial in which a group of St. Louis and Cincinnati defendants was convicted of conspiracy and sent to Leavenworth prison.

Defendants Seek Writ.

The other matter before the court is the application of the defendants for a writ of habeas corpus. This application is based on the relation between the Indianapolis case and the indictments previously returned against Motlow and the two others in St. Louis, which have never been brought to trial.

Remus, in his testimony today, told of negotiating with Motlow and his attorney, Judge Frank Bond of Nashville, for purchase of the Jack Daniel Distillery. He said $125,000 was paid for the assets of the company, which included 30,000 gallons of whisky stored in the St. Louis warehouse.

He was asked if he had a copy of the contract for the purchase, but said he did not, and that it was among the papers withheld from him by "that woman," apparently referring to his wife, from whom he is separated.

He said he did not remember having seen or talked with any of the three defendants after the day of the sale in June, 1923. This testimony appeared to please the attorneys for the defense, who are maintaining that Motlow had nothing to do with the distillery property after the sale. Remus was not cross-questioned.

Boyd Also Called.

Harry Boyd, Remus' chauffeur, was the next witness. He said he was employed in the warehouse, following the purchase from Motlow, and he described the manner in which the whisky was pumped, by means of an electric pump, from barrels on the second floor to a garage in the rear and loaded on trucks for distribution.

Boyd testified that he transported some of the whisky to Indianapolis and to Cincinnati. He said he did not see Motlow around the warehouse at any time after the sale to the Remus syndicate, but that he did see Dahlman and Heffernan there, in the daytime, at a time before the removal of the whisky.

The application for a writ of habeas corpus, filed in behalf of the defendants, alleges that the Government refused to give them a trial in St. Louis, where they were first indicted, and where they sought repeatedly to go to trial. Having refused a trial in St. Louis, it is contended that the Government should be debarred from forcing them to trial in Indianapolis.

The latest action cited is that taken in St. Louis last Wednesday, when, instead of granting them a hearing, the Government is declared to have "arbitrarily" dismissed the case, with the reserved right to reinstate it. The defense contends that trial in Indianapolis would be in violation of the constitutional right not to be placed in jeopardy twice on the same charge.

Patrick H. Cullen of St. Louis, one of Motlow's lawyers, testified to his efforts to obtain a trial. Cullen stated that the handling of the St. Louis case by the Government was equivalent to an acquittal. Albert Ward, District Attorney from Indianapolis, objected to this statement.

The deposition of the late Col. Bond, who was Motlow's lawyer for 35 years, was read. It stated that the sale of the distilling company stock was made upon his recommendation to Motlow, that it was legal in form, and that Government officials were properly notified.

Besides Cullen, the defendants are represented by Seth Walker, Roy H. Parks and W. B. Lamb, Tennessee lawyers. District Attorney McLean of Nashville is cooperating with Ward.

were arrested and gave bond.

As justification for the illegal acts of the band, Smithpeter pleads that Mrs. Newcomb was a menace to the community. He says members of the mob had seen her under compromising circumstances at various times with various men.

Mrs. Newcomb denies the charges of misconduct. She says her accusers are religious extremists, Holy Rollers. There are some Holy Rollers around Tyler, but Smithpeter denies that any of the defendants belong to the sect. He even denies that the defendants attend any church.

$200,000 OF OLIVE BOULEVARD PROPERTY TO BE CONDEMNED

Suits Will Be Filed in Clayton Tuesday; Street to Be Widened to 100 Feet for Two Miles.

A suit will be filed Tuesday at Clayton for condemnation of approximately $200,000 worth of property along Olive boulevard, City Attorney Joseph H. Grand of University City announced yesterday. This move is in accordance with an ordinance passed last December for widening of that street from 40 to 60 feet as at present to 100 feet from Westgate avenue to the western city limits, a distance of nearly two miles. From Westgate avenue east, about three blocks, the width will be 80 feet.

Costs of condemnation will be paid by special assessments among property owners residing in an area about one-half mile on each side of Olive boulevard. The amount levied will vary with the distance of the property from the street.

No widening of the present 30 and 40 foot pavement is contemplated in the near future. A 72-foot pavement, with 14-foot sidewalks, will be possible after the right-of-way has been secured.

Olive boulevard at its eastern terminus connects with Maple and Hodiamont avenues. Skinker road is being extended from its present terminus at Delmar boulevard to Olive boulevard at Sutter avenue.

CATHEDRAL FUNERAL CHAPEL ABOUT DONE

It Has Walls of Black Marble With Gold Veins, White Floor With Black Border.

Last of the four chapels in the Catholic Cathedral of St. Louis, the Chapel of All Souls, now virtually completed at a cost of $100,000, is of an entirely different conception from the other three, which were finished some time ago.

It is a funeral chapel, and as such has walls of black marble with heavy gold veins. Three pillars of white, pencil-veined marble, bearing large crosses of black marble, separate it from an aisle of the nave. The floor is of white, with a black border, and before the altar is a metal-bordered slab to hold a bier, on which is the fleur de lis, emblematic of St. Louis, and a torch, and the Latin phrase, Requiescat in Pace (Rest In Peace).

Altar of White Marble.

The altar is white marble, richly ornamented in gold and blue mosaic of simple lines. It stands before a high, narrow arch, in which a bronze grating probably will be installed. A large figure of the Savior, with outstretched arms, is being made to stand on the altar.

There are six narrow, high windows of dark stained glass on the right-hand side, giving an east light. Emblems of immortality are on the ceiling in mosaic. In order, from the altar end, they are a grail, an anchor, with the Greek letters, Alpha and Omega; a candle and a dove.

On the eastern wall, near the ceiling, are the coats-of-arms of four former heads of this diocese, Bishops du Bourge and Rosati and Archbishops Kain and Kenrick.

Other Work Progressing.

This chapel is at the southeastern, or Newstead avenue and Lindell boulevard, corner of the cathedral. Its floor measures 16x48 feet and it is 18 feet high. The work and design were by Ravenna Mosaics, Inc., 3934 South Grand boulevard, which has done much of the decoration of the edifice. The cost, as has been told, was borne by an anonymous layman.

A mural panting is being placed on an arch behind the great altar of the cathedral and additional marble work is going on at the front end, covering barren walls of brick. In recent months a considerable amount of yellow and white marble has been added to the upper walls, improving the general artistic effect of the structure. Notable sections awaiting embellishment are the fourth arch of the big dome and the interior of that dome itself.

Prohibition Hearing Closes, No Hope for Wet Measures

examination of Wheeler by Reed—failed to materialize. Wheeler elected to appear in the role of attorney rather than as witness. Reed did not bother even to attend the afternoon session at which he spoke. Instead, the Missourian remained in the Senate chamber and made a speech on the Belgian debt settlement.

Reed said tonight when asked for his opinion of the hearings, that they had been beneficial in exposing to the people "a fraction of the evils existing under the Volstead act."

Clash of Opposing Counsel.

Both Wheeler and Codman, in their addresses to the committee, added to tre advance manuscripts they had given out to the newspapers. They went at each other lustily. Wheeler was fiery and fluent, Codman suave but earnest. Each, at the end of his remarks, received a hearty round of applause from the crowd that filled the big caucus room where the final session was held.

What the wets really wanted, said Wheeler, was "liquor with a kick in it," and this they were seeking to get despite the plain constitutional provision to the contrary. He called on them to "play the game fairly" andq come out and work for repeal of the eighteenth amendment. He taunted the wets with being divided among themselves. Some of them, he said, claimed that the law should not be enforced, and on that account should be modified or repealed, and some claimed that it could be enforce if they had adequate machinery.

His "sympathy went out to the committee" if they should decide to try to reconcile the differences among the wets.

Assails Wets as Inconsistent.

The various statements by the wets he branded as "a songlomeration of heterogeneous, incoherent inconsistencies."

He analyzed and dissected each of the wet measures in turn, declaring that what they all sought, in one way or another, was to restore the discredited and outlawed traffic in intoxicating liquors.

"The wets," he said, "talk much about the rights of the states. But they are not interested in state rights. It's just booze. They are willing to destroy every vestige of the police power of the states and tturn it back to the Federal Government if they can fasten the liquor traffic on the country."

He had much to say about the iniquities of the saloon and the "crime and misery" caused by alcoholism.

"And to all that," he exclaimed, "it is proposed, through the Bruce bill, to give a life tenure." It seemed to him "unthinkable" that this should be done.

Wheeler painted a harrowing picture of a young man coming home drunk, perhaps to beat his mother to whom "it would be no comfort to know that he gotf his liquor from a Government dispensary."

Codman interrupted Wheeler at one point to say that neither he nor any of the other wets who had come before the committee represented the liquor interests.

"I did not say that," replied Wheeler.

"Well, you ought not to imply it all the time," rejoined Codman.

Defending the one-half of one per cent alcohol limitation in the Volstead Act Wheeler said: "You've got to have it far below what would intoxicate the average person, so that it will not intoxicate anybody who offers to buy. If we had the law that the wets propose, making the definition 'nonintoxicating in fact,' the bartender would have to perform a scientific experiment on everyone to whom he sold."

He declared that the Constitution authorized no such referendum as that urged by the wets, and that even if a referendum were held it would have no binding effect.

Against Letting States Decide.

Passage of a bill to let each state fix its own alcoholic standard would result, Wheeler said, in as many varieties of law as "Mr. Heinz has pickles." It would make the whole business of enforcement a "farce." Liquor would seep across the line from a state with a high alcoholic standard to one with a lower standard.

"This," he asserted, "is all part of the scheme by which New York hopes to nullify the Constitution of the United States through that fake referendum. It is an iniquitous plan and, if adopted, would make us the joke of the entire world."

He described the present wet movement as an expression of the "left-over alcohol appetite of the old liquor days."

The testimony of Mayor Dever of Chicago, Wheeler said, proved what a "red-blooded" man could do in the Mayor's chair of a great city.

"Prohibition," he went on, "did not cause lawlessness. We are merely seeing revealed the lawlessness bred through 100 years of the licensed liquor trade."

Wheeler Hits at Buckner.

Hitting at District Attorney Buckner of New York, Wheeler said that the country needed more red-blooded men like District Attorney Olson of Chicago and District Attorney Bernsteen of Cleveland. "If more men of their type were in office," he declared, "the country would get law enforcement."

Codman declared that it was plainly within the power of Congress to amend the Volstead act. "Mr. Wheeler," he said, "has no more right to charge me with being actuated solely by a desire to get liquor with a kick in it than I have to characterize him as a nit-wit and a faker."

Not only, he continued, could Congress change the definition of alcoholic liquor in the Volstead act, but it would be quite within its rights if it should even go further and restore the old-time distinction between "ardent" spirits on the one hand, and beer and wine on the other, so that both beer and wine would be completely dropped out of the purview of the eighteenth amendment.

Serious Conditions in the South.

Figures on the seizures of stills in the South, Codman said, indicated "a serious condition" in States where the Methodist and Baptist churches held sway.

"It appears," he said, "that while pastors of these churches have been preaching prohibition in Congress, their parishioners back home have been busily engaged in making moonshine."

The shot was obviously intended, in part, for Congressman Upshaw of Georgia, a former evangelist, who was sitting close by the table at which the speaker stood.

Codman recited statistics which showed that in Georgia, with a population of about 3,000,000, about 31,000 stills were seized in 1925.

"That would be one still for every 200 persons, men, women and children, in the State," he commented, "and if you accept Gen. Andrews' estimate that his agents probably did not get more than one still out of ten, it would mean one still to every ten persons in the State."

One Still to 20 Alabamans.

On the same basis he figured that the seizures in Alabama represented one still for every 20 persons.

"This," he said, "is a shocking showing for these very dry and very virtuous states of the South."

Turning to the committee members present, Senators Goff and Harreld, he remarked impressively:

"You in Congress are the responsible governors of the country. Don't sit supinely by and see a radical injury come into the life of the nation. Are you going to deal with it as men or shunt it aside for some other men to deal with in the future?"

Codman closed with a quotation from a speech by President Coolidge—"Any attempt to dragoon the body when the need is to convince the soul will end in revolt."

RECEIVER SOUGHT FOR FIRM CAPITALIZED AT $1,000,000

Two Stockholders Charge Mismanagement of Assets and Income of Carbonizing Process Corporation.

Suit for a receivership for the Carbonizing Process Corporation, capitalized under Delaware law at $1,000,000, was filed at Clayton yesterday by two stockholders, George S. Johns and George W. Disher.

The company was organized to handle a low temperature process for reducing oil shale, and for making smokeless fuel from coal. The process was invented by George McD. Johns. It was explained, on behalf of the petitioners, that the purpose of the receivership is to straighten out the affairs of the company and its local subsidiary, the Coal Products Engineering Co., and to make a reorganization possible.

Rights to the process for Missouri were acquired by the Coal Products Engineering Co., and an experimental plant was built at Affton, St. Louis County. The local office is in the Federal Commerce Trust Building.

In the receivership petition, filed by Wayne Ely as attorney, it is charged that the directors of the Carbonizing Process Corporation diverted its funds to the Coal Products Engineering Co., which had an identical board of directors. The petition also alleges mismanagement, waste of property, assets and income, and that income has been misused.

It is charged that large blocks of stock were issued without consideration to F. W. Love, George W. Marshall, O. W. Hoopaw and others, and that a reorganization, in 1924, was carried through without the approval of a majority of stockholders.

To Address Ministerial Alliance.

The regular meeting of the Ministerial Alliance will be held tomorrow morning at the North Side Y. M. C. A. F. O. Koehler, the general secretary of the Minneapolis Y. M. C. A., will speak. The subject of the address and the discussion which will follow it will be "Youth and the Church."

CITY HIT BY 40-MILE GALE FROM SOUTHWEST

Considerable Damage Caused—Pedestrians Inconvenienced and Air Mail Delayed.

A 40-mile gale from the Southwest swept over St. Louis yesterday, causing considerable property damage and great inconvenience to pedestrians, who found it hard to remain afoot during the recurring gusts and many persons had to chase hats over busy streets.

The Chicago-St. Louis air mail was delayed and the plane narrowly escaped being wrecked in the gale. In the city a number of awnings were torn away, some plate glass windows smashed and signs broken off. Considerable damage to fruit and shade trees was reported from outlying districts.

Edmond Chartrand, 202 West Stein street, who says he is more than 100 years old, was knocked down when a gate swung open suddenly as he passed 7730 Minnesota avenue on foot. He was bruised and unable to rise until policemen assisted him.

The gale, according to the Weather Bureau, was general in the Middle West. It was caused by a low pressure area over the Great Lakes region, followed by a high pressure area. At 7 a. m. yesterday the wind velocity was 17 miles an hour. By the afternoon it was 40, subsiding only occasionally.

The Chicago air mail arrived at Lambert-St. Louis field at 2:25 p. m., about three hours late. Pilot Philip Love had battled for four hours against a head wind, which he said attained a velocity of 60 miles an hour at an altitude of 1500 feet.

Pilot Love left Chicago at 8:45 a. m. instead of 6 a. m. because of the wind. The flight to Peoria, 125 miles, required two hours of battling against the gale. After landing at Peoria a gust of wind carried the 5000-pound plane backward for 30 feet, breaking a fitting on the tail skid, and mechanics worked until 12:15 before Love could again take off.

The flight from Peoria to St. Louis was not difficult, Love said, although the wind was high. He consumed 122 gallons of gasoline, instead of 65 gallons, which is the normal requirement.

Two Women and Boy Cut When Wind Blows Ont Shop Window.

Two women and a boy were cut on the hands and face by flying glass when wind blew out a plate glass window of a furniture store at 100 Collinsville avenue, East St. Louis, at 11 a. m. yesterday. They are Mrs. Edwin Harrell, Mrs. Edna Green and her son, Jackie, of 1733 East Broadway. Their injuries were dressed by a resident physician and pronounced not serious.

Justice Staley denied the appli cation for a writ of mandamu made by Joseph Lewis of Pelham Manor, president of the Fre Thinkers' Society, to compel Dr. Frank Pierrepont Graves, Commis sioner of Education, to order the practice discontinued on the ground that it was contrary to the constitutional guarantee of reli ious freedom and that it tended toward a union of church and state. Lewis specifically requested an order against the White Plains School authorities.

"The mere excusing of pupils at the volition of their parents," said Justice Staley's memorandum, "for a half-hour period each week to attend religious instruction outside the school, and at places unrelated to school activities, in the free exercise and enjoyment of their religious profession, does not constitute the use of public property, credit or money in aid of any institution of learning under the control of any religious denomination.

000 GIRL SCOUTS PARTICIPATE IN COLORFUL PARADE

Queen, Attended by Train-Bearers, Leads Marchers at Festival in Washington U. Field House.

COSTUMES OF ALL NATIONS SHOWN

Coronation Ceremony Follows Dances and Exhibition by Archers—Convention Adjourns.

It's a lucky thing that there were no prizes offered yesterday afternoon when 1000 Girl Scouts held their festival and pageant at the Washington University field house, for the judges still would be wrangling. The performances of the different troops were so uniformly excellent that there was none outstanding.

First the Queen, in the person of Miss Beatrice Berry of Troop 0, came in, attended by her trainbearers, a tiny jester in motley, and Health and Good Citizenship. Health was particularly glad to be there because she has just recovered from the measles. The herald made a short announcement and the troops marched onto the floor dressed in the costumes of all nations.

There were little Chinese ladies in jacket and trousers and wearing black "pigtails," and there were Spanish dancing girls carrying tambourines, and there were Italians, and Scotch in kilts, and there were Japanese girls with chrysanthemums in their hair, swinging little fans. Then there came Danish girls and Dutch, and even one dressed up like a tin-can on which was printed "Baked Beans," giving rise to the presumption that she represented Boston—but she really didn't.

Loudly Greeted.

An all of them wearing the brightest and most flower-like colors that the occasion was able to offer. When they swung across the floor to pass in review before the Queen, the audience, which included the delegates to the National Girl Scout Leaders' Convention, cheered so loudly that the 10 members of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra had to exert themselves to make their march heard.

After the parade, they seated themselves along the edges of the large floor, and the festival began. The "Visitors from many lands," consisting of children one or two generations removed from foreign-born ancestors, whose national costumes they wore, circled the hall. Then followed the dances. The Spaniards danced to clicking castanets, and they thumped their tambourines to everybody's approval. American Indians did a war dance, the Danish a folk dance—and there were Great Danes—and the Scotch lasses did a Highland fling.

Next came archers, and Greek athletes, and tumblers, who being girl scouts, were able to do a number of good turns with apparent ease. The can of baked beans finally got her turn. She was only an empty bean can, it came out, and had been carelessly dumped in the park—the park was several potted plants—along with some orange peels and other rubbish. Some girl scouts happened in on the scene and promptly put the protesting can, together with the orange peels and a slightly used chocolate eclair into a refuse box.

Queen Given Crown.

At this point the Queen was presented with a crown and a scepter, and all the photographers got around and exploded flashlight charges at her, but she didn't flinch very much.

After the showing of Jim Crow, Capt. Jinks and the Virginia reel, and after little Jane Hawton of Jennings, Mo., appeared before the Queen as the honor scout seamstress of the year, the Scout leaders went back to the Chase Hotel for the induction ceremonies for the newly elected officers, the last official act of the convention. Earlier in the day it had been voted to hold the next convention at Briarcliff Manor, which is an hour's ride out of New York City, next September. And four delegates received the gold service stripe for their 10 years of duty in scout work. They were Miss Caroline B. Lewis of New York, Miss Caroline Grey of Rhode Island; Miss Marie Aftreith of Minnesota and Miss Louise Price of New York.

Pennell a Crusader Against Billboards to the Last

Late Etcher and Author in March Dared Princeton University Magazine to Print His Attack

Joseph Pennell, famous etcher, illustrator and author, was a most caustic critic, as unsparing in his condemnation of Americans as he was superlative in his praise of America as a field for his art. Pennell died Friday at Brooklyn. His irascibility and outspokenness as well as his hatred for the esthetics of the American people, whom he delighted to term "cocksure imbeciles," are well brought out by a letter he wrote last month to the student editor of the Daily Princetonian, an organ of Princeton University, in reply to a request from that paper for an article on modern American painting. The letter, which was printed at the time in the Daily Princetonian, follows:

"Sir—I did get your first letter, and I did not answer it for the simple reason that I did not think it worth while to do so, because I knew and know that neither you nor any college manufactured standardized machine paper would have the courage, honesty, or decency to print what I wrote, and I am sure the wastebasket will be the fate of this note, which you have pestered me into writing. I have never been to Princeton but once or twice in my life—but I am compelled to pass it many times on the Pennsylvania Railroad in the course of a year.

A Billboard Sermon.

"I have known many Princeton men, and I have been compelled to listen to their endless praise of their alma mater—but I never have listened to such hypocrisy as that which they utter, for a man who will talk about the glories of his University which are unseen, when before the name Princeton Junction strikes your eye on one side and the tower of the Graduate School (I think it is) faintly looms like a factory chimney on the other you find yourself in an amphitheater of billboards telling you Princeton people what you shall chew, smoke, drink, wear and the eats that are to be supplied unto you in your college cafeteria, and even how you are to be saved is stated—though I think that board has fallen down.

"But as a late professor of yours said recently in print for the benefit of the dear people: 'The least admirable and most dangerous American trait is self-complacency mixed with imperfect information.' As for your students—or whatever you are, or call yourselves, you are so ignorant that you don't know the billboards at Princeton Junction brand Princeton College as the home of artless oafs, and no amount of towers, quadrangles, college Gothic and other copies can redeem it from the billboards which greet the visitor when he first hears the name of Princeton as he arrives at the Junction—but what do you know or care? Nothing, or you would smash the whole of the Junction signs to pieces and burn the pieces to ashes. No, you don't know and don't care.

Calls College a Joke.

"You may have all the schools of art, history, archeology and morals in your midst, but so long as your approach is a foul mess of billboards and you do not see them—you and your college are a joke to the rest of the world, but you are too blind to see it—and if you did see it, too great cowards to remove it.

Yours,
JOSEPH PENNELL."

"P. S.—You won't dare to print this, and even if you do, the whole university hasn't the courage to destroy these billboards or even enough sense to want to do so. But if this should make you do so, that is only the beginning. Tear down the billboards everywhere. But yon won't dare."

UNIVERSITY CITY SUSPECT SHOT RESISTING POLICEMAN

John Spence, 19 years old, a laborer of Horton, Kan., was shot in the left thigh at 8:45 o'clock last night when he attempted to resist Patrolman Bert Belleville of the University City police, who arrested him as a suspect.

Belleville was passing through an alley between Waterman and Pershing avenues in the 7000 block when he stopped two men to question them. They fled when he said he was a policeman. Belleville overtook Spence, who struggled, and in the course of the fight the officer shot Spence. Spenc refused to tell the name of the man with him.. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital.

CHAPMAN COST STATE $23,799

Connecticut Spent $784 Additional Checking Up Alibi Witnesses.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 24.—Gerald Chapman, executed April 6, for the murder of a New Britain policeman, cost the State of Connecticut a grand total of $23,799.66.

The original cost of the Chapman case, which included his arrest, trial and conviction, was $16,766.28. The additional cost of $7026.38 represents the progress of the case through the Federal courts in Chapman's writs of habeas corpus and the appeals to the Circuit and Supreme Courts, the motion for a new trial and the appeal to the State Board of Pardons. The State paid $784.07 to nine investigating agencies in checking alibi witnesses. These witnesses were to have been used in a new trial if the courts had granted Chapman's motion for a rehearing of the case.

Henri Chouteau, 26 Vandeventer place, yesterday announced that he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress from the Eleventh District, which comprises the northern and northwest portions of St. Louis. It is now represented by Congressman Hawes, and has been in the hands of the Democrats most of the time for the last 20 years.

Chouteau was a member of the last Legislature. In his announcement, he points to work done by him in behalf of the police salary increase bill and the workmen's compensation act, both of which were passed by the Legislature.

His platform, as announced, includes: Legislation to protect homes, and "to safeguard the right of trial by jury as opposed to the abuse of the discriminatory power vested in Federal Judges"; modification or repeal of the Volstead act; opposition to any legislation "that would have a tendency to undermine prosperity such as unrestricted immigration," and to any legislation aimed at a special group or class.

SECOND POLAR PLANE TO HUNT CAPT. WILKINS

Prepared for Flight at Fairbanks After Party Leader Is Absent Nine Days.

By the Associated Press.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, April 24.—With Capt. George H. Wilkins still not heard from after an absence of nine days, the second division of the Detroit Arctic expedition plans to hop off from Fairbanks for Point Barrow tomorrow, according to the North American Newspaper Alliance. Maj. Thomas C. Lanphier, second in command to Capt. Wilkins, ordered the move, and the three-motored Fokker plane, Detroiter, was prepared for the flight today.

Members of the expedition hope to find Wilkins in Point Barrow. He hopped off for that destination in the single-motored Alaskan. Radio operators with the expedition in Fairbanks believed for a short time today they had received a faint call from Capt. Wilkins, but no message followed, and they later were inclined to credit the calls to stations too distant to be heard distinctly.

They received a message today from Alexander Malcolm-Smith, in charge of the overland party, saying it had reached the Polar Sea and hoped to arrive in Barrow by Wednesday.

PAIR BLAMED FOR 3 HOLDUPS

Two Kroger Stores Robbed; Tailor Resists and Youths Flee.

The same two young men are thought by police to have robbed two Kroger stores last night and to have attempted to rob Isaac Sakowski, tailor of 5239 Delmar boulevard. The youths entered the tailor shop at 6:30 p. m. and, on the pretense of ordering a suit, got him into a rear room. One drew a revolver, but Sakowski resisted and his assailants fled.

At 8 o'clock two men held up August Wibbelman, manager of a Kroger store at 5600 Lotus avenue, took $80 from the cash register and drove off in a large sedan. Fifteen minutes later the same two, it is believed, held up Clyde Bohne, manager of a Kroger store at 5410 North Market, his butcher and three women customers, took $85 from the tills and escaped.

NICHOLAS TIFFANY, 16, HELD AFTER AUTO COLLISION

Youth Says Accident in Which Three Persons Were Hurt Was Unavoidable.

Nicholas Tiffany, 16 years old, son of George S. Tiffany Jr., of 11 Hortense place, was arrested at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon charged with careless and reckless driving.

With four other boys, all students at the Country Day School, Tiffany was driving an Oakland coupe east on St. Charles Rock road. At St. Vincent's lane his machine collided head-on with a westbound Ford coupe driven by Elmer Eoff of Maryland Heights. The coupe overturned, slightly injuring Eoff and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hinson of Maryland Heights, who were riding with him.

Tiffany was taken to Clayton while efforts were made to reach his father. His bond was fixed at $200 and a hearing set for Tuesday in Justice Stecker's court. He said the accident was unavoidable in that he was forced to swerve suddenly to avoid hitting a machine which suddenly stopped in front of him.

REICHSTAG GETS BILL TO DESPOIL EX-RULERS

Cabinet Submits Measure, but Denounces Confiscation Without Payment.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 24.—The Cabinet today, submitted to the Reichstag a bill for the confiscation of the property of the former rulers of Germany. The action had been demanded by 12,500,000 voters in preliminary plebiscite.

To indicate its disagreement with the terms of the bill, the Cabinet appended to it a declaration charging that "confiscation, without compensation, of the entire possessions of the former rulers, as demanded in the bill, runs counter to the principles which must underlie every legislative act in a state founded upon law."

The declaration announces the Cabinet's determined opposition to the bill and adds that a compromise bill is being drafted which it is hoped will be an acceptable substitute. The compromise bill calls for indemnification of members of the former reigning houses. It proposes to settle upon the Hohenzollerns not less than 12,000,000 marks (normally $3,000,000), in cash and large landed estates.

The Prussian Minister of Finance, Hoepker-Aschoff, declared that the provisions of the bill satisfied the Prussian Government. This increased the chances of the Socialists supporting the compromise bill, but the parliamentary situation is still much tangled.

FINDS MALARIA HELPS TREATMENT OF PARESIS

New York Doctor Reports Beneficial Effects in 40 of 100 Cases.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, April 24.—The results of a three-year experiment in infecting 100 patients with malaria in order to cure them of paresis were made public today by Dr. George H. Kirby, director of the New York State Psychiatric Institute. The experiments were conducted on paretics coming to the State Hospital for the Insane on Ward's Island.

The results are published in the Journal of the American Medical Association by Dr. Kirby and his associate, Dr. Bunker, and in a paper which was read before the Brooklyn Society of Internal Medicine.

The malarial treatment is explained as the outgrowth of the work of Dr. Wagner-Jaurgee, a psychiatrist of Vienna, who observed that cases of paresis frequently showed marked improvement following an attack of some other disease, such as typhoid fever, pneumonia or erysipelas. Dr. Wagner-Jaurgee finally decided to inoculate paretic cases with some disease that was not too dangerous in character.

He found that malaria was the safest, most easily controlled and gave the best results in arresting the progress of paresis in various stages.

According to Dr. Kirby, the work done at Ward's Island confirms the claims of the Vienna physician.

Among 100 cases of paresis subjected to treatment by malarial inoculation, Dr. Kirby announced the mental symptoms entirely disappeared in 32 and the patients were able to return home and resume work. In 12 other cases the symptoms virtually disappeared with only a slight residual effect remaining.

Conservatively estimated, Dr. Kirby said, a markedly beneficial result has been obtained in more than 40 of 100 cases treated.

This music is new, incomparably different, and so absolutely natural is its accentuation of rhythm, its reproduction of all tones, in any desired volume, that all stand in amazement before this marvelous instrument during its performance. The full range of musical sound is now recorded and played by the Panatrope—its performance will be a revelation to you. (Complete operation from your electric light current.)

THREE KILLED IN NEW CLASHES IN CALCUTTA

Moslems and Hindus Armed With Pickaxes, Swords and Clubs Clash in Street.

By the Associated Press.

CALCUTTA, British India, April 24.—Three more deaths occurred today in a recrudesence of the rioting between the Moslems and Hindus.

The worst of today's troubles took place in Mechua Bazaar street, where 500 Moslems, armed with pick axes, clubs, swords and stones, parading to the accompaniment of drums, clashed with a similarly armed crowd of Hindus who gathered at the other end of the street.

The fighting lasted for an hour, with a furious interchange of blows and missles. The police dispersed the rioters with the firing of blank cartridges. The houses of a number of Hindu merchants were attacked, one was set on fire and shops were looted.

In Canning street a lone Hindu was killed by a crowd of Moslems. Two other Hindus were found dead in the street from dagger wounds. Two police sergeants and one constable were badly wounded in their efforts to quell the disorder.

Tonight the city presented a deserted appearance, the police having advised the closing of all shops, but solitary cases of assault and looting were reported. Two armored cars patroled the disturbed quarters.

One hundred Gurka soldiers have arrived to assist the police in maintaining order.

WHITE STAR LINE SALE TO BRITISH INDICATED

Figure of $35,000,000 Mentioned in Deal for Fleet of Liners.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Indications that the sale of the White Star Line division of the International Mercantile Marine to British shipping interests was about completed were given today when J. P. Morgan and Charles Steele, partners in the Morgan banking firm, resigned as directors of the White Star corporation.

Morgan and his associate later authorized a statement that their resignations were prompted by the fact that their London partners might be interested in the contemplated sale of some of the corporation's properties, and because of this connection they considered it appropriate to withdraw. Morgan, Grenfell & Co., the London branch of J. P. Morgan & Co., is understood to have conducted the negotiations abroad.

Both the Cunard line and Furness, Withy & Co. are reported to have made bids for the White Star fleet, with the prospects favoring a transfer to Cunard interests for approximately $35,000,000. A subsidiary company may be formed to acquire direct control.

LONDON, April 24.—Shipping circles here are without authoritative news today of the reported deal for sale of the White Star line to British interests.

Rumor credited Baron Kylsant of Carmarthen with being one of the principals in the negotiations. It was suggested that the Royal Mail Line, of which he is chairman and managing director, wants to enter the North Atlantic service and is, therefore, desirous of obtaining bigger ships. Lord Kylsant refused to comment.

Those connected with P. A. S. Franklin, head of the International Mercantile Corporation, of which the White Star Line is a division, were disposed to discredit the rumor. Franklin himself declined to talk.

BORDER PATROL OFFICERS AMBUSHED, ONE KILLED

By the Associated Press.

TUCSON, Ariz., April 24.—Three mounted smugglers last night ambushed a party of border patrol officers, after the latter had intercepted and seized a liquor pack train consisting of three loads, at a point 75 miles northwest of Nogales, killing Officer William Walker McKee.

The officers were returning in an automobile to Nogales after failing to find the smugglers, when they were fired on from both sides of the highway.

McKee was a native of Kentucky and served both in the Pershing Mexico expedition and overseas.

FACES MURDER CHARGE FOR KILLING OF YOUTH

Coroner's Jury Holds Cornelius O'Connell, Who Shot Wilford Barrett as Thief.

A Coroner's jury in East St. Louis yesterday ordered Cornelius O'Connell, 59, held for the death of Wilford Barrett, 14 years old. The jury found O'Connell shot the boy "with murderous intent." O'Connell, who lives at 514 South Main street, shot the boy last week when, so he said, he found him attempting to steal chickens.

O'Connell did not take the stand at the inquest. Policemen testified they found the boy wounded in O'Connell's yard and that O'Connell admitted shooting him. Police also told of finding a sack with one chicken in it hung on the roost in O'Connell's chicken house nearby.

Willis Akridge, 523 South Fourth street, testified that he heard O'Connell fire two shots after and then commanded the boy, "come back here." Young Barrett advanced to within 12 feet of O'Connell, Akridge stated, with his hands above his head, exclaiming, "Don't shoot me," and he then saw O'Connell fire a third shot, after which the boy crumpled to the ground.

Akridge's testimony that O'Connell fired while the boy's hands were in the air was substantiated by another witness. O'Conell had said he fired when the boy ran from the shed and advanced toward him in a threatening manner.

The slain boy will be buried tomorrow at Mount Hope Cemetery after services at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barrett, 309 Illinois avenue.

AYNE ELY'S ARGUMENT FOR DYER COURT PRACTICE BILL

inority Report Made Public and Will Be Sent to St. Louis Bar Association Members in Connection With Referendum.

he written minority report of rney Wayne Ely, favoring the ding Dyer bill in Congress seek- to amend the practice and pro- ure in Federal courts, was e public yesterday and will be to various members of the St. s Bar Association in connec- with a referendum on a ma- ty report which is opposed to bill.

he referendum will be under pices of a special committee, se personnel was announced erday by George C. Willson, ident of the Bar Association. appointed Byron F. Babbitt Thomas W. White, who are own to be opposed to the Dyer asure, and A. R. Russell and nest F. Oakley, who are in favor of it. Willson will serve as th member in more or less of a tral capacity.

Ely served on a committee with M. Lashly, Marvin E. Boisseau, lliam O. Reeder and Arthur H. ler and dissented from their re- t setting forth that the cause justice is better vindicated by present method used in the deral courts and recommending t the Dyer measure does not rit the approbation of the Bar ociation. Another bar com- ttee consisting of John M. Good- , former Judge Grimm, Charles Hay, Lambert E. Walther and rles B. Williams previously had de a report stating that it did concur in any of the provisions the bill.

Provisions of the Bill.

s is known, the Dyer bill pro- es to prevent the trial judge jury case from expressing an nion as to the credibility of nesses or the weight of testi- y and requires him to deliver charge to the jury before ar- ent of counsel, instead of af- as he does at present. It also ld require him, when request- y counsel, to reduce his charge writing. With the feature of bill in regard to expressing an opinion, Ely heartily concurs. He was one of the attorneys for the defense in the Jack Daniel liquor conspiracy trial at Indianapolis last December, but he has let it be known he was in favor of reform in procedure even before the Jack Daniel case, from the trial of which much discussion arose over Judge Baltzell's method of giving his opinion to the jury.

The majority report icontends that comment of the judge is a benefit and guidance to the jury and is an assistance welcomed by jurymen. Ely answers that such practice tends to invade the province of the jury and amounts to violation by the judge of his oath of office. Continuing, he said:

"I yield to none in respect for and admiration of the Courts of the United States and I would not favor placing any restrictions upon the judges of those courts that would deprive them of the power to properly govern the trial of cases or to hamper them in any way in the administration of justice, but I cannot agree with the majority members of this committee in their assumption that the judge of a United States Court has a peculiar qualification for correctly deciding the facts or that he is better qualified to decide the facts than the average man who serves as a juror in his court. Bearing in mind that the appellate courts of the United States will not interfere with the thrusting of opinions of fact upon the juries by trial judges so long as the trial judge states to the jury that they are not bound to agree with them, I can see no other remedy but legislation.

"Lowers Dignity of Court."

"The admission in the majority report that the power to comment upon the evidence will in some instances and by some judges be abused and in some cases autocratically used is an argument in favor of the Dyer bill. That admission recognizes the danger of placing this power in the hands of a judge who will use it and I see no reason in the argument that any of the citizens of this government should be subjected to trial before such a judge in order to compliment another judge who recognizes the right of fair trial by giving him an arbitrary power, which he will not use. When a lawyer is honored by being put upon the bench in either the State or Federal courts he is supposed to leave off being a representative of one side or the other in a law suit and before he is allowed to assume his position, he must take an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States and the judge who will take advantage of a litigant in his court by expressing to the jury his opinion on the credibility of a witness not only invades the province of the jury, but lowers the dignity of the court and violates his oath to support the Constitution."

Ely called attention to the stress laid by the majority upon English procedure, which is pointed out as an argument against the Dyer bill. He then says:

"I do not believe that the majority report is correct in its statement that the proponents of the Dyer bill are limited to lawyers representing defendants in criminal cases and to those lawyers who most often plead the cause of plaintiffs in damage suits, although the majority report states that such lawyers would favor the Dyer bill "for obvious reasons."

Enactments in the States.

Ely asserts the committee conveys an unfair impression that all criminals who go unwhipped of justice are free because of the failure of the jury system as applied to the practice in the state courts.

"Starting with North Carolina in 1796," he points out, "the courts in 39 of the 48 states have by constitution, statute or decisions taken away the power of the trial Judge to advise the jury on the facts. Such a statute was enacted in Missouri 80 years ago and repeated attempts to repeal it have met with decided defeat. If it were true that the present jury system as applied to the practice in the State courts provides avenues of escape for criminals it would be hard to believe that all but nine of the legislatures in the United States have become so depraved or were so woefully ignorant that they would have refused to take steps to correct the evils that account for the failure to bring criminals to justice."

Figures are cited by Ely showing that in Kansas City last year out of 311 persons tried for crime, 306 were convicted and only five were acquitted. He contends that acquittals in criminal cases by juries in our rural courts are rarely achieved unless they are justified by the facts. Judges of the state courts in rural districts are subject to the same restrictions as judges of state courts in the cities, he points out.

Object of a Jury Trial.

Concluding his report, Ely argues as follows:

"Are the Judges of Federal courts endowed with greater power of understanding than the Judges of the State courts? Should the courtroom of one holding a lifetime office by virtue of political preferment be a more sacred haven of refuge than that presided over by the Judge who is accountable to the people and who dare not trespass upon the inalienable rights of his fellow man lest he be not returned to his office? No proof is present and there is no justification for the assumption that the Judge of a United States court possesses ability superior to that of the Judge of the State court and I do not believe that an average Judge of either court possesses extraordinary power to understand or to determine an issue of fact on conflicting evidence.

"This bill seeks to preserve the ancient right of trial by jury—the right of men of different occupations and relations of life to determine issues of fact. We should not lose sight of the fact that the object of a jury trial is to give justice as expressed by twelve men who are free to deliberate and to pass judgment on the credibility of witnesses, unhampered and uninfluenced and unprejudiced by the expression of opinion by a Judge. It matters not how honest, how desirous of bringing about the proper result the Judge may be, he is no more capable of passing on the credibility of other men than are the bankers, manufacturers, business men and farmers who compose the juries of our Federal courts. I have no fear of the judgment of such men if they are given the facts and furnished the opportunity for thought."

1/5 of a Car's Cost is in the Engine . . . 1/3 is in the Body

By One-Profit manufacture of all bodies, engines, etc., Studebaker is enabled to sell the Standard Six Coach at the lowest price ever placed on an enclosed car by Studebaker— $1195 f. o. b. factory

FEW motor car "manufacturers" have forges, foundries, etc., to make their own engines—yet one-fifth of the cost of an automobile is in the engine. Even fewer build their own bodies—yet one-third of the cost of a car is in the body.

Not only does Studebaker make all bodies, and all engines used in Studebaker cars, but also all clutches, gear sets, springs, differentials, steering gears, brakes, axles, gray-iron castings and drop forgings. Only Studebaker in the fine-car field enjoys the benefits of such complete manufacturing facilities.

One-Profit value

These facilities enable Studebaker to manufacture quality cars on a One-Profit basis. They enable Studebaker to eliminate the profits of outside parts and body makers. Many major savings are thus effected and passed on to the ultimate buyers of Studebaker cars in the form of higher quality and lower prices.

In the quality Coach, illustrated, for example, One-Profit savings enable Studebaker to offer you at $1195 important features in equipment and construction not excelled by cars costing double its price. In comparing Coach values, consider these Studebaker features:

No other car in the world of its size and weight can show horsepower rating equal to that of the Studebaker Standard Six. Twenty-eight makes of 5-passenger enclosed models, which cost from $100 to $1990 more than the Standard Six Coach, have less rated horsepower.

Notice the high quality upholstery, compare the depth of Studebaker cushions and seat backs with other cars costing much more. Inspect the interior workmanship. There are no cloth-head upholstery tacks, raw edges or cheap binding braid in Studebaker interiors—each is "hand-tailored" for beautiful appearance and great durability.

Finer body construction—first grade northern white ash and hard maple are used in the body construction. Body joints are mortised, tenoned, glued or screwed. Door posts are completely metal covered. Doors fit flush and tight. They open and close easily with the click of precision. There is no stronger, more durable body construction in the industry than Studebaker.

Costly alloy steels—we pay a premium to secure steel of extra quality. A bar of Studebaker alloy steel the diameter of a dime will stand greater strain than a bar of ordinary steel the diameter of a dollar. This insures greater dependability with longer life and lower upkeep cost. In 1925, sale of repair parts for all Studebaker cars averaged only $10 per car in operation.

Completely machined crankshafts—it costs Studebaker $600,000 a year for this feature alone. There are probably less than ten cars in the world that can claim this feature—and there are less than ten other engines in the world that run as smoothly as Studebaker. Vibration is eliminated. One-Profit facilities alone make this feature possible in a Coach at the Studebaker price.

The spark is automatically regulated by the speed of the engine. In place of the obsolete spark lever on the steering wheel is a convenient switch for safety lighting control.

Durable finish on Studebaker cars is satin smooth and the color tones uniformly deep and true on every part of the car—the result of more than 20 operations and the most painstaking workmanship. Don't admire it at a distance—check it closely in the bright sunlight.

Compare Studebaker fenders—the weight of the steel used, the width and depth of the crown and skirt, the 14 bolt fastenings, the rigid strength of the mountings are unsurpassed. Unit-Built like the rest of the car—specially designed to conform to the full-size balloon tires.

The Studebaker pressed-steel instrument board is backed by wood so it won't rattle or vibrate. Put your fingers behind the instrument board of most any car in the Studebaker price class and you will find that there is no wood—merely a sheet of pressed steel. And note how beautifully the instrument board is mounted—the completeness and quality of the equipment. You cannot find its equal in much costlier cars.

Plate glass of the highest grade is used in the windows. It is mounted in live rubber, preventing leaks, drafts, rattles and vibration.

There is a master lock on the steering wheel which locks the ignition and control in one operation. The same key locks the door and spare-tire carrier.

Water-proof ignition—the wiring to the engine is doubly insulated in fiber conduit—and rubber shields cover each spark plug, the distributor head and the coil. This means a fully water-proofed ignition system.

The oil drain valve on a Studebaker is conveniently placed under the hood. Oil can be drained without getting under the car.

Oil and gas filters, plus an air cleaner, prevent foreign matter from entering the engine. The life and efficiency of the engine are thereby increased.

Complete equipment includes gasoline gauge on dash, automatic windshield cleaner, rear-view mirror, cowl ventilator, stop light and dome light.

To appreciate this fine car you must drive it. Experience the thrilling power in the Standard Six engine. Compare its riding-steering-driving ease with any car. Any of the Studebaker dealers listed below will gladly supply you with a Standard Six Coach that you may drive yourself.

JNO.—Demiurge, taken from the Latin and Greek, is the name given in the cosmogony of the Gnostics to the creator, or former, of the world of sense. He was variously conceived. In general, he was the archon or chief of the lowest order of spirits or eons of the pleroma; mingling with chaos, he formed in it a corporeal animated world. He created man, but could impart to him only his own weak principle, the psyche or sensuous soul; therefore, the highest, the really good God, added the divine rational soul, or pneuma. But the power of evil in the merely sensuous demiurge prevented the development of the higher element. The demiurge, holding himself to the highest God, could not bring his creatures to the knowledge of the true Godhead; as the Jehovah of the Jews he gave them the imperfect law of Moses, which promised merely a sensuous happiness, and even that not attainable; and against the spirits of the hyle, or world of matter, he sent only a phychical, and therefore powerless, Messiah, the man Jesus.

MERCHANT GIVEN SIX MONTHS IN JAIL FOR MAIL FRAUDS

Danville Man Pleads Guilty of Sending Out False Financial Statement to Obtain Credit.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DANVILLE, Ill., April 24.— Wolf Fagen, whose clothing store here went into bankruptcy a year ago, and who was subsequently indicted by a Federal Grand Jury on various counts of using the mails to defraud, pleaded guilty in the United States District Court this morning and was sentenced by Judge Lindley on one count, to six months in jail, unless at the end of his first month he is able to pay a $300 fine, when he will be released and placed on probation for a year.

Fagen's violation was a schedule of his financial rating which he prepared in October, 1924, in which it was stated that his stock was worth $42,000, and the sending of this schedule through the mails with the result that he secured credit on it. When a receiver made an inventory of the stock he found that shoe boxes supposed to contain shoes were empty. Property Fagen said was worth $20,000 turned out to be worth $8000 and fully mortgaged. Fixtures he listed at $5000 were worth $700.

At a creditors' hearing, Fagen testified that he couldn't read and he couldn't write and that the statements had been made out by his clerk. But on cross-examination he admitted that he had signed the statements, that he knew the contents of the statements.

SMALL CHANGES SHOWN IN COTTON AT CLOSE

NEW YORK, April 24.—Early advances on unfavorable weather and crop advices were followed by reactions in the cotton market today. July sold up from 18.15 to 18.24 but eased back to about the lowest and closed at 18.18, compared with 18.15 at the close yesterday. The general market closed steady, net 1 point lower to 6 points higher, with near months relatively easy.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 4 points. After a little irregularity, the market turned upward on reports of further rains in the south, prospects for frost in Western belt sections over Sunday, fear of overflows in Texas, and rather a better tone in advices from the cotton goods markets.

May advanced from 18.65 to 18.74 and October from 17.36 to 17.44, the general list showing net gains of 8 to 10 points in the forenoon. Demand then tapered off and prices lost much of their gain in late trading under realizing for over the week end.

Liverpool cables were lower than due and there was no improvement in reports from Manchester, but weather and crop news from the South was the main influence in the market here and evidently increased apprehensions of a late start. Private advices reported trade calling and continental buying in Liverpool had been offset by hedge selling. Very little, if any, Southern selling was noted around the ring here, however, and the late reactions were attributed almost entirely to profit-taking by buyers earlier in the week.

Better business was reported in the Fall River cloth markets and Western wholesale distributors were quoted to the effect that more seasonable weather had stimulated business to some extent.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 88,000 bales, against 75,000 last year. This attracted considerable comment, it being pointed out that the figures were the first to suggest an increase in exports over last year's for a long time.

Raw sugar futures were firmer on covering and trade buying, promoted by steadiness of the spot market, and reports that the proposed reduction of 10 points in the present Cuban crop probably would be adopted on Monday when the Cuban Congress reconvenes. Closing prices were one to three points net higher. May closed $2.43, July $2.55, September $2.67, December $2.78, January $2.78.

No changes occurred in refined sugar, prices ranging from $5.15 to $5.60 for granulated.

HOGS, LAMBS AND BEEF COWS HIGHER

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last wk.	Pr. wk.	Year ago
Cattle and calves	18,706	22,852	19,688
Hogs	70,816	80,594	63,887
Sheep	3,411	3,968	2,915
Horses and mules	227	294	139
Totals	93,160	107,708	86,629

Hogs, sheep and lambs and beef cows closed higher for the week at the St. Louis National Stock Yards and other grades of cattle averaged about steady. Receipts were moderate in the various departments and the combined run of stock for the six-day period aggregated 93,160 head, compared with 107,708 the previous week and 86,629 corresponding period a year ago. Weakness in beef steers early in the week was mostly regained in later trading. Quality of the run was medium to good and sales bulked at $8.00 to $9.10 per cwt. Light yearling steers and heifers also strengthened after a lower start and closed about steady. Offerings sold largely around $8.00 and $9.00, with tops reaching $10.00 and $10.15. Plain consignments graduated down to $7.00, $6.00 and under. Beef cows, as stated, moved up 25c to 50c under light receipts and a good demand. Sales bulked at $5.75 to $7.00 and a top of $8.00 was recorded. Canner and cutter cows figured about steady for the period. Cutters were quotable at $4.25 to $5.25 and canners at $3.25 to $4.25. Bulls strengthened somewhat late in the week, bolognas topping at $6.75. The bulk of the latter, however, brought $5.50 to $6.50. Heavy beef bulls made $6.00 to $7.00 and canner and cutter grades passed the scales at $4.00 to $5.00. Stocker and feeder cattle continued about steady under light receipts. Steers sold in a wide spread of $5.50 to $8.50, while bulk of deals centered in the $7.00 column. Stock cows and heifers brought current quotations. Veal calves advanced sharply Friday, tops reaching $12.25, against $11.25 and $11.50 earlier in the week. The plainer calves also advanced, light veals, good but too light for shippers closing at $9.00 and cheap outs commanding around $5.00, $6.00 and $7.00. Southern canner yearlings were valued at $4.50 to $5.25.

Hogs Close Higher.

A decrease in the hog supply at the local yards and throughout the west during the week just closed exerted a stimulating influence on prices of this class of livestock and although sharp fluctuations both downward and upward occurred at various times during the week the closing basis shows an advance over the previous week's close. While the decrease in supplies held good for local runs compared with last week the 11 markets showed a slight increase, offerings however sharply under a year ago. A broad order buying demand as well as brisk buying by local butchers eliminated to a large extent the necessity of salesmen going to big killers with their offerings. General market for the week closed 10c to 15c higher on all grades of hogs. Top reached $13 this week, within 10c of the year's highest price, pig stuff advancing to $14.25 which represented the highest figure for any class of swine since late in September of 1925. Bulk of the light hogs from 160 to 190 pounds average cleared for the week at $13.40 to $13.75 with the light butcher hogs from 200 to 220 pounds average at $13 to $13.40. Medium weight killing hogs from 230 to 250 pounds average ranged from $12.75 to $13 mostly with the heavy kinds from 260 to 300 pounds in weight bulking for the six-day period at $12.40 to $12.60, extremely heavy kinds ranging upward from 300 pounds at $12.25 to $12.40. Quality which has been gradually deteriorating from last fall and winter's unusually high standard was about like the past few weeks. Receipts included a fair share of the half fat bacon grades on the bacon order which were at times hard to move with entire satisfaction to shippers. Where orders were at hand for this class no difficulty was experienced but lack of demand caused a spread of 25c between this class and fat hogs of the same weights. Southern kinds too, where not guaranteed met with a reduction of $2 to $3 per hundreweight from natives of the same degree of fatness. Pig prices probably followed the most erratic course of any grade of swine although the demand at all times was good. Best light fat pigs brought up to $14.25 with the bulk clearing for the week at $13.50 to $13.75, this spread including the weights from 110 to 150 pounds average. Lighter kinds ranged downward according to weight and quality. Packer sows after opening the week at lower values from last week's close reacted and closed the period at 15c to 25c advance, sales upward to $11 on the best grades with the bulk for six days at $10.75 to $10.90. With the exception of a strengthening on light sows the market for this class ruled unchanged, sales at $9.50 to $10 with best lights up to $10.25. Following is complete quotations of the different classes. Good light hogs 160 to 190 pounds, $13.40 to $13.85; light butchers 200 to 220 pounds, $13 to $13.40, medium weight butchers 230 to 250 pounds $12.75 to $13, heavy butchers 260 to 280 pounds $12.50 to $12.65. Extremely heavy hogs 290 pounds and up $12.35 to $12.50. Pigs 110 to 150 pounds $13.90 to $14. Packer sows $10.90 to $11. Stags $9 to $10.25.

Clipped Lambs Higher.

Local lamb and sheep receipts by rail showed a material decrease in volume as compared with the previous six-day period, but when contrasted with the corresponding time last year a substantial increase is made evident. In the case of 11 principal markets a decrease is shown from both last week and a year ago. While the actual count of incoming arrivals was under last week, offerings from local feedlots were more liberal and a strict comparison on this basis would leave very little difference. In quality the offering was good and weights were generally lighter than during the previous week's session. Clipped lambs made up the bigger part of supplies and staged a sharp advance in price, sales at the close looking right at $2 higher on the best grades of this class. A top of 314 was registered during midweek for some choice offerings to butchers, with packers taking their supplies at $12.50 to $13.75, the majority of sales registering at $13.50 to $13.75 during the latter part of the week. Bulk of the offering in this class was from local feedlots, showing a wider variety of quality than last week. In the wool lamb division the supply was limited, top reaching $14.75 for some medium to good offerings. Plainer grades ranged downward around $13 to $14. The season's first consignment of Tennessee spring lambs was received this week and brought $17 to packers. Other lots carrying less finish ranged from $14 to $16, with a few plain kinds as low as $11. The movement of this class of lambs is as yet very slow compared with previous years. Sheep came in for their share of the week's advance, prices looking $1 higher on this class. Early week sales saw Tennessee wool ewes up to $9.50, with natives later making up to $9.75. Strictly choice kinds quotable up to $10. Clipped ewes were here in fair numbers and sold from $7.50 to $8.50, the latter price claiming a deck of fat Tennessee offerings for packers. Choppers, canners and bucks showed practically no change.

Good to choice wool lambs quotable at $14.75 to $15.25, medium to good $14.25 to $14.75, plain to medium $13.50 to $14.25, cull and common $11 to $13. Skins $6 to $10. Good to choice clipped lambs $13.50 to $14, medium to good $13 to $13.50, plain to medium $12 to $13, cull and common $10 to $11. Good to choice wooled mutton ewes $9 to $10, medium to good $8 to $9, plain to medium $7 to $8. Good to choice clipped ewes $8 to $9, medium to good $7 to $8, plain to medium $6 to $7. Weekly Metal Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Conditions in the steel market during the past week remained largely unchanged, and prices were steady with the exception of sheets and strips which were easier. New buying was again of a hand-to-mouth character, but, while in fair volume, it was apparently not up to production.

Pig iron was quiet, with buyers and sellers awaiting developments.

The spurt of business which developed in the copper market on the publication of the March statistics has been followed by renewed dullness. The British labor situation has restricted business abroad and reactions in London have been accompanied by a falling off in the export inquiry, which had shown some improvement during the previous week. These features evidently influenced buyers for domestic consumption, whose recent purchases had probably covered more immediate needs, and the market was dull at the end of the week, with producers generally holding electrolytic for 14c delivered, but finding few if any buyers above the 13¾c level.

Tin prices made some response to the weakness abroad, but realization that smelting operations would be interrupted if the threatened British coal situation should become a reality, increased interest of buyers in May and June deliveries owing to small insight stocks and the large out movement on contracts and the market later became firmer.

Lead was steady with demand good and offerings light, particularly for prompt shipment.

Zinc was easy early in the week, but on the d[illegible] a better inquiry developed and the [illegible] was steadier.

Antimony was steady in sympathy with the strength in China with a good inquiry reported.

Morgan Resigns From I. M. Marine Corporation Board.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—The resignations of J. P. Morgan and Charles Steele, members of the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., as directors of the International Mercantile Marine Corporation, which is negotiating the sale of the White Star Line fleet, to British interests, was announced today. H. G. Phillips and John H. Thomas, treasurer and vice president of the corporation will succeed them on the board.

Wall Street interpreted the resignations as an indication that negotiations for the transfer of the White Star line practically had been completed. While the name of the purchaser has not been disclosed, it is understood that the ships eventually will be placed under control of the Cunard line.

WHEAT IS IRREGULAR ON LOCAL MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 23.—Wheat was irregular today, selling down after early better level.

Wheat finally closed at about unchanged from previous day but corn was lower. Anticipated bullish weekly statistics steadied wheat while favorable weather was factor in corn market.

Good soft wheat was steady on the local market Saturday, sound heavy test being in demand. Scant grade No. 2 red was 1c lower, selling late at $1.68. Hard was 2c lower, though not much track wheat was offered. Mills, however, held out. Ordinary No. 2 hard sold after the close at $1.63½. A lot of 5000 bushels 59-lb. No. 2 hard was booked at close at $1.63 to arrive. Corn was steady to 1c lower, influenced mainly by liberal offerings and weak futures. There was fair mill, elevator and glucose demand at prevailing basis, but did not prove sufficient for offerings, probably 20 cars being carried over. Oats were steady to ½c lower. Offerings were cleaned up closely under good local and shipping demand.

A decrease in the United States visible supply total on Monday was looked for and also a decrease in the amount of wheat on ocean passage. Another influence was talk that upturns were to be expected in view of the decline in the price of May delivery during the week.

After opening mixed wheat showed fractional net gains on both May and July and then the market sold under previous close. Rain was reported in the Northwest. Liverpool closed 1⅛d to ⅛d lower. Winnipeg was unchanged early.

May wheat opened at $1.61, July wheat $1.40, May corn 72¾c, July corn 76½c.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 478 cars of wheat, compared with 1132 a week ago and 557 last year. Minneapolis receiving 154 cars, Duluth 84 and Winnipeg 240.

Local wheat receipts, which were 51,800 bushels, compared with 67,200 a week ago and 48,100 last year, included 25 cars local and 12 through. Corn receipts, which were 107,800 bushels, compared with 74,200 a week ago and 30,800 last year, included 62 cars local and 15 through. Oats receipts, which were 116,000 bushels, compared with 82,000 a week ago and 94,000 last year, included 23 cars local and 35 through. Hay receipts were 26 car local and 4 through.

UNCHANGED TO LOWER CLOSE IN WHEAT TRADE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 24.—The wheat market kept the trade in suspense up to the close today. There were times of extreme strength and were equally as weak spots during the short session. The close was unchanged to ½c lower and for the week 1⅛c to 6½ lower. New May $1.62⅝ to $1.62¾c, old $1.60½, July $1.42 to $1.41½, September $1.35¼.

Most of the trade was local. The Northwest sold early on light but general rains over the three states and there was support from some bull leaders on the break. Liquidation in May continued. Rains over Canada were not as general as expected, but there was enough to make Winnipeg weak and this depressed the local market. Southwest crop conditions are excellent and a Fort Worth (Tex.) message said the harvest would start in that vicinity between May 12 and 17. Cash wheat in the local market was weak, with winter wheat premiums ⅛ cto 1c lower. Southwest mills reported good domestic flour sales for June and July shipment. The seaboard said that an Italian order for approximately 920,000 bushels of wheat would be placed Monday. Minneapolis sold 10,000 bu No. 3 Northern to come to Chicago at 8c under new May.

Corn was weak. Commission house selling featured the opening while buying was light. Closing prices were ⅛c to ⅝c lower, and for the week 1¼c to 1⅝c lower. May 73c to 73⅛c, July 77⅝c to 77¼c, September 80⅛c. The trade are looking for an increased movement of corn within the next 30 days and this is checking buying. Cash corn was weak. Shipping sales were only 44,000 bu.

Oats were easier with corn and closing prices were ⅛c to ⅜c lower, and for the week 1⅛c to 1⅝c off. May 41c to 41⅛c, July 42c, September 42⅝c. Shipping demand continues good and sales of 101,000 bu were reported.

Provisions were strong. Lard closed 12½c to 15c higher. Ribs, 27½c higher. Bellies, 7c to 10c higher.

MONEY RATES GO DOWN AND STOCKS RISE

Lowering of Rediscount Basis by New York Reserve Bank Event of Week — Bonds Turn Strong and Active.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 24—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"A drop to 3 per cent in the rate on call money, adoption of a 3½ per cent rate for rediscounts by the Federal Reserve Bank at New York, a smart run-up in stock prices, the appearance of an unusual demand for investment bonds, progress toward settlement of the French debt and actual agreement on the Italian matter and a broader understanding of the general position of industry were the leading news items of the week to the financial district. It would scarcely be accurate to measure the improvement in sentiment by the degree of rise registered on the stock tables where good rallies in the present instance have been stimulated by strictly technical forces in many cases, but the fact cannot be overlooked that the developments of the week have stimulated a new confidence in affairs. That all doubts on the future trend in business have been wiped away nobody would contend, but fears are giving way to a belief that the recent moderation in business activity may not indicate anything more than an adjustment that can be made without endangering the fundamental position of industry.

Decline in Money.

"No event of the week has attracted so much attention as the continued and pronounced decline in the price of money since both the cause and effect of cheap money have significance to those that are endeavoring to interpret general trends. A drop in the call rate to 3 per cent for the first time in more than a year aroused comment but far more reliable as an index of the downward trend was the change in the market for time money. Prime bankers' acceptances fell to 3⅜ to 3¼, which reflects a position of greater ease than any since August, 1924, and time money was in supply at 4 per cent. As so often is the case, the position of ease in the money market was not fully appreciated until the Federal Reserve Bank this week restored its rediscount rate to the 3½ per cent level where, prior to last Jan. 7, it had stood since February, 1925. So long as the bank would have been obliged soon to adjust its rate to the new market conditions, it is just possible that the authorities may have felt that more general benefits would follow action at this time than a move in the same direction later in the spring.

Effect of Reserve Rate Change.

"At any rate it must be admitted that the drastic recession in the stock market had begun to affect business sentiment, although commentators generally agreed that the decline started as a corrective of a condition that had passed and not anticipation of a depression in trade. It was a good thing to check the speculative excesses of the stock barket, but unfortunate that some persons began to lose confidence in business. The unexpected action of the Federal Reserve Bank at New York gave the market its most active session since March but there was this difference that prices then were falling violently, whereas this week they rose impressively, but if all that the change in rates does is to force the shorts to cover it will be surprising. We would be no better off than before were we to use our cheap money simply to force stock prices up again to levels not justified by conditions. Our situation would be greatly improved, on the other hand, through a stabilization of trade activities where business has been dull and through a restoration of confidence in industry such as the appearance of easy money may help to bring.

Rise in Bonds.

"By no group was the news of the week followed more cheerfully than by the bond houses, for in the growing supply of money seeking investment and the movements toward debt settlement the experts in that field found good grounds for the expectation that bonds may improve in position as time goes on. New high prices for the year and for several years were recorded by numerous issues on the corporation and Government lists and trading became more active than it had been at any time heretofore this year. Distributing houses have fairly well cleaned off their shelves and find it impossible to satisfy the demand for good bonds that springs alike from large and small investors. One of the most constructive happenings of the week was the Italian debt settlement for it immediately opened negotiations that may lead to an agreement on the French debt and to a clarification of the whole European debt matter. It is still doubtful, however, whether the volume of foreign offerings on this market will be so large this year as had been generally expected."

Advances at Week-end.

"An expansion of speculative operations for the rise with a general forward movement in leading favorites featured rather active trading on the stock market today. Transactions in the two-hour session exceeded 800,000 shares, something more than double last Saturday's quiet market. The sudden broadening of activity has unsettled market opinion in commission house circles and views are divergent on the prospects for the immediate market trend. Bonds continued in demand and prices remained around the best levels of the week in active dealings.

General Rise Continues.

"The general advance in security prices continued with undiminished vigor in all parts of the list. Evidence of substantial banking support was provided in recording of several large transactions. Although sentiment was decidedly more cheerful and talk was revived of resumption of the bull market, trading indicated professionals were moving more cautiously than formerly and that public participation had not yet become an important factor again. The old bull market leaders, General Electric and General Motors, were particularly active at substantially higher levels. The first named jumped about 15 points above the price reached after announcement of the splitup yesterday, while General Motors was more than 10 points above the week's low. Other leading industrials were in good demand, although gains were largely confined to fractions or held within a point or so.

Bank Rate and Sterling Advancing.

"An advance of a fraction in rates on London today reflected the prospect of the shipment of funds to London as a result of the lowering of the rediscount rate at the Federal Reserve Bank here to 3½ per cent. If the Bank of England continues to maintain its higher rate, the movement of balances toward London and the strengthening of sterling rates will continue. French francs eased off a trifle, while Belgian rates rallied. Guilders responded to the lowering of the rediscount rate with a rise of 3 points. Business was in small volume, however, and the full effect of the change probably was not reflected.

Clearing House Statement.

"An explanation of the unusual ease in money rates in the past week was afforded in the statement of the Clearing House banks, which revealed a deficit in reserves of $7,532,850 as a result of a decrease in surplus of $21,797,530. Loans, discounts, etc., increased $95,057,000. Inasmuch as the New York Reserve Bank rate is now below those of the other 11 central banks of the system, there will be a tendency to restrict the flow of funds to this center and would not be surprising if rates stiffened somewhat in the coming week in the readjustment to the Clearing House situation.

NORMAL TRADING IN BOND MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—After yesterday's record-breaking activity, the bond market today returned to normal trading conditions with scattered profit-taking holding the upward movement in check. The exceptional ease of money conditions, however, gave an under current of strength to trading.

The failure of the New York Legislature to pass the measure legalizing high-grade public utility bonds for savings bank investment left dealers heavily supplied with these issues. Many of them were turned back on the open market today at slight price recessions. This development probably will not affect the general course of bond prices, since the funds which had been destined for investment in utilities will be diverted into other "legal" obligations.

French bonds continued to hold the leadership of foreign division, with buying inspired by the hope that the latest French debt offer would be accepted.

International Mercantile Marine 6s led all corporation bonds in activity today, advancing a point to a new high record at 92. The movement was based on indications that negotiations for the White Star Line, a subsidiary, were nearing completion. Other strong features included International Telephone 5½s, Warner Sugar 7s, Grand Trunk Railway 7s and Mobile & Birmingham 4s, but net gains elsewhere were mainly fractional.

A $6,000,000 issue of Rock Island Railroad 2-year 4½ per cent notes will be sold next week, the proceeds to be applied to retirement of a $7,000,000 5½ per cent issue.

LATE WEEK ADVANCES ON THE CURB MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—The market on the curb exchange displayed a more settled tone after the opening proceedings, during which there were a number of brisk advances ranging from one to three or more points. The early gains were not maintained in the general list but the reactions were orderly and offerings thereafter were well absorbed. Victor Talking machine attracted attention at the start, selling up 3⅜ points, while moderate improvement was recorded elsewhere in that group.

Public Utility issues were in demand, the features being a further rise of 1⅛ points in Southeast Power and a jump of 2⅛ points in American Light. Electric Bond and Share and Electric Investors were higher. Glen Alden sold off a fraction while strength appeared in Lehigh Valley Coal certificates.

Oil shares were inclined to be easier in the early dealings but quotations generally held within a fraction of the level reached on Friday's sharp advance. Humble Oil issues were in supply for a time, selling off 2 points to 64½, but recovered most of that decline at the close.

The market emerged from a condition of decreased trading and irregular movements during the middle of the week when there was a development of strength and in the next two days many issues moved up with the same vigor that had been shown prior to the acute collapse early in March. In the first few days, however, many stocks made new low records for the year but the offerings were easily absorbed and when demand increased and became more vigorous the supply was so small as to restrict until materially higher levels were established.

The excessive supply of money was reflected in heavy trading in the bond market, the sales Friday amounting to over $21,000,000. Detroit Edison ranged from 124¾ to 131. Baltimore and Ohio 5s, in which about $1,000,000 was traded in during the week, was one of the prominent features. Foreign bonds also were active and higher, many of them making gains of a point or more.

Boston Wool Market.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, April 24.—The wool markets closed the week with a slight increase in activity, although business was on the while unsatisfactory. Mills are in the market for wool, but only at reduced prices. One mill has just offered 43c for a lot of delaines which were being held for 45c. Some business is being done in three-eighths blood territory wool at 90c, clean basis, and in Australian 64-70s at $1. Buying of new clips has slackened, as growers have advanced prices 2 to 3 cents.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—A marked change for the better in business and speculative sentiment followed announcement this week of a reduction in the New York Federal Reserve Bank rediscount rate from 4 to 3½ per cent. The average of 20 leading industrial shares showed a net gain of about 6 points on the week and the average of 20 leading railroad shares advanced nearly 4 points. Trading in both the stock and bond markets showed an appreciable increase in volume, total bond sales on Friday being the second largest on record.

A sweeping reduction in money rates accompanied the drop in the bank rate. This was followed by the heavy transfer of funds to London, where higher interest rates are available, accounting for the strengthening of sterling exchange as the week closed. The premium on the Canadian dollar, however, resulted in a heavy movement of gold to Canada. Japanese exchange sold at its highest levels in three years in anticipation of an early return to the gold standard, but the silver exchanges were heavy in sympathy with the lower price for the white metal.

Wheat futures dropped 2½ to nearly 6c a bushel below the prices prevailing at the close of last week, but the other principal commodities held relatively steady. Cotton fluctuated within a rather narrow range, closing slightly higher on the week. The coffee and sugar markets also pointed upward.

EXCHANGES TO OPERATE UNDER DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME BEGINNING MONDAY

THE leading exchanges of the country will begin operating on daylight saving time Monday, opening one hour earlier, St. Louis standard time, than heretofore. Trading on the New York Stock Exchange will start at 8 a. m., St. Louis time.

The St. Louis Merchants' Exchange will push the hands of its official clock ahead one hour in order that the session period may continue to correspond to that of the Chicago Board of Trade.

Some of the other local markets will adopt partial if not full daylight saving time.

Foreign Exchange

(By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.)

NEW YORK, April 24.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

"Important developments marked the week especially in the leading continental exchanges that have been called on to provide financing in connection with the debts due to this country as a result of financial assistance in the World War. Statements early in the week by the French Premier that a reasonable plan would be submitted to this country were without improving influence on the French exchange market, checks on Paris then falling to the new low of 3.29½. But steadiness developed after that movement and the announcement yesterday of proposed terms and conditions after a little hesitation in the morning caused a development of strength in the afternoon, when French rates made a moderate advance on largely increased trading.

"Exchange on Belgium, which has adjusted its war debt on satisfactory terms and which until a short time ago had maintained a strong exchange position, was heavy all through the week, declining steadily each day and selling at 3.53 yesterday, the lowest price reached since March 8, 1924, when the Belgian check closed at 3.18. It was acutely unsettled by the drive against French exchange that day.

"Japanese exchange was stronger all through the week, yen cables making a new high for recent trading on an advance of a cent for the week to 47.50. This movement resulted from heavy buying for Far East account, including large purchases for China, which occurred coincident with heavy offerings of Chinese exchange and by a decline in the price of silver to a new low for recent years. Exchange on Hongkong yielded more than a cent to below 50 and Shanghai exchange fell the same amount, selling below 70.

"South American exchanges were well maintained, Argentine being directly influenced by the new financing arrangement, the paper peso moving up a cent to 40.68. Brazil and Uruguay both made substantial advances. Cuban exchange was unchanged at one-sixteenth discount. Sterling showed weakness for a time, when cables sold slightly below $4.86, but became strong when money was in excessive supply here in the last half of the week, creating an impression that banking interests might find it necessary to transmit funds to London.

"An advance of a fraction in rates on London today reflected the prospect of the shipment of funds to London as a result of the lowering of the rediscount rate at the Federal Reserve Bank here to 3½ per cent. If the Bank of England continues to maintain its higher rate, the movement of balances toward London and the strengthening of sterling rates will continue. French francs eased off a trifle, while Belgian rates rallied. Guilders responded to the lowering of the rediscount rate with a rise of 3 points. Business was in small volume, however, and the full effect of the change probably was not reflected.

LONDON'S FINANCIAL REVIEW OF WEEK

Special Wireless to Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, April 24.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in his financial review today says:

"Uncertainties, such as the coal situation and the status of the budget, obscure the outlook conditions here.

"Optimism on the stock exchange must not be overestimated, because it partly reflects the reaction from the prolonged caution and pessimism of the last three months. Moreover, it is unjustified.

"The disposition in some quarters is to regard the coal crisis as a mere dispute between capital and labor, whereas the problem affects the whole economic welfare of Great Britain.

"Extraordinary as it may sound to American ears, the difficulty here is to inspire a full measure of industry and efficiency on the part of many workers no matter what pecuniary reward is offered.

"Unquestionably the Government by its failure drastically to economize national expenditures fails to give the requisite stimulus, for if the Governments are extravagant in social expenditures, workers can scarcely be expected to recognize the realities of the British economic situation.

"The King's speech opening the last session of Parliament said: 'The present heavy burdens of the taxpayers are a hindrance to the revival of trade and employment. Economy in that sphere is imperative if we are to regain our industrial and commercial supremacy.'

"National expenditure, however, since has actually increased and there are no signs of curtailment.

"It is not believed that the budget is likely to contain many surprises, and unless the coal problem is settled, Churchill will probably decide to carry a huge balance forward to meet eventualities.

"With a satisfactory settlement of the coal crisis, however, a probable early improvement both in trade and in stocks will take place.

"I find it interesting to look far ahead because a general tendency exists to reckon confidently upon ultimate extreme ease in the money market in America. I am not prepared either to indorse or negative the idea, but the ground for the argument is that America's overwhelmingly favorable trade balance and her constant loans abroad must within the next decade produce such an annual income from foreign investments plus the European Government debt service payments that it will overwhelm America's money market resources, even after all owing for America's exceptional opportunities for investment in its own enterprises.

"Hence it is believed that the United States may ultimately experience a prolonged period of phenomenal ease in money, and some consider the present rise of American gilt-edged bonds represents the dawning of the perception of that possibility.

"All this, of course, applies to an extreme far view but is much discussed in bank parlors here.

"Rumors that join stock banks here are buying up African gold arrivals for inner reserves are exaggerated. One or more banks bought small amounts, which were not regarded as important."

SISLER'S MEN TRAIL FROM FIRST INNING

Chicago Sluggers Score Almost at Will—Sisler, McManus and Schang Drive Ball Over Fence.

By J. Roy Stockton.

George Sisler's pitchers could not stop the battering attack of the hard-hitting Chicago White Sox yesterday afternoon and the men of Eddie Collins squared the series by taking the fourth and final game, 7 to 4. Vangilder and Jonnard were slammed all over the windy ball yard by the lads from the land of wind and considerable slugging on the part of the Brownies, therefore, was wasted.

Sisler, McManus and Schang hit home runs, but the St. Louis team could not concentrate its attack. It was a game of extra base hits, the Sox getting a home run, two triples and a double.

Alphonse Thomas, the expensive right-handed pitcher obtained by the Sox from Baltimore, started the game for Collins but had to retire shortly after being smashed on the foot by a line drive from the bat of Harry Rice. He weakened after the accident but Joe Jim Edwards, rangy left-hander, who formerly twirled for the Cleveland Indians, finished the game in great style and had the Brownies eating out of his hand during the late innings.

Vangilder Pummeled.

Vangilder started for the Browns and was given an old-fashioned trouncing. He struck out the first batter but Harris, second batter, socked a home run into the right field pavilion. The Sox never relinquished that lead and whenever the Browns would score or threaten to score, the Chicago bludgeons went into action and bombarded the fences.

Thanks to his defense, Vangilder escaped further damage in the second and third but in the fourth he was plastered. Collins opened with a single to right and after Sheely had flied to Williams and Falk had forced Collins, Kamm crashed a triple to center, scoring Falk. Crouse quickly singled to center and Kamm crossed the plate.

Thomas turned back the Browns without trouble in the first and second, Rice's single starting the first frame being the only hit off the former Oriole. With two down in the third, Rice again went to bat. He connected solidly with one of Thomas' fast ones and the ball went straight at Thomas's foot. It hit the side of his foot, bounced into the air and carried all the way to Sheely, standing near first base.

Joe Bush Loses To Athletics, 4-1

Old Jack Quinn, Supported by Tight Defense, Beats Senators.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—Philadelphia won the fourth game of the series here today, 4 runs to 1, splitting even with the Senators.

Jack Quinn yielded 10 hits, but tight support by the Athletic's infield held the run total to one tally, a circuit smash by Goose Goslin in the fourth.

Joe Bush was stingy with hits, but his six passes were costly.

CARLARIS, HOT FAVORITE, IS OUT OF DERBY

Trainer Announces Withdrawal of Colt From Kentucky Classic Because of Foot Injury.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 24.—Carlaris, W. T. "Fatty" Anderson's "wonder colt," was definitely declared out of the Derby by P. E. Kraft, his conditioner, today. Kraft reached his decision after an examination of the colt's injured leg had been made by Dr. Henry C. Harthill, veterinarian.

Whether the great colt would start in the fifty-second renewal of the $50,000 added classic at Churchill Downs has been the all-absorbing question among horsemen and racing devotees since his arrival from Tijuana Thursday, April 15. Rumors have been persistent that the redoubtable son of Phalaris had failed to respond to treatment, but it was not until yesterday that Kraft had announced that the condition had become alarming.

Thursday night Kraft wired Mr. Anderson of the seriousness of the injury and in return received a reply advising him to use his own judgment as to whether the colt should be thrown out of training.

The withdrawal of Carlaris comes as a stunning blow to his many followers. In view of his past record many turfmen were inclined to believe that the race would prove only a "spread" for the Anderson dependent.

Injury Was Self-Inflicted.

Carlaris' injury dates back to the day prior to his leaving Tijuana, where he captured the Derby and the rich Coffroth Handicap. On the eve of his departure for the East the colt kicked himself on his right hind leg while in his stall. Still little note of the incident was taken until the colt reached Douglass Park. At that time the foot became infected and Dr. Harthill was called in. Every known treatment was employed on the injury, but it failed to heal as rapidly as had been anticipated.

Today Dr. Harthill announced that it would be at least a fortnight before the colt would be in condition to withstand preparation for the races.

In declaring Carlaris out of the big race, Kraft said that although such action shatters his fondest hopes, he could see no other way "out of it."

"I do not intend to take any chance on ruining the career of such a great racer. To attempt to prepare him for the Derby might result in his permanent retirement. That, indeed, would be a calamity."

Carlaris first came into prominence when he won the Tiajuana Derby. Later he captured the Coffroth Handicap trial and came on to win the Coffroth, the richest race on the American turf, beating such good older horses as Princess Doreen with consummate ease.

The colt's total winnings for the winter season were well above $100,000 after his conquest in the Coffroth Carlaris immediately became an equal winner favorite with Pompey for the Kentucky Derby.

Bookies, who hitherto had quoted him at 20 to 1 and even better, lost no time in slicing his odds

HORNSBY GETS HOME RUN; RHEM TURNS IN HIS THIRD PITCHING VICTORY OF YEAR

Blades and Mueller Star at Bat, Along With Their Boss—Kremer Batted for Four Scores in First Inning—Pirates Make Only Four Safeties.

By Herman Wecke.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 24.—"If we ever hit our regular batting stride some good pitcher is going to suffer," remarked Manager Hornsby between showers prior to the start of the final game with the world's champion Pirates yesterday. And then the game started.

The Cardinals did return to their swatting stride and it was a good pitcher who suffered. The hurler clubbed unmercifully was Ray Kremer, right hander and one of the stars of the Pittsburg staff.

Kremer toiled in only one round. But that was long enough for the Cardinals to put over four runs, the result of four solid base hits.

But the hitting was continued. It did not end there and when the final details were complete, it was shown that Hornsby's men had made 13 hits and added a 9 to 3 triumph to their string. It gave them the edge on the series with the Corsairs, two games to one. It was St. Louis' seventh victory of the year and the fifth in seven times with the champions of the universe this year.

Rhem's Third Victory.

On top of the return of the Cardinals' batting punch there was the pitching of Charles Flint Rhem to shout over. Rhem went to his third straight victory and it was his best pitching contest of the season. He held the Pirates to four safeties. Up to the ninth, the Pirates had only two safeties, these being bunched in the fourth.

However, in the final frame, working behind an eight-run lead, the righthander let up a bit and the Corsairs made two additional safeties.

In addition, Rhem was quite a slugger himself, getting three singles in four trips to the plate. All were solid smashes to right field.

For a time it looked as if there would be no game. It rained and it rained hard an hour before the game, but the Pirate management decided to play in spite of the crippled condition of the team. The Cardinals did not care. They would much rather face the Corsairs in their present condition than when all the Athletes are in top condition. In spite of the threatening weather a crowd of some 12,000 turned out to witness the attraction.

The victory meant much to the Cardinals. It meant that if the team can break even in Cincinnati and Chicago the first road trip will finish with better than a .500 per cent; also the men of Hornsby will return home three contests above the fifty-fifty notch for the season.

The Batting Punch.

Hornsby's men exhibited a real punch in the first. Blades opened with a single and was sacrificed to second by Mueller. Hornsby drew a pass and then Bottomley sent in his two mates with a double against the left field fence. Jim was picked off third on Hafey's smash to Kremer. Bell, however, singled past Traynor and then O'Farrell bumped that faraway left field wall for two sacks and the Cardinals' total for the round was raised to four. It was as good a punch as the St. Louis club has exhibited in any single round this year.

Another marker was added to the St. Louis total against Sheehan in the second on hits by Rhem, Blades and Hornsby. All were ace hits.

The Cardinals picked up another marker in the fourth when Rhem singled, Blades was hit, Mueller singled and Hornsby pounded out a sacrifice fly.

In the Pittsburg portion, the Corsairs got one marker when, with one out, Cuyler doubled to right and went to third on Barnhart's hoist to Mueller. He remained on that sack when Bell threw wild on Traynor's easy roller, but ambled home on Rhyne's base hit.

Mueller was hit by a pitched ball with two out in the sixth and rode home on Hornsby's left field double.

Rough on Babe Adams.

The 45-year-old Babe Adams pitched the ninth for Pittsburg. He

Locke, Nebraska, Sets 100-Yard Dash Record

Remarkable Performance of 9½ Seconds May Not Stand Because of High Wind—Hoff Vaults 13 Feet 9¼ Inches at Drake Relay Carnival.

By the Associated Press.

DRAKE STADIUM, DES MOINES, Ia., April 24. The world's record for the 100-yard dash, withstanding attacks for 20 years, was smashed in the Drake relay carnival here today, and Charley Hoff set a new American record for the pole vault, but failed to clear the bar at 14 feet for a new world's record, after making three attempts.

Hoff cleared the bar at 13 feet 9¼ inches, official measurements, beating the former record of 13 feet 5¼ inches, set by Lee Barnes of the University of California.

Roland Locke of the University of Nebraska, rated as America's fastest intercollegiate sprinter, stepped the century in :09½, but the mark probably will not be allowed as Locke was favored by a strong wind blowing at his back. The record of :09.6 was made by D. F. Kelly in 1906. Locke tied the record a week ago at the Kansas relays.

The events were run off under poor weather conditions. A drizzling rain and strong winds that reached the proportions of a gale caused 12,000 rain-soaked spectators to shiver in the blasts that swept Drake Memorial stadium.

Locke's achievement was outstanding in a day of brilliant performances. A new American record in the pole vault, three new records for the Drake carnival, two of which were established by the same athlete, and another carnival record tied, summarizes the outstanding athletic achievements.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., April 24.—George Nelson, Baltimore left-hander, is the new Y. M. C. A. singles handball champion and Al Schaufelberger and H. Dworman, Detroit, retain their title as the doubles champions.

Nelson won his championship here today by defeating Joe Goudreau, Cleveland star, 15—21, 21—3, 21—8, in the finals of the Y tournament. He was unable to solve Goudreau's service in the first game, but thereafter had no trouble.

Schaufelberger and Dworman defended their title against Lloyd Walker and George Donoghue, Toledo, in the finals by scores of 21—19, 21—8.

NEW BASEBALL LEAGUE PROPOSED IN ILLINOIS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., April 24.—A baseball league, under the auspices of the Modern Woodmen, is proposed for the 1926 season. Details of the proposition have not been worked out. Eight towns would be represented in the league and the prospects at this time are bright for final organization. The towns which are expected to form the league are Mount Vernon, Ina, Ashley, Nashville, Centralia, Salem, Fairfield and Alma.

OMAHA GIRL SETS SWIMMING RECORD

OMAHA, Neb., April 24.—Corinne Condon, 17-year-old Omaha swimmer, set a new national A. A. U. record for the 100-yard backstroke swim tonight of one minute, 18 and 7-10 seconds. The old mark was one minute, 21 4-10 held by E. Hertle, of the New York women's swimming association. Elizabeth Busby, Atlantic City, N. J. and Dorothy C. Forty Thousand Spectators at Philadelphia Field Event Which Lacks Brilliance of Other Years—Campbell's Running Is Sensation in Thrilling Finish of Two Mile Relay.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—The decisive defeat of Frank Hussey of Boston College, national 100-yard champion, coupled with the creation of two new carnival relay records, stood out today in performances which brought the two-day Penn Relay Carnival to a close which was exciting but lacking for the most part the brilliance which has characterized the meet in recent years.

Close to 40,000 spectators at Franklin Field saw Hussey sustain one of the worst defeats of his career, starting badly and finishing only fourth in the final of the 100-yard dash special, which was won by Hester, Michigan star, in 10 1-10 seconds.

Yale's team set a new carnival mark of 1:27 4-5 in capturing the half-mile college relay championship while Brooklyn Manual High School of Brooklyn accounted for the day's remaining record with a new carnival standard of 3:29 in the class B high school one mile championship.

Prep School Record Set.

All told the two-day struggle among 3000 athletes representing 500 institutions, produced one new world's mark, a quarter mile interscholastic record set by Mercersburg Academy, and 11 carnival record performances. It was the first carnival since the war which has failed to bring out at least one world's record feat among the college runners.

Conclusion of the major college relays found Penn State and Columbia monopolizing honors which in the past few years have gone chiefly to Georgetown and Boston College. Penn State hung up two victories today by defeating Pennsylvania in the 480-yard shuttle hurdle race, a new event on the program, then bringing the day to a climax with a sensational victory over Boston College in the four-mile contest.

Georgetown won the one-mile college championship after a spectacular race with Yale and Holy Cross. Ascher, running third, put Georgetown in the lead by ten yards with a quarter in 49 1-5 seconds, and Burgess, anchor man, withstood a challenge by Norton of Yale to win by three yards, with Mulvihill finishing third for Holy Cross.

Occidental College made a runaway of the one-mile class "B" College championship relay, leading all the way and winning by 60 yards from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The final of the 100-yard dash produced a sensational upset in the defeat of Frank Hussey of Boston College, the National champion. Hester of Michigan, off to a whirlwind start, led all the way and won by four yards in 10 1-10 seconds, with another outsider, D'Aiuto of West Virginia second, Charles of Colgate third and Hussey fourth. Hussey got off slowly, seeming to be almost left at the post.

Columbia, due mainly to the heroic anchor running of her crack half-miler, Joe Campbell, also gained two of the big prizes, taking the two-mile classic today for the first time since 1907 to add to her triumph in the sprint medley yesterday. It was Campbell who came from behind yesterday to pull victory out of the fire and today, facing a 20-yard deficit as he took the baton for the last leg of the two-mile event, he finished in whirlwind style to overtake his Boston College rival, Dailey, and win by six yards.

Another Boston Setback.

This narrow setback for Boston College was the second that institution's runners sustained during the afternoon. In the four-mile relay, the Boston quartet threatened all the way only to lose out in the stretch by a ten-yard margin when Stewart of Penn State uncorked a victorious closing sprint.

Columbia's two-mile triumph shared thrills with the one-mile championship victory of Georgetown's quartet, which succeded in a final bid for title glory. Holy Cross, the indoor champions, and Yale furnished the chief opposition in the mile, but Ascher, running third for Georgetown, dashed into a ten-yard lead which his teammate, Burgess, turned into victory in spite of a strong closing bid by Norton of Yale, who beat out Mulvihill of Holy Cross for second place. Dropped batons put Syracuse and [illegible] out of this race, while Cornell and Princeton faded out under the pace.

Yale's Record Performance.

Yale's record performance in the half-mile relay, in which the Elis clipped two-fifths of a second off Penn's mark of last year, was made possible mainly through the sensational pace forced by Cornell in the heat which brought these two rivals together. So fast was this heat that Cornell finished second in the final placing, ahead of Dartmouth and Columbia, winners of two previous heats. Time was the deciding factor as a result of the race being run in sections.

The battle for intersectional honors found Middle and Far Western stars figuring conspicuously in the special individual events although their only relay triumph was scored by Occidental College of Los Angeles, victor in the one-mile Class B championship.

Besides Hester's 100-yard dash victory, Richerson of Missouri captured the shotput.

Burg of Chicago annexed high jump honors and Harrington of Notre Dame tied Beadley of Princeton in the pole vault.

In the other specials, Bates of Penn State won the broad jump, Leyden of Maine the javelin throw and Baker of Swarthmore the discus throw.

LOCKE SETS NEW WORLD RECORD FOR 100-YARD DASH to clear the bar at 14 feet in an effort to break his own world's outdoor record of 13 feet 13-16 inches. Hoff actually did clear the bar at 14 feet with apparently a few to spare, causing an outburst of cheering. But when the height was officially measured there was a sag of 2¾ inches in the cross bar.

The black-haired Norwegian, determined to set a new record, made three other attempts, but his body touched the bar each time, causing it to crash to the ground on top of him.

Stiff Wind at Locke's Back.

There was a stiff wind blowing directly on Locke's back, which, according to officials, aided him in his record-breaking flight. Henry Schulte, the Nebraska track coach, characterized Locke's running as a "very notable performance," but gave no indication that he would press claims for a record, although all of the timers agreed upon Locke's time.

The former world's record of :09 6-10, first set by D. F. Kelly, in 1906, was tied by Howard Drew, the Negro sprinter, in 1914, then by Charlie Paddock in 1921, Coaffee in 1922 and by Locke himself in the Kansas relays a week ago. In his trials during the training season Locke has been caught in :09 5-10 half a dozen times. Over the rain-soaked course ankle-deep in mud yesterday Locke reeled off the 100 yards in 10 seconds flat without even removing his sweat shirt.

John Kuck, of the Kansas State Teachers' College, Emporia, Kan., smashed two of the three Drake carnival records and by winning second place in another event, carried off the individual honors. Kuck, aided by the wind, set a new record of 207 feet, 7 inches in the javelin throw, beating the former record of 203 feet, 9¼ inches, hung up by Milton Angier, of Illinois, in 1922. The Kansas athlete surpassed the old Drake record in the shotput by hurling the weight 48 feet, 5½ inches. The former record was established by Herbert Schwarze, of the University of Wisconsin in 1925. Schwarze's mark was 47 feet, 9¼ inches.

Discus Record Shattered.

Capt. Bud Houser of the University of Southern California, shattered the Drake record in the discus with a heave of 147 feet 7 inches. Another Californian, Leighton Dye, American intercollegiate champion hurdler, tied the Drake record for the 120-yard high hurdle by stepping the barrier in :14 8-10, tying the mark established by Bob Simpson of Missouri in 1917. Dye beat George Guthrie of Ohio State, to the tape in a close finish. Chick Werner of Illinois, who, with Guthrie, was regarded as Dye's closest competitor, fell on the sixth hurdle and failed to place.

The University of Illinois relay quartet captured two events and finished second in one other of the five university relays. The Illini runners won the 440-yard relay, beating out Kansas, holder of the national record in :43 2-10, and also took the measure of the Jayhawkers in the 880-yard event. The greatest relay of the day went to the Oregon Aggies, who captured the four-mile event by inches from Illinois. Clayton, the last Oregon runner, nipped White of Illinois at the tape in a thrilling finish.

100-YARD DASH—Won by Locke, Nebraska; Pepper, Indiana, second; Gruenhagen, Minnesota third; Snider, Alabama Poly, fourth. Time—:09 5-10. New world's record; former record of :09 6-10 made by D. F. Kelly in 1906.

CARDINALS DEFEAT PITTSBURG, 9 TO 3

was greeted with cheers. Then Mueller greeted him with a triple and Hornsby smashed one to the flag pole for his first four-bagger of the year.

Carey's single, a pass to Cuyler, Traynor's hit and a sacrifice fly by Rhyne gave the Pirates two runs in the final frame. But they did not help any.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 24.—The Cardinals departed for Cincinnati tonight. They will open a series with the Reds tomorrow. It will be the first meeting between the two clubs this season. Bill Sherdel, the little left-hander, is due to open against Jack Hendricks' crew.

When the game started there was a pool of water behind all the infielders today. This was the result of taking the tarpaulin off the inner works. The water slowed the outfield considerably.

Glenn Wright, who had been playing with a badly damaged hand, was finally forced out of the running. That barehand stop he made off Bottomley yesterday forced him to remain on the bench. This gives Hal Rhyne, the Coast League recruit, a chance to play.

Rogers Hornsby was in the game up to his neck. In the first he took Carey's slow roller and tossed out the Pirate captain; then he came back in the second with a fine stop and throw on Rhyne's tap past Rhem.

Hazen Cuyler skidded on his ear in the third after grabbing a low liner off O'Farrell's bat.

When Cuyler smashed a double down the right field line in the fourth, it was the first Pittsburg hit.

There was one for the book in the Cardinals' second, when Hornsby was at bat. Rogers sent up a high foul but the wind, which was blowing hard, got hold of the ball and blew it to fair territory, with no one touching the sphere. Umpire Moran ruled it was foul and then Hornsby went back and rapped out a double.

In the sixth, when Barnhart struck out O'Farrell's snap throw to Bottomley doubled Cuyler off first.

Pompey Favorite At 4 to 1 to Win Kentucky Derby

ST. LOUIS turf speculators were forced to readjust their booking on the Derby last night following the announcement from Louisville that Carlaris had been withdrawn through injury.

One of the local "big stores" last night installed Pompey the new favorite at 4 to 1 choice, with Bubbling Over, the Bradley Stable's ace, at 5 to 1. Both horses were very heavily played at this figure. The Idle Hour Farm Stable was reported to be betting heavily on Bubbling Over in St. Louis turf exchanges.

Local bookmakers profited heavily by the withdrawal of Carlaris, this horse having been backed down more than 25 points to 4 to 1.

New Derby prices quoted here last night were: Canter, 8 to 1, and well played; Bagenbaggage, 10 to 1; Timmara, Barcola and Flight of Time, 15 to 1; Rhinock, Chance Play, Rock Man and Dress Parade, 20 to 1. to 6 to 1 recently his price dropped as low as 4 to 1.

Sore in spirit will be the thousonds of bettors throughout the country who risked their money on Calaris at prices varying from 40 down to 4 to 1 under the "play or pay" conditions.

Under "play or pay" conditions if his pick fails to go to the post the bettor loses his money just the same. It is estimated that several hundred thousand dollars have been risked on Calaris' chances, "play o pay."

THREE CANADIAN FIRSTS FOR WRESTLING TEAM OF OKLAHOMA A. AND M.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

STILLWATER, Ok., April 24.—Three Canadian championships and one second place title were won by three Oklahoma A. and M. College wrestlers, who took part in the Canadian National Tournament at New Westminster, British Columbia, this week-end. The trio of Aggie grapplers crossed the border, after competing in the 1926 United States National amateur tournament at Corvallis, Ore., last week-end.

Orion Stuteville won two crowns in the Canadian meet, those in the 174-pound and 191-pound classes; Fendley Collins won the championship in the 185-pound class and Charles W. Strack placed second in the heavyweight division, according to a telegram received by Coach E. C. Gallagher in Stillwater Saturday from Strack. Strack won the United States heavyweight title at Corvallis. At New Westminster he lost a close decision in the finals to McCready, 230-pound Canadian champion of 1925. An extension period was required.

Collins defeated Kaupennien of Canada by two straight falls in the final of the middleweight class matches. He had won over McLaughlin, former Canadian champion, in the semifinal event.

BIG MUNN'S BROTHER KNOCKS OUT OPPONENT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24. — Monte Munn, brother of the wrestler, Wayne "Big" Munn, and University of Nebraska graduate, made his pugilistic bow here tonight with a one-round knockout over Bill Josephs, a West Indian Negro. Munn, 215 pounds, took two jolts on the chin which almost sent him to the canvas, and replied with a solid smash to the face which floored his foe. The referee then stopped the bout.

Eddie O'Dowd, of Columbus, O., received a judges' decision over Benny Hall, Negro featherweight, of St. Louis, after 12 rounds.

Principia Leads in Triangular Battle to Be Concluded Tomorrow.

By DAVIDSON OBEAR.

Athletes from Principia Academy took the lead in the triangular track and field meet between Roosevelt High, Country Day School and Principia which opened yesterday afternoon on Taylor Field, the new Academy grounds in St. Louis County. Nine of the senior events were completed yesterday while the three remaining, the high jump, broad jump and pole vault, will be staged tomorrow afternoon at Roosevelt, starting at 4 p. m.

Upon the completion of the nine events yesterday, the point score stood: Principia 36, Roosevelt 21, Country Day 20. The 15-point advantage held by Principia may be needed in the three field events to be held tomorrow. While Principia with Joe Deal may capture first place in the pole vault the Academy is weak in the high jump and broad jump events.

Dead Heat in Hurdles.

The most interesting event on yesterday's program was the 120-yard high hurdles. Gerling of Roosevelt went over the last hurdle just ahead of Preston Richardson, the Principia star, but in the final sprint Richardson overtook his flying opponent and finished even with Gerling at the tape.

Principia took the lead when Robert Richardson captured the 100-yard dash event in 10 and 7-10 seconds. Richardson added another five points by easily winning the 220-yard dash, running the distance in the excellent time of 23 seconds flat.

In addition to winning first in the 100 and 220-yard dash events the Academy athletes took first in the 220-yard low hurdles, 440-yard dash and the 880-yard relay. Robert Richardson of Principia was the individual star of the meet with a total of 10 points.

Hall and Peterson of Roosevelt captured firsts for the southsiders in yesterday's meet. In the mile run Peterson took the lead and finished strong while Hall ran well in the 880-yard event despite the fact that he was hard pressed by the Country Day and Principia entrants.

John Putney of Country Day showed his superiority over the field in the 12-pound shot put event which he won with a distance of 39 feet, 3 inches. Ehrenfest added three points for Country Day in the 880-yard run finishing close behind Hall of Roosevelt in the race.

CHICAGO HIGH SCHOOL RELAY TEAM LOWERS 16-YEAR-OLD RECORD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DECATUR, Ill., April 24.—A national interscholastic record of 16 years' standing was broken in a field meet here today when the Tilden High School relay team of Chicago made up of Kist, Davis, Mahin and Patterson, completed the quarter mile in 45 2-10 seconds.

The winning team was pressed all the way by the Urbana quartet of Walker, Cullison, Coble and Hundley, which also broke the national mark. The old mark of 46 4-5 seconds was established June 11, 1910, by University High of Chicago.

Patterson of Tilden set meet records in winning both the 100 and 220-yard dashes to give his team second place and himself the same position in the scoring for the special events. His marks were 10 3-10 and 23.1.

Lead by Novotny, who tallied [illegible] points, the Benid team with [illegible] points, won first place among schools.

Two other relay marks were established, the Urbana team of Cullison, Coble, Coombe and Hundley did the mile in 3:35, while [illegible] field two-mile team of [illegible]meyer, Lawton, Taggart and [illegible]fenbarger made the distance in [illegible] minutes 14 3-10 seconds.

CENTRAL AN

LATE RALLIES RESPONSIBLE FOR VICTORIES

Roosevelt Scores 8 Runs Against Soldan in the Eighth; Beaumont Falters in the Seventh.

Although Cleveland did not play in the cold weather provided for yesterday afternoon's City High School League baseball doubleheader at Cleveland High Field, it officially leads the league, by virtue of Central defeating Beaumont, 8 to 7, and Roosevelt winning over Soldan, 12 to 6. With the exception of Cleveland, all the other schools have lost at least one contest.

Last-minute rallies featured both battles. Central, in the opening game, was two runs behind, coming in its half of the seventh, when with two down, three runs came across, due to the wildness of Slater, who passed three players. An opportune triple by Capt. MacIntosh sent in the tying and winning runs.

Roosevelt Holds 8-Run Rally.

Two were gone in the Roosevelt half of the sixth, when the fireworks started. Two passes, an error, two singles and four doubles accounted for eight runs for the winners. The high wind did not seem to bother the Roosevelt batters, for they sent the slants of the trio of Soldan hurlers to all parts of the Cleveland field.

Wielandy, Central twirler, seemed to have been affected by the cold, late in the opening game, for Beaumont, which had been behind one run, came to the fore in its half of the last round, scoring three markers.

MacIntosh Steals Every Base.

Central had come from behind prior to Beaumont's rally, mainly on successful stolen bases. Capt. Syl MacIntosh stole every base, including home. His pilfer of the home plate came in the second inning with one out. Puls, the Beaumont catcher can be excused somewhat from the ruthless stealing of the Centralites, due to high wind, which swept through the pitcher's box toward home plate.

It seemed dark for Roosevelt, when Ed Groepper, star Roosevelt moundsman had to be taken out in the fourth round, in favor of Bodge. Bodge gained credit for the victory and he deserved it, pitching a good brand of ball.

Jarrett, Roosevelt catcher distinguished himself at bat connecting with the ball every time, getting two singles, a double and a fielder's choice in his four times at bat. Each time Jarrett hit, there were runners on the sacks. Gardner "Warpy" Christiansen played good baseball for Soldan, getting three hits, including a two-base smash.

Giants Humbled By Petty Again, Robins Win 2-1

Hargreaves' Single in Ninth, With Bases Full, Brings Brooklyn Victory.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BROOKLYN, April 24. — The New York Giants ran into their new nemesis here this afternoon and their winning streak of seven straight games was halted.

Jess Petty, the Oklahoma southpaw, who shut out McGraw's men with one hit on opening day, held them to four scattered blows this afternoon. The Dodgers won in the ninth inning, when Charley Hargreaves singled with the bases full and chinched the 2 to 1 victory.

Virgil Barnes, the unlucky Giant right-hander, who was so unfortunate as to oppose Petty on opening day, was again victimized. Barnes had allowed only four hits when he retired in the first half of the ninth to let Groh bat for him. Groh got a queer double to right when his blow hopped over the head of Cox, went to third on an infield out and scored on Frisch's sacrifice liner to the outfield.

Farrell's error led to the first Dodger run in the second inning. Felix reached first on the boot, went to third on Butler's single and scored while Maranville was forcing Butler.

Fitzsimmons was on the mound in the Brooklyn ninth. Fournier greeted him with a single. Felix doubled, Fournier reaching third. Butler was purposely passed. On Maranville's grounder, Fournier was forced at the plate but Hargreaves slammed safely to left, Felix trotting over with the winning run.

PHILS WIN IN 9TH WHEN BANCROFT AND GAUTREAU BOOT BALL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, April 24.—The Phils came from five runs behind, made four in their eighth and two in their ninth, enough to beat the Braves, 8 to 7, in the last game of the series here today.

Genewich was harshly hit but an error by Bancroft in the eighth and errors by Bancroft and Gautreau in the ninth were largely responsible for the half dozen Phils runs.

The winning two in the ninth came in on Carlson's pinch single and Gautreau's error. Leach's hit-Baecht, an 18-year-old sandlotter, Baech, an 18-year-old sandlotter, was the winning pitcher.

100,000 See England's Final Soccer Contest

Bolton Wanderers Defeat Manchester Team, 1-0—King Congratulates Victors.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24.—King George and 100,000 of his subjects witnessed the windup of the soccer season today at the Wembley Stadium, when the Bolton Wanderers won the English Football Association cup by defeating the Manchester City team, 1 to 0.

Both teams are from Lancashire and that county sent tons of thousands of boosters in charabancs, special trains and by other modes of travel.

The scramble to get seats just prior to the kickoff caused exceptional crushes at the gates, where thousands of would-be spectators clashed with ticket scalpers who were demanding double prices. Policemen shooed the [illegible] away and a few suffered bruises.

All told, there were 168 excursion trains from the provinces. The first of the fans arrived at the big stadium at daylight, standing in line until 11 o'clock when the gates were opened.

The winning goal was scored by Davis B. L. Jack after the second half had been in progress 32 minutes.

At the conclusion of the game King George presented the cup and shook hands with the players, after which the great crowd sang the national anthem.

TEACHING ATHLETICS OBLIGATORY ON WALKER, BOARD OFFICIAL SAYS

That it is compulsory on the part of St. Louis high school coaches who also teach classes in school to give instruction in athletics, developed yesterday, following Mike Walker's return to the coaching activity at Central High School. Hitherto it had been understood that the coaching by high school instructors was voluntary and without compensation.

Yesterday an official of the Superintendent's office corrected this view. He showed correspondence in the Walker case which indicated that part of the obligation placed on coaching instructors is the teaching of athletics.

March 30 Mike Walker resigned from athletic activity following difference with High School League heads and gave up coaching. Coach Friedli took up the work.

In the meantime the Superintendent's office advised Walker that it expected him to fulfill his part of the contract with the School Board by teaching athletics.

Walker asked to be relieved, saying that he would teach another study in school, to compensate. The Superintendent's office insisted that he teach athletics.

His return to the coaching job is the result, the Post-Dispatch informant stated.

Prince of Bourbon Picked As a 4-Year-Old Champion

Colt Had Mishap at Start of Bryan Memorial and Was Given Poor Ride in Another Event, Sevier Points Out.

By O'NEIL SEVIER,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Every racing season has its surprises, some two or three. Sting's unexpected achievements at Jamaica and Belmont Park were one of last spring's; Sarazen's backsliding another. Sarazen was easily the 3-year-old champion of 1924, his most signal success having been his victory in 2:00 4-5. In the third of the international races, the $65,000 gallop of one mile and a quarter at Latonia in which he easily defeated Epinard, Sarazen began auspiciously at Pimlico in May by winning a $25,000 Dixie handicap. But after that he soured. All summer it was next to impossible to get him to work, utterly impossible to get him to race.

Sting, a New York bred son of Spur and Gnat, from the stable of James Butler, was unthought of last April. As a 3-year-old he had been just so. Yet before the middle of June he was knocking about shamefully Sarazen, Mad Play, Aga Khan, Cherry Pie and Altawood in races like the Excelsior, Metropolitan and Suburban handicaps. If he had been campaigned with moderation he might have continued a star the season through. Raced too hard and too often for purses of small consequence, one of his tendons bowed and in the Brooklyn revival, Mad Play finally beat him.

Carlaris, of whose existence not one racing follower in 10,000 even dreamed last fall, is already a big sensation this year and promises to become a bigger one. Not improbably April and May racing in Maryland will develop another.

Prince of Bourbon.

If American Flag, Joy Smoke, Singlefoot and Maid at Arms, supposedly the best handicap horses past 3 years old in training at Havre de Grace and Pimlico, don't step about, Prince of Bourbon is going to lick them in the Dixie, which will be renewed at Pimlico at one mile and three-sixteenths with a gross value of about $35,000.

The handicappers don't appear to be wise to Prince of Bourbon. Jack Atkin let him in the last Coffroth, in which he did not start, under 112 pounds. The Pimlico handicapper has dropped him in the Dixie under 116. His failure to get any part of the money in either the Bryan Memorial or the Thanksgiving handicap at Bowie last November after he had the Prince George's in hollow fashion, appears to have discredited him.

It was on what he showed in those races that I am picking him as the coming 4-year-old star, not only the potential Dixie winner under nine pounds less weight than the scale imposes for age races of one mile and a sixteenth, but a probable weight-packing, distance-running champion.

It was in the Bryan Memorial that Sarazen at last demonstrated that he was not an utter loss to Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt II, and racing in general, by winning handily under 126 pounds and setting a new track mark for one mile. Bowie going is slow—the slowest in the country. The barriers did not work on the outside at the start of the Bryan Memorial. Sarazen and Prince of Bourbon were both well over, Sarazen against the outer rail. But young Weiner saw what was going to happen and ducking under with the little chestnut got him into the lead and clear before seven or eight others. Prince of Bourbon among them could disentangle themselves.

Prince of Bourbon's head was in the air. He caught the tapes in his open mouth and galloped half a mile with them streaming off. Still Prince of Bourbon struggled gallantly, finishing seventh, only a couple of lengths back and beating eight.

This misadventure was not the fault of Andy Schuttinger, Prince of Bourbon's rider. The Prince's defeat in the $10,000 Thanksgiving Handicap, a gallop of one mile and three sixteenths, a little later was. Schuttinger has had many falls. For weeks after a spill at Havre de Grace some eight years ago in which Philip Musgrave lost his life, he lay broken and bruised in the little hospital at Havre de Grace. Jockeys who have too many terrifying experiences under the sharp-plated hoofs of galloping thoroughbreds become circumspect, which is not surprising. But when, nerve gone, they feel that they can't take the ordinary vocational hazards, they ought to quit the saddle, or be made to quit by racing's governers.

If Shuttinger had forsaken the saddle in June, as he threatened after an earlier bad ride on Prince of Bourbon at Belmont Park, and taken out a training license, the Prince would be up with the top weights in this spring's handicaps and I would not be writing of him in this vein. Prince of Bourbon will not have to lug Shuttinger about this year. That Thanksgiving handicap ride cost Andy a job he had held for 10 or 12 years and out of which he made upward of a quarter of a million dollars and thriftily salted it down. Acting for Edward F. Simms, James M. McClelland let him out. McClelland stood to win upward of $50,000 on Prince of Bourbon in the Thanksgiving event. McClelland is tickled pink that the handicappers did not see the race as he saw it.

Prince of Bourbon is easily the best horse Prince Palatine, greatest of the sons of Persimmon and the distance running champion of British racing in 1913 and 1914, got while he stood at Simms Xalapa Farm in Bourbon County, Ky. Prince Palatine cost Simms $250,000, more money than any other American producer has paid to bring a foreign stock horse overseas. He was lost in a fire at Xalapa Farm several years back.

The Prince's mother, Forever, is a daughter of Ballot and half-sister of Eternal, one of the fastest horses of the last 15 years. Eternal won the 2-year-old championship of 1918 from homely, but brave little Billy Kelly, in a $30,000 match race at Laurel Park in October of that year. In the Prince, therefore, is blended the stoutest British and American thoroughbred blood.

Prince of Bourbon did not do much racing at 2 years. In fact, he started only once. He looked a fine Preakness and Kentucky Derby prospect last spring at Havre de Grace, but Shuttinger rode him about as badly in the Preakness as he did in the Thanksgiving handicap, and he got nothing. The muddy going in which the fifty-first Derby was run appeared to handicap him at Churchill Downs and immediately after that race he developed a rash that kept him away from the post until November. Having done so little racing, he is in full possession of his powers. Simms intended last fall to send the Prince to Tijuana for the seventh Coffroth handicap. If he had and the Prince Palatine colt had got to the post right, Carlaris might not have won the richest world's race of a 12-month as easily as he did.

PITCHERS FAIL AND BROWNS LOSE TO CHICAGO, 7—4

Rice beat Sheely in a race for the bag. Thomas collapsed from the pain of the blow, but after resting a few minutes, he insisted on remaining on the slab.

McManus' Long Drive.

He got by that inning, but in the fourth he had to retire.

Sisler started the fourth with a home run into the pavilion and Williams slashed a single to right. Here the Browns ran into a bit of hard luck. On an apparent hit-and-run play, Williams broke for second, only to have McManus miss his swing, and Williams was thrown out by five feet. On the next pitch McManus hit one of the longest home runs ever seen in any man's ball park. The ball, carried on by the wind, sailed far into the extreme center field corner of the pavilion. It ricocheted up the benches, finally bouncing over the wire screening at the back of the pavilion and out on Grand boulevard, heading for the Y. M. C. A. Building.

Jacobson followed with a bouncing single over Thomas' head, a smash that uprooted a hunk of sod and Collins decided it was dangerous out there with Thomas on the mound. So Joe Jim Edwards went in. Schang forced Jacobson and after Melillo's single sent Schang to third. Vangilder ended the rally with a fly to Mostil. There was a waste of power. In this inning the Browns collected two home runs and three singles, and yet the net result was only two runs.

Jonnard Finds Going Hard.

The Sox pounded Vangilder for another run in the fifth when Mostil walked and Harris and Collins singled and in the sixth, after Kamm got his second triple, with one out, Jonnard relieved the Cape Girardeau farmer boy. He struck out Crouse, walked Scott and retired Edwards on a grounder, preventing Kamm from scoring, but in the seventh he faltered. Sisler started the Sox on this rally by missing Mostil's grounder and after Harris had flied to Rice, Collins drew a pass. Sheely singled to center and Falk banged one to right.

That was the extent of the Chicago scoring but it was enough. The Browns could not solve Edwards' delivery, except in the seventh. Schang opened this attack with a home run and Melillo singled to left. Hargrave batted for Jonnard and singled to left, sending Melillo to third and taking second on the throw, but Rice struck out. Melillo scored on Lamotte's grounder on which Kamm made a high throw, but that was all. Sisler popped to Scott, and Wingard, who had been sent in as a pinch runner for Hargrave, was doubled off second.

Indians Play Here Today.

This afternoon the Cleveland Indians call for the first game of a series of four. Tris Speaker's men, picked with the Red Sox as hopeless in the American League, have surprised everybody and are on the top of their game for the series with the Browns. Davis probably will twirl against the Indians.

Fans Pay to See Pesek Work Out For Title Match

Challenger for Stecher's Crown Plays to 175 Persons at 25 Cents Each.

By Dent McSkimming.

The atmosphere surrounding the Joe Stecher-John Pesek championship wrestling match, scheduled for the New Coliseum, next Thursday night, was further fogged today when it was learned that Pesek is still under contract to Max Bauman, whose brother, Billy Sandow, has been prominent as the manager of Ed Lewis.

Pesek, before engaging in his practice workout at the Red Ball gymnasium yesterday, admitted that his five-year contract with Max Bauman has two more years to run. About 8 months ago, Pesek announced to the wrestling world that he had broken all ties with Bauman, and would henceforth operate "on his own." No one has been able to discover the cause of the breach, if there was one; but it is a fact that Pesek has wrestled none of Bauman's troupe since that time. Instead, he has met all of the good men in the rival camp.

Will Not Return to Bauman.

"But, I promise you, I am not going back to Bauman, if I win the title," said Pesek yesterday when questioned about the validity of the contract. "Bauman pulled some 'funny' stuff on me and I am quite sure the contract is no longer binding. I'll fight any claim he makes."

Billy Sandow, brother of Max Bauman, with Ed Lewis and John Pesek as his big guns, held complete control of the heavyweight wrestling game for several years. The first rift appeared here in St. Louis when Promoter Packs barred Lewis until such time as the champion would consent to meet wrestlers selected by the local promoter. The real blow to the Bauman interests came when Stan Zbyszko double-crossed the "trust" and flopped Big Munn, the title-holder, a little more than a year ago. Since that time, the Bauman-Lewis troupe has been out in the cold but has recently made a noise by booming Joe Malcewicz.

Luke Sewell's Single in Eleventh Inning Wins for Levsen.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, April 24.—Luke Sewell's single with Burns on third and two men out in the eleventh inning gave Cleveland a clean sweep of the series over Detroit here today. The score was 4 to 3.

Levsen saved his game in the ninth when, with the bases filled and none out, he took O'Rourke's hard grounder, threw to Luke Sewell for a force out at the plate. Sewell relayed to Burns doubling O'Rourke.

Although hit for 14 safeties, Levson pitched well in the pinches. Whitehill also pitched well but was given poor support in the infield.

Tilden II, national title holder, in a thrilling five-set match in the singles finals of the Mason-Dixon tournament on the courts of the Greenbrier Country Club, here today. The score was 11—9, 6—2, 2—6, 3—6, 6—3.

After Tilden evened affairs by taking the fourth set, Richards appeared to the spectators to be more worn by the battle than the champion, and the general expectation was that Tilden would take the fifth set.

The Olympic player, however, furnished a surprise by obtaining a lead of 4—1. Tilden took two of the next three games, and in the last game of the match, on Richards' service, the champion was leading at 30-love. By daring services, however, Richards forced Tilden into two errors, evening the points, and the game then went to deuce. Richards got the vantage point on a backhand volley close to the sideline and won the match and championship with a low return to Tilden's backhand. The champion made a great effort to return it, but drove into the net.

It was Richards' second victory over Tilden in a month, the other having been won at Jacksonville in March.

Tilden was the defending champion for the Mason-Dixon trophy.

Mrs. Chapin Wins Title.

The women's single title was won by Mrs. Charlotte Hosmer Chapin, formerly of California, who defeated Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills, N. J., 6—4, 6—3. Paired with her husband, Alfred H. Chapin Jr. of Springfield, Mass., Mrs. Chapin also won the mixed doubles title by defeating Miss Bayard and G. Carleton Shafer of Philadelphia at 6—2, 8—6.

Butch to Meet Phil Rosenberg At Youngstown

Local Boy to Face Bantam Champion Week Prior to Steadman Bout.

George Butch, leading local bantamweight boxer, has been signed to oppose Charley Phil Rosenberg, the world's champion, at Youngstown, O., next Friday night. Butch has been in active training for his bout with Paul Steadman at the First Regiment Armory on Tuesday night, May 5., under the direction of the Business Men's A. C.

Butch gained a draw with Rosenberg at the Coliseum about two months ago.

During the past two days Butch has been stepping through his preliminary training paces in sparring workouts with Lawrence Hawkins. He plans to follow the same program today and tomorrow, but will add two more boxers to his training stable for daily practice bouts over a period of one week, beginning Tuesday afternoon.

Steadman has not broken training during the interval since the original date for his match was canceled. He works out each afternoon at the Business Men's Gymnasium with Mike Sansone, former Western A. A. U. flyweight champion, and with Jack McCarthy, a lightweight ring veteran.

Matchmakers Cook and Britton have decided to cancel the heavyweight match between Tom Pivac of this city and Pete Parres of New York, which they had booked as a semi-windup to the Butch-Steadman bout. Parres' kayo defeat at the hands of Rocky Adams at the New Coliseum last week caused the cancellation of his Armory match. An effort is being made to secure an opponent for Mike Sansone, who will probably be signed for a 10-round match to replace the heavyweight event.

BALTIMORE BURIES SYRACUSE, 30-5, FOR EIGHTH STRAIGHT WIN

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, April 24.

THE Baltimore Orioles, seeking their eighth consecutive International League championship, overwhelmed Syracuse today, 30 to 5, to remain undefeated this season. The binglemad Birds reached four opposing moundsmen for a total of 26 hits, including six homers, two triples and a half dozen two-baggers.

Of nine games played this spring, Baltimore has won eight. The other, a 12-inning battle with Syracuse, resulted in a tie.

Team of Filipino Boxers Nearly Wiped Out by Ring Fatalities

Only One Remains Out of Four Excellent Fighters Discovered by Manager Frank Churchill—Both Jerome and Sencio Died After Losing Bouts to Bud Taylor.

In the death of Clever Sencio, Filipino flyweight boxer, a few hours after a bout with Buddy Taylor at Milwaukee last Monday, there is recorded one of the most unusual incidents in ring history which extends back two centuries.

As far as can be determined, it is the second time that one boxer has had the misfortune of causing the death of two opponents. More than a score and possibly as many as 50 men have died in the ring or shortly after as a result of injuries suffered in the ring, but only once before have two men died at the hands of the same boxer.

The tragedy is also unique in that it marks the passing of the third member of a team of four Filipino boxers discovered and exploited by Frank Churchill. The single remaining member is Pete Sarmiento, a bantamweight. Churchill, manager of an extensive stable of boxers, is reported as so deeply moved at the death of Sencio that he has declared he will drop all connection with the boxing profession.

Jerome the First Victim.

The first tragedy in which Bud Taylor figured was that in which Frankie Jerome of New York died two days after his bout with Taylor. A post-mortem disclosed Jerome died of a ruptured blood vessel at the base of the brain. That was on Jan. 13, 1924. In both cases, Taylor administered severe punishment to his opponent. Sencio was 'out on his feet" but refused to fall, in the ninth round.

Pancho Villa, most famous of Churchill's team of Filipino boxers, died in San Francisco last year after a contest with Jimmy McLarnin. Blood poisoning was the direct cause, Villa having entered the ring with a jaw inflamed as a result of an infected tooth.

Young Dencio, a flyweight, died in Melbourne, Australia, following a bout with Bert McCarthy. Dencio had collapsed after an engagement with Eugene Criqui, a short time before the McCarthy bout.

Death of Harry Tenny.

One of the saddest cases of a brilliant ring career suddenly interrupted by death was that of Harry Tenny, Canadian bantamweight, who died one day after being knocked out by Frankie Neil in San Francisco in 1906. Tenny had established in three years of fighting one of the most remarkable records of knockouts ever written into the record books. In 1905, the year prior to his death, he scored 12 knockouts in 15 fights, only two of which went over five rounds.

Bud Taylor, the central figure in the latest ring tragedy, has not been regarded as the hardest hitter of his division and he was not held criminally responsible for the death of his opponent in either case. He is one of the leading contenders for the bantamweight championship.

New York won the game, 9 to 1, Urban Shocker holding the Red Sox to 4 hits.

Hole-in-One Club In Golf Becoming Over Crowded

Suggestion Made for Invoking of Silence Rule There Is Competition.

By Jack Alexander.

Holes-in-one are getting to be as common as dandelions. That mythical organization, the Hole-in-One Club, is losing caste and will in a few years be no more exclusive than a ward political club. Aces officially reported—and who ever heard of one that was not reported in fullest detail?—totaled around the 5000 mark for last year alone. Every State in the Union, except Nevada, and all the territorial possessions were represented in this lengthy bid for golfing fame.

A writer in Golf Illustrated for April is alarmed over the low estate to which the hole-in-one performance has fallen. It is now accomplished by so many golfers as to lack distinction and the club has "become unduly crowded, a condition manifestly unfair to those members who have played really noteworthy holes-in-one."

"They never get tired of talking about the play," he continues. "Such persons need to be informed emphatically that unless their performance took place in a really dramatic situation, or possesses outstanding qualities, they should remain duly modest and unobtrusive."

Would Confine Honor.

He suggests that holes-in-one be considered bona fide only when performed in a tournament or under striking conditions and enumerates some instances of each.

Jess Sweetser's case is one of the most striking. He was playing a match with Charles Manning, pro at Siwanoy, who was irritated because Sweetser kept beating him on his shots to the green, getting "inside" of the most phenomenal pitches Manning could make.

A Real Hole-in-One.

On the sixth hole, of 165 yards, Manning's shot stopped a foot from the cup. "There," he cried, "get inside that one!" And that was when Sweetser pulled his hole-in-one.

The most perfectly executed hole-in-one on record was made by the late Jack Dingwall of Pittsburg in an open tournament at Beaver Falls, Pa. It was a pitch of 180 yards which landed directly in the cup and wedged against the pin.

Deliberately setting out to negotiate a hole-in-one stroke instead of making a near-perfect shot, is something else again, most golfers hold. Because of this a member of a St. Paul club who announced that any expert golfer ought to be able to hole out in one on a short hole had little trouble in placing his money. On his third attempt the ball went down. There was no living with him thereafter, relates the chronicler.

Fore! Here Comes Prize Winner.

Willie McFarlane has outdone this one. He tells of a pupil of his who was almost totally blind but who had grooved his swing so perfectly that, given the right stance by his instructor, he could direct perfect shots without having the satisfaction of seeing his ball after it was 10 feet away. Of course, he made a hole-in-one, or so the story goes.

Such performances, writes the man who is calling for a new shuffle, are noteworthy and took place under dramatic conditions. To put these shots in the same class with the one that hits a tree and bounces into the cup is manifestly lacking in equity and the writer insists he will lay the matter before the U. S. G. A.

E. St. Louis Muny Season to Open

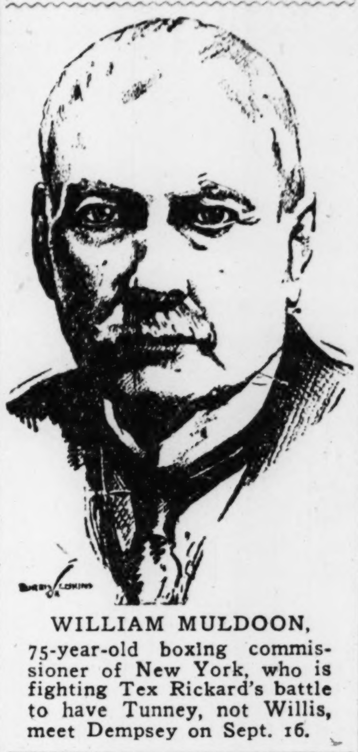
Navy Crew Wins.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 24.—Navy's crew defeated Massachusetts Institute of Technology by seven and a half lengths this afternoon on the Upper Severn River course. The Middy eight's time was 7:27 1-5 for the Henley distance of a mile and five-sixteenths. M. I. T.'s time was 7:56 3-5. Navy held the lead all the way, and in the final spurt pulled up to its finish position from a three-length headway.

The "Iron Duke"



WILLIAM MULDOON, 75-year-old boxing commissioner of New York, who is fighting Tex Rickard's battle to have Tunney, not Willis, meet Dempsey on Sept. 16.

Rickard Busy Outsmarting Boxing Board

Dempsey Contract Likely To Put Him on the Carpet Soon.

By Sparrow McGann.

(Copyright, 1926.)

NEW YORK, April 24.—Shrewd Tex Rickard! When brains were passed out to the human race this promoter was assigned to more than his share. Many things have occurred in the past to prove this. And new evidence is always coming in.

Just now, for instance, the contract which Rickard had Jack Dempsey sign down in Texas, does not specify the name of his opponent. So how can the New York State Athletic Commission, which regulates—and often conducts—boxing in the Empire State, bring him upon the carpet for defying the commission in signing to promote a fight between Dempsey and some fighter other than Harry Wills?

On the other hand it would not surprise the wiseacres if the board attempted to discipline Rickard for having anything whatever to do with the champion, who is on the commission's black list.

De Forest Got His.

It will be recalled that last year Jimmy de Forest, who was making matches for the Polo Grounds, made a friendly call on Dempsey when the latter was in Los Angeles. Jimmy was haled before the board and asked if he had attempted to do any business with the champion. Answering in the negative, De Forest was excused and warned not to go counter to the board's ruling under threat of suspension.

Tex knows the attitude of the commission in this respect and yet he went all the way to Fort Worh in apparent defiance of the edict. One of his lines of defense has already been indicated and it looks like a good one. He is not under the authority of the commission since he has no license to operate as a match maker.

He is an officer and director of the Madison Square Garden Corporation and is therefore not responsible to the commission for any undertaking he promotes. Another argument is that the champion is not licensed to fight in New York and therefore is not under jurisdiction of the board. Still another trump Rickard holds lies in the fact that Paddy Mullins, who manages Harry Wills, went out to Niles and signed for the big black to fight Dempsey. If Mullins is not open to a whack from the commission, why is Rickard?

Finally, there are signs of a division among the Boxing Commissioners themselves. All this political stuff is set forth because of the way it breaks depends whether Dempsey will do battle in New York State or elsewhere.

Tunney Likely Opponent.

So far as actual fighting is concerned, all signs point to the probability that Dempsey will meet Tunney, not Wills. Rickard time and again has said that he does not care to have a hand in promoting a battle between a white and a black and has pointed to his experience with the Jeffries-Johnson battle back in 1910, when he was chased out of California on the eve of the fight and forced to build another arena in Nevada.

Again, Rickard has said he considers Tunney a worthy contender for Dempsey's title, even though he did place Wills above Tunney in his annual ranking of fighters for 1926.

DERBY CANDIDATES WORK AT CHURCHILL DOWNS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 24.—The following Kentucky Derby candidates worked out here today over a track muddy but drying out rapidly:

Recollection, mile, 1:53 2-5.
Rhinock breezed three-quarters, 1:22.
Royal Omar, three-quarters, 1:22.
Champ De Mars, three-eighths, :43.
Tamale Dick, half-mile, :54 3-5.
Drone, three-eighths, :43.

WRAY'S COLUMN

That Century Dash Record.

ROLAND LOCKE, the newest thing in world-beating sprinters, yesterday was clocked in new world's record time for the 100-yard dash. He stepped the distance in 9½ seconds, which is faster than the record book says any human being has ever run the distance, under standard conditions.

It doesn't seem much of a feat, when analyzed in figures.

Paddock, running to his world's record of 9 3-5 seconds, would finish just 3.16 feet behind Locke, running at the rate of 9½. That is less than one-half the stride of an average sprinter.

And yet the sprinters of the world, under intensive training, have been straining in vain for a quarter of a century to overcome that trifling one-yard handicap. The time first was established by Arthur Duffey, the Georgetown University sprinter.

Five Men Hold the Record.

SINCE Duffey's day, Dan Kelley, in 1906, Howard Drew, the famed Negro sprinter, in 1914, Jo Loomis in 1917 and Charley Paddock on several occasions, have shot at the mark and tied it.

But that extra three feet needed to bridge the gap of the smallest split watch fraction has been wanting.

Two or three times the mark, unofficially, has been beaten. Once Jimmy Rector, running in the Middle Atlantic championships, representing the University of Virginia, was timed in 9 2-5 seconds. One Reggie Walker of South Africa, did the same trick. Both times were disallowed because of favoring conditions.

A professional sprinter, running on a track slightly downhill, is credited in Australia with having done 9½ seconds. But no official recognition has been given a mark lower than 9 3-5 seconds.

Paddock officially was timed on four occasions in marks equaling the record, yet never could surpass it.

Records Are Silent.

READERS will look in vain in the A. A. U record books for the name of Arthur Duffey, the first to officially run the distance in 9 3-5 seconds. Duffey was declared a professional. As was the case with the greatest of all-around athletes, Jim Thorpe, Duffey's marks were expunged from the records after he had been declared a "pro" more than 20 years ago.

Duffey ran the distance in 9 3-5 seconds, both in America and in England. Abroad he turned the trick on turf instead of cinders.

Locke's Mark in Doubt.

WHETHER Locke's mark will be permitted to stand is in question. While it is true that rains had dampened, and perhaps slowed the track, he performed his near miracle with a strong wind behind his back. It was for this reason that Rector's record of 9 2-5 was refused and for the same reason Ted Meredith's quarter mile in 47 seconds, made in a Pacific Coast meet, was not made official.

Derby Entrants Take Workouts

Ali Baba and Spanish Lay Breeze Mile in 1:50 4-5.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 24.—Out of the more than 40 Derby candidates quartered here, only eight were given opportunity to stretch their legs today. Ali Baba, from the barn of Mrs. L. M. Holmes, and a recent arrival, went a mile in company with Spanish Lay, Frederick Grabner's sterling son of Spanish Prince II, and Recline, in the breezing time of 1:50 4-5. The pair ran well all the way, getting to the half mark in :54 3-5 and the three-quarters in 1:23.

Token, H. P. Whitney's candidate, went a mile accompanied by Chick Vale in 1:51 handily. The first quarter was passed in :28, the half in :55, and the three-quarters in 1:23. The pair took things easy and were never extended.

J. Frank Croissant gave his Derby eligible, Pigeon Wing II, a chance to loosen up his muscles when he sent the Maintenon-Pigeon Pie offspring five-eighth in the comfortable time of 1:07 2-5. Pigeon Wing took to the lumpy track very readily and fought for his head all the way.

Bumpkin, one of the eligibles from Frederick Johnson's barn for the Derby, was breezed a half mile in :43 2-5. For a mile Whitney Moore's Happy Bob performed the best this morning. The son of Star Hampton and Biddy McGee sprinted the distance in the nice time of 1:48 2-5, considering the condition of the track.

Included in the workouts today were the following:

A distance of 10 miles over this newly paved road with such riders as John Boulicault of the St. Louis Cycling Club—state champion—Droz, Nelson and Ulrich of the Centurys and McElroy guarantees a fast race.

These five riders will start from scratch and 21 others will start at intervals of a half minute apart with the leading group of juveniles starting five minutes ahead.

The touring part of the club will leave the starting point a half hour before the start of the race so as to be on hand at the finish where they will join the racing contingent and ride a mile south of the Gravois to Koch's farm where lunch will be served. After lunch the tour will continue to Valley Park, then to Manchester road and home.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. Then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips. By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

CLUBSTEAK

FILLY BEATEN A HEAD OWING TO BAD START

Red Rocket Wins Maryland Feature—Form Players Hit Hard by Downfall of Odds-On Favorite.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 24.—H. Jones' sensational filly, Clubsteak, suffered her first defeat through a bad start in the Carolina Purse, when Red Rocket beat her to the wire by a head today. Best Friend, the early pacemaker, finished third, a length behind. The defeat of Clubsteak was a setback for the talent, she being installed 2 to 5 in the mutuels.

Rapture, H. P. Whitney's candidate for the Pimlico and Kentucky Oaks, made good in the Shenandoah by taking the measure of Marche Militaire and Punjab, eligibles for the Preakness and Kentucky Derby. The Whitney filly, closing courageously under J. Chalmers, earned the decision by a neck going away. Marche Militaire just lasted for the place from the fast closing Punjab.

Edisto an Easy Victor.

Edisto, racing in the colors of the Seagram Brothers and handled by Edgar Barnes, just galloped to win the Philadelphia Handicap, the feature of this afternoon's program of racing here.

At the finish of the one mile and a sixteenth trip, which he negotiated in the good time of 1:46 4-5, the four-year-old son of Johren and Tunnin was seven lengths in front of Cudgeller. The latter, racing coupled with Senator Norris as the Bedwell entry, just managed to nose Edward F. Whitney's Joy Smoke for second money.

By virtue of their colt's splendid victory in the Philadelphia, the Seagram Brothers took down $8725 as the winners' share of the $10,000 added purse and received a return of $16.80 for every dollar that they may have wagered on his chances to win the classic.

The Seagram colt raced as if much the best of his opposition, assuming command at the club house turn. Jockey Barnes sent him along at a stiff pace and was never in danger of being headed. Cudgeller raced close up for the entire trip and outgamed Joy Smoke in the final drive.

Only One Favorite Wins.

Favorite players experienced rough going this afternoon at the Harford course with only one first choice rewarding in the first six events. This exception proved to be the Sagamore Stables' Rock Man, an odds-on choice, which easily took down the purse hung up for the Fleetwood Handicap, holding fourth position on the day's card.

The son of Traprock just galloped to beat Whitney's Mr. Pepp by a handy length and worked out a full mile in preparation for the Chesapeake Stakes, to be run here next Wednesday. The colt stepped the circuit in the good time of 1:41 2-5.

trick. Both times were disallowed because of favoring conditions.

A professional sprinter, running on a track slightly downhill, is credited in Australia with having done 9½ seconds. But no official recognition has been given a mark lower than 9 3-5 seconds.

Paddock officially was timed on four occasions in marks equaling the record, yet never could surpass it.

Records Are Silent.

READERS will look in vain in the A. A. U record books for the name of Arthur Duffey, the first to officially run the distance in 9 3-5 seconds. Duffey was declared a professional. As with the greatest of all-around athletes, Jim Thorpe, Duffey's marks were expunged from the records after he had been declared a "pro" more than 20 years ago.

Duffey ran the distance in 9 3-5 seconds, both in America and in England. Abroad he turned the trick on turf instead of cinders.

Locke's Mark in Doubt.

WHETHER Locke's mark will be permitted to stand is in question. While it is true that rains had dampened, and perhaps slowed the track, he performed his near miracle with a strong wind behind his back. It was for this reason that Rector's record of 9 2-5 was refused and for the same reason Ted Meredith's quarter mile in 47 seconds, made in a Pacific Coast meet, was not made official.

26 Riders Today In Bicycle Race

Road Contest of the Century Club to Be Followed by a Tour.

The Century Cycling Club has 26 starters entered for its road race this morning which starts at the bridge near the city limits on Gravois road, thence to a point about one mile southwest of Fenton.

A distance of 10 miles over this newly paved road with such riders as John Boulicault of the St. Louis Cycling Club—state champion—Droz, Nelson and Ulrich of the Centurys and McElroy guarantees a fast race.

These five riders will start from scratch and 21 others will start at intervals of a half minute apart with the leading group of juveniles starting five minutes ahead.

The touring part of the club will leave the starting point a half hour before the start of the race so as to be on hand at the finish where they will join the racing contingent and ride a mile south of the Gravois to Koch's farm where lunch will be served. After lunch the tour will continue to Valley Park, then to Manchester road and home.

Florence Mills Wins With Ease In Ashland Oaks

Filly Has Lead of Two and One-Half Lengths Over Helen's Babe.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 24.—Racing as if she were much the best, Florence Mills, speedy filly from the barn of J. L. Knight, won the opening day feature of the Centennial race meeting, the Ashland Oaks, this afternoon, winning by two lengths over Helen's Babe, who led J. Cal Milam's Mary O. by a length and a half.

At flag fall Florence Mills raced to the rail, where she stayed neck-and-neck with E. R. Bradley's Blabbermouth, who tired after the first quarter and relinquished the lead to Florence Mills, which held it all the way with comparative ease. Helen's Babe closed fast, but Florence Mills was too far ahead to be caught. Mary O. made a gallant effort.

The race, the oldest stake on the spring program for the Kentucky Association track, had an added value of $3000. Following the finish a handsome silver trophy was presented by Thomas C. McDowell, owner of Ashland Park, for which the stake is named.

The event attracted a field of 12 horses, one of the largest ever to start in the stake since its inauguration in 1879.

The course is one mile and the race is limited to 3-year-old fillies. While the track was lightning fast condition a high wind interfered to great extent with the speed of the horses and the event was run in 1:40 flat, two and three-fifths second slower than the track record for a mile.

It was estimated that the Oaks was witnessed by 11,000 people.

Teak, a Derby candidate, like Mary O. and Helen's Babe, was the favorite to win the race but she finished without ever being a contender. Florence Mills rewarded her backers to the tune of $25.60 to a $2 ticket.

BILLY BARTON WINS MARYLAND STEEPLECHASE

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, April 24. — Billy Barton, fleet 8-year-old hunter owned by Howard Bruce of this city, won the annual Maryland Hunt Cup Steeplechase today over a four-mile course in the Worthington Valley, despite a spill at the twentieth jump. His time was 9:09 3-5. Dum Dum, from the stable of T. M. Bewen of Buffalo, was right behind the winner at the finish. Redmond C. Stewart's Krona took third place.

Billy Barton in winning today repeated his performance of a week ago when he captured the Grand National Cup. Bruce's jumper and Burgoright took the lead at the start and ran neck and neck for three miles. At the twentieth barrier Billy fell, but his rider, Albert Ober, instantly was back in the saddle and after th eleaders. A balk at the twenty-third fence eliminated Burgoright and Billy Barton obtained the lead. Falls were frequent. Capt. Michael Wardell of England was most seriously hurt, sustaining internal injuries when his mount, Foxhall P. Keene's Pepl, fell.

A record field of 22 horses started, including leapers from New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and Detroit.

FAMOUS BATTLES OF THE RING

By T. A. "Tad" Dorg

TOM MURPHY OUTCLASSED BY M'GOVERN

Harlem Lad Downed Five Times in First Round Before Referee Stopped Bout in 1905.

No. 3.
M'GOVERN-MURPHY FIGHT

"It's all off!" yelled Referee McGuigan as he jumped into the ring pulling Terry McGovern away from Tommy Murphy, who lay helpless on the ropes in the first round after being battered to the floor five times from the Brooklynite's crushing welts at the National Club, Philadelphia, on Oct. 18, 1905.

It was more like a scene in a madhouse than anything else when the fight was stopped to save Murphy from what seemed a fatal end. Murphy had crawled gamely to his feet time after time as Terry belted him on the jaw, and was dragging his feet along the ropes when the referee jumped in between them and dragged the tiger-like McGovern away and proclaimed him the winner.

Even then Terry didn't seem to realize that it was over. He tried to get past the referee. He wrestled with him, and it was not until Joe Humphries and Sam Harris got him that he fully realized that the end had come.

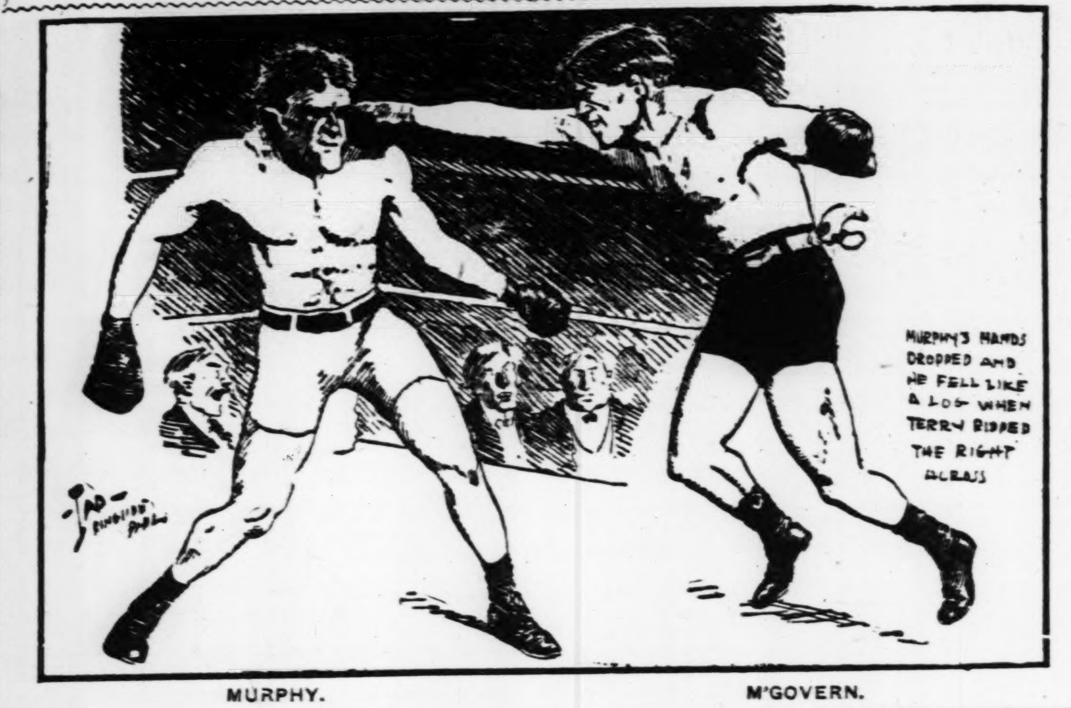
Punches Like Hailstones.

It was a whirlwind find, one that was so fast that to follow the punches was an impossible task. They landed like hailstones on the heads and bodies of both boys, punches were whirlwinds, and it looked as if either had a chance at any time until that right dropped over.

Joe Humphries yelled to Terry just before the first bell, "Remember, don't shake hands, that is understood. Remember now, right at him; don't put out your hands."

Terry heard. Terry was all ears for the bell. It clanged and he rushed over toward Murphy, who extended his right hand. Terry took no notice of it, but whanged a left which luckily for the Harlan boy was a bit high and hit him on top of the head.

McGovern Put Murphy Out in One Round



MURPHY'S HANDS DROPPED AND HE FELL LIKE A LOG WHEN TERRY RIPPED THE RIGHT ACROSS TAD

MURPHY. M'GOVERN.

Tommy backed away as Terry waded in and they got to a neutral corner where there was a rally. Murphy got out of it nicely and as McGovern stepped back shot in a right uppercut that caught Terry fairly on the chin, and he stood still as if paralyzed.

He quickly recovered and got in close, belting Tommy in the ribs, and then rocked his head with three right-handers.

Murphy was not distressed in the least and shot in another right to the jaw.

They landed squarely and shook Terry, but there was not enough steam in them to hurt him. Terry straightened up, shook his head and rushed again. He belted Murphy about the body and took some himself.

Murphy looked good and was holding his own against the "Terrible One." They got out to the center of the ring and were as still as if posing for a picture.

Terry was on his toes ready to jump while Murphy awaited the rush, and it seemed was ready to let fly with either hand. It was the quietest two seconds during the go.

Up, Down, Up, Down.

Like a flash Terry feinted with the left, and quicker than that the right dropped over on Murphy's jaw and he reeled over on his back. The crowd arose in a second and cheered wildly.

Tommy slowly got on his knees and before the referee had counted five was reeling around, not even knowing where Terry was. He was game and was willing to fight, but nature was against him. Terry rushed at him and downed him again with another right.

Murphy fell forward on his face and it looked as if he was done for. He rolled over on his back and got up again. Terry's eyes stuck out. He was like a hound after a hare. He was on top of his helpless antagonist again in a second and sent him headlong to the mat once again with a left on the point of the chin.

Once again Murphy arose and reeled toward the ropes with his back to Terry. The latter reached over his back, sent a crushing right to the ear, and down went the game little Harlem lad again.

He was in McGovern's corner now and the crowd yelled: "Stop the fight! He will kill him! Stop it!"

Billy Oliver refused to throw up the sponge and the referee refused to stop it. Murphy pulled himself up on the ropes for the fifth time, and was reeling like a drunken man along the ropes.

Terry, who was in the center of the ring, made another rush like a wild man toward his helpless opponent, ready to tear the top of his head off when the referee stopped the fight.

Many Big Circuit Handlers Looking for Prospects—Oh Gee Shows Class.

By A. F. Hockwolt.

ALTHOUGH puppy trials are being held in all parts of the country and dogs galore are being campaigned in these kindergarten events, many of the big circuit handlers are still out looking for prospects and promising material.

Chesley Harris, well known developer of such winners as Champion Candy Kid, Champion Becky Broom Hill and others of scarcely lesser caliber, attended the puppy stake at Madison, Ind., last week. He had a few good prospects, but he is out looking for more.

He succeeded in winning second with a young pointer called Lady Ben Hur. Lady was started for the first time at Selma, Ala., last February, B. McCall of Birmingham being responsible for bringing her out.

Harris was looking for a prospect or two for his patron, Jacob France, owner of McTyre, and fixed Lady as one that might suit him. He bought Lady and brought her North.

Lady Ben Hur ran unplaced in the trials at Battle Creek, Mich., but the following week, in the trials of the Southern Ohio Club, at Madison, Ind., she annexed second place.

Three Heats Required.

It required three heats before the judges were satisfied, however, for she gave the winning dog, Tom Coffer, a close brush for the money. Tom Coffer won the stake, after which his handler, Clarence Woods of Rising Sun, Ind., took him to Toledo, to compete in the puppy trials of the Northwestern Ohio Field and Stream Club.

Tom did not run so well here, but he performed creditably enough to have a chance in the finals and, coming back strong, he finished second to an Idaho puppy, called Oh Gee.

Oh Gee is a white and orange setter, and a daughter of the famous Gunner, a well known winner of some years ago and the dog which won the American Field Futurity in 1915. Oh Gee, however, is a different type of setter. In the first place, she is marked in orange colors while Gunner was a white and black. Gunner stood rather low on the leg and was longer in couplings, but Oh Gee is a good-looking short-backed puppy, of excellent conformation.

She was bred and developed in Idaho by her present owner, B. J. Bostwick, but very early in life she was sent to Trainer M. E. McMichaels of Yates Center, Kan., to train for the Derbies of next fall, but in the interval to run in the puppy trials of this spring.

Oh Gee started out in the St. Louis Pointer and Setter Club's trials which took place at Waterloo, Ill., a few weeks ago. There were 42 starters in that stake and Oh Gee, although she ran a fair heat, was not quite equal to showing in the money this first time.

Best Race at Toledo.

In the Southern Michigan trials Oh Gee won a divided fourth, but in the trials at Madison, Ind., she was again just behind the money. She ran her best race at Toledo, O., where she not only showed real class, but also proved that she can handle game. She was easily first here and if she can run heats as consistent as these two were at Toledo, she is likely to win again before the spring puppy circuit is over.

One of the outstanding setter puppies of the East is Bloodstone's Caesar's Patricia, which Jack Dunn campaigned all through the trials of the Atlantic Coast. She won on a number of occasions, but her leading success was when she won first in the Derby of the English Setter Club of America at Medford, N. J., a few weeks ago. Jack Dunn left his baseball team, the Baltimore Orioles, in training down South, to run Patricia in this stake of the English Setter Club, but he proved that his faith in her was not misplaced, for she easily led the entire field and took the high honors with something to spare.

Another good setter puppy that has been attracting attention is Miss Peggy M., which is being campaigned by John Campbell of Fitzpatrick, Ala. After Miss Peggy won the Grand Junction Puppy Stake she became the property of C. F. Aldrich of St. Paul, Minn., but she will remain in Campbell's hands. She is easily one of the leading setter performers of the present season and stands well up in the same class with Jack Dunn's puppy, Bloodstone's Caesar Patricia.

Athletic Director Mathews Plans Track Meet May 15 as First Step.

By Jack Alexander.

More widespread participation in sports among the students is the goal toward which Athletic Director Mathews will bend his efforts in the next few years at St. Louis University. The medium through which this is to be accomplished is that of inter-class and inter-departmental athletic leagues through which he hopes eventually to reach 75 per cent of the enrollment.

Plans are already under way for an inter-departmental track meet which is scheduled for May 15. A quarter-mile track is to be constructed at the Billiken field and a 100-yard straightaway will be marked off. Practice has already started and orders for trophys and individual medals have been placed.

This meet will be the only one of its kind this year but with the completion of the new gymnasium in September the intra-mural rivalry will be extended to swimming, handball, bowling, wrestling and basketball. Tennis and golf will also be taken up seriously as minor sports in the fall and the school soccer league, started last year, will be resumed. Varsity teams in these sports will be determined according to the collegiate competition available.

Football Not for Unfit.

Football will be restricted to the varsity squad. Prohibitive cost of equipment and possible injuries due to lack of training are the main reasons for this decision.

"Football is the great college sport," said Mathews, "but it is not meant for the man who is not in first-class condition. Exceptional facilities and an ideal physical layout of buildings are necessary for the proper handling of inter-hall football.

"However, less difficulty is found in promoting minor sports and these will be maintained for the benefit of the majority of the students. It is quite obvious that a well-ordered athletic system should reach beyond the membership of the varsity squad."

Mathews is still at work getting acquainted with the many phases of his new job and, in addition, is actively directing the spring football practice. He expects to get into scrimmage by next week. About 50 candidates are out for football, mostly green material, the bulk of the star talent having graduated. A rigorous system of calisthenics, some tackling of the dummy and signal drill have made up the sessions thus far.

The Bass.

THERE are several species of this family which are pretty well known throughout the country. Among them are the large mouth and small mouth, familiar to all fishermen in this locality. Also there are the sea bass and striped bass; the latter is the largest of all our game fish, coming up stream from the ocean. A striped bass weighing more than 50 pounds is no rarity, and the largest of which there is any record weighed 110 pounds.

The sea bass is the smallest of the family, the maximum weight being six pounds.

Icthyologists say that our black bass is not a bass but a sun-fish. However, we will continue to call him a bass.

The Big Mouth.

THIS fish is found throughout the Mississippi Valley in rivers, creeks, lakes and ponds, seeming to thrive equally well in clear streams or stagnant pools, just so he has plenty of food.

This fish attains, its greatest weight in Florida waters, where they have been taken weighing as much as 25 pounds. In this section of the country we think we have taken a mighty big one if he weighs seven pounds.

The big mouth bass has many names in various parts of the country. For instance, in Louisiana he is called a trout, sometimes green trout, for in the Southern waters he does assume a greenish black color, owing to the condition of the water, which is almost stagnant in the bayous.

Not only is the color affected by the condition of the water, but the flesh is not so firm nor is he as good a table fish as those taken in Northern lakes or Ozark streams.

My first experience with the black bass as a trout came about when I was traveling in the South several years ago.

I was in Alexandria, La., and when I asked the whereabouts of a certain friend was informed he was on a fishing trip, but was expected back that day.

When I inquired as to the kind of fish he expected to catch, I was told he was after trout. I said: "You are crazy; there are no trout in these waters." (I had in mind the mountain trout.) One of the men said: "Sure there are trout. Here comes George now, and will show you." They did show me—a large-mouth bass.

The black bass (both large and small mouth) appears to be the only fish that shows any parental affection, for while other fish leave the eggs as soon as they are deposited, the bass guards the nest till the young are hatched. Both the male and female show the same solicitude by continuing to guard the baby fish as long as they remain in swarms, but as soon as they begin to separate the parents cease their attention. The young are only about an inch long when they begin to shift for themselves, and many are gobbled up before they are really able to protect themselves.

The Small Mouth Bass.

THE habits of the small mouth are similar to those of the big mouth, though in this part of the country the former is seldom found in still water or in lakes unless there is a stream running through it.

In New England and in the northern states the small mouth inhabits the lakes as well as the streams, and will average more in weight than those taken in our Ozark streams.

While both inhabit the same stream it is not often that both will be taken the same day.

The record for a small mouth is 11 pounds. This fish was taken in a lake at Glenn Falls, N. Y.

We have heard of several taken in the Gasconade that weighed seven pounds, but we are a bit skeptical about these reports.

The number of member teams last year was 159 and there was only 26 leagues. Ten Forest Park fields have been taken over by the Chamber of Commerce for an exposition.

Will Solve Difficulty.

Superintendent of Recreation Tapperson, however, believes that by opening day the problem will be solved either through the medium of more double-headers or the acquisiton of leases on vacant property.

At a meeting of the association Friday evening at the Claridge Hotel Charles Pollock was elected president and delegate to the central council of the Municipal Athletic Association. George Dempsey was chosen vice president, Miss Beatrice Widdicombe secretary-treasurer and Charles Dailey sergeant-at-arms. The following members were named for the executve commttee: Rev. J. J. Amateurs! Send in Your Baseball News and Scores

THE Post-Dispatch this season, as last year, will devote space to the chronicling of events in the amateur sport world. Managers of independent or league baseball teams are invited to send in scores of games and to make use of the sport columns to schedule contests and acquire players. This service is likewise open to players seeking positions with boys' and other amateur teams.

Score blanks are available on the third floor of the Post-Dispatch building and should be filled out as indicated and mailed in promptly after each game. An advance notice of games, stating place, time, etc., will be appreciated. Address communications to the Amateur Baseball Editor.

Fistic Battle Follows Giants' Loss to Robins

Cox of Brooklyn and Snyder of Giants Exchange Blows.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 24.—"Where's the riot?" innocently asked a spectator after the game between the Giants and the Robins over at Ebbetts Field this afternoon.

The spectator was attempting to approach the Brooklyn club house, but his march was retarded by no less than thirty big, strong and healthy looking special cops. The spectator was unaware of the fact that the thirty big, strong and healthy looking special cops were there to preserve peace between the players of the New York and Brooklyn teams. He was unacquainted with the fact that after the game on Friday, the Giants and the Robins—that is, some of them—exchanged blows underneath the stand.

Robby Quells the Riot.

There was all sorts of rumors about the fistic battle today. Wilbur Robinson, president and manager of the Robins, consented to be interviewed after the Robins beat the Giants by a 2 to 1 score.

"Cox of Brooklyn and Snyder of the Giants figured in the battle," said Robbie. "They rode each other all during the game and they met underneath the stand on the way to the dressing room. There were several blows, but I separated them. That is all there was to it.

"McGraw came out of the Giants' dressing room cleaning his finger nails with a small penknife. Several words passed between him and Cox, but everybody's happy now."

"Who won the fight?" Robbie was asked.

"That was a great game Petty pitched," was his reply.

Burleigh Grimes and several other players took part in the scramble according to reports. Everything was peaceful today and the detachment of special cops had no work to do.

Billiken Juniors Defeat Western

St. Louis U. High Aided Greatly by Pitching of Farrell.

The St. Louis University High School baseball nine defeated the Western Military Academy team in a Preparatory League game played at Alton yesterday, 8 to 4.

Bob Farrell, who hurled for the Blue and White, again showed his worth to the winners when he struck out 12 Western men and walked only two. Due to Farrell's brilliant work, St. Louis has won the three games they have played.

"Ham" Strong and McShane of the Blue and White, together with Bates of the home team, knocked a circuit blow apiece. Dawson, Flori and Kelley of the Blue and White came across with two-baggers.

SOTTRELL NOT IN PRIZE MONEY AT CHICAGO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 24.—Crist Sottrell of St. Louis failed to break into the prize money at the National Bowling sweepstakes under way at Peterson's alleys, taking a 1409 for the eight games here. Jimmy Fliger of Chicago was leading at 8 o'clock tonight with a score of 1759.

Sottrell failed to break the two century mark during the evening, his best efforts being 192-194-198, his opening games. He slumped to a 149 in the last contest for his total. His scores: 192-194-198-182-169-162-163-149—1409.

HORNSBY'S ANSWERS

What is the submarine ball?—PUBLIC SCHOOL PITCHER.

Nothing but a ball pitched underhand. It is only a way that some writers have of describing a very pronounced underhand delivery.

Batter hits the ball and runs across first base and turns to the right. He turns clear around and then sees that the first baseman has missed the ball. He goes to second without returning and touching first base. Umpire calls him out. Was the umpire right?—R. C. A., Vernon, Cal.

He could go to second without touching first base again if he wished to do so.

Runner is on third base. Batter hits the ball to the third baseman, who keeps motioning to try to get the man on third base and fails to do so and then throws to first base too late to get the batter. Does the batter get a hit or the third baseman an error?—H. M. C.

Neiher. Make it a fielder's choice.

Runner is on first. He starts for second as the pitcher delivers the ball to the catcher. Batter hits a pop fly to the first baseman, who steps on the bag before the runner returns. I think the runner was out, but the umpire ruled safe. Please explain.—MUNICIPAL.

The runner was out. The catch of the fly was the same as any caught fly.

Illinois Golfers Win.

National Open Should Bring Out Best Talent

Sectional Qualifying and Exemption for Veterans Praised by Critic.

By Ray McCarthy.

(Copyright. 1926.)

NEW YORK, April 24.—The national open golf championship will be played this year under the best conditions ever laid down by the Executive Committee of the U. S. G. A. for the handling of America's premier golf classic.

Several of the leading American golf stars, with whom the writer has talked this week agreed that of all the plans tried out in the national open, the schedule as laid down recently for this year's tournament leaves little room for improvement.

The tournament will be held on the course of the Scioto Country Club, Columbus, O., on July 8, 9 and 10. National qualifying rounds to be held in 17 difficult districts, will take place June 24 over 36 holes. Entries will close on May 22 and shortly after that date the championship committee of the U. S. G. A. will determine the number of qualifiers from each district.

150 Players Eligible.

One hundred and fifty players in all will be eligible for the championship rounds beginning July 8. Of this number the first 30 contestants in the open championship of 1925 will be exempt from qualifying. Members of the 1926 Walker Cup team and American professionals who compete in the British open championship and foreign professional players visiting America also will be exempt from qualifying.

The most important feature of the change is that they place a premium on class, which is as it should be. This is to be a tournament designed to determine the best golfer in America, and as many of the stars as is possible should be given opportunity to get into the championship fight.

The qualifying rounds have always been a bugaboo and jinx for the first-class golfer. Especially has this been the case when the qualifying rounds have been held just preceding the championship. The star endeavors to save himself for the more important rounds and often fails to qualify because some novice with nothing to lose goes wild and plays his hardest in the hope simply of qualifying.

The championship committee has done wisely in naming 17 cities for the qualifying rounds. This will save golfers time and money, because the cities named are fully representative of the golf territory of this country.

A Little History.

Incidentally, the Columbus tournament will be the thirtieth competition for the open golf championship in the United States. The first competition took place in 1885 at Newport and won by R. H. Rawlins and attracted 11 contestants. Not until 1912 did the number exceed 100. This year the number will run close to 200 and there will be approximately 150 starters. Thus has golf prospered in America.

The players exempt from qualifying for the United States open this year are: Willie McFarlane, the champion; Robert T. Jones Jr., Johnny Farrell, Francis Ouimet, Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Mike Brady, Leo Diegel, Lurice Ayton, Al Espinosa, Joe Turnesa, MacDonald Smith, Al Watrous, Willie Hunter, Bill Mehlhorn, Bob McDonald, Clarence Hackney, John Golden, Tom Kerrigan, Emmett French, Tom Boyd, Francisc Gallett, Bob Shave, Jack Forester, Harry Hampton, Charles H. Mayo, Jock Hutchison, Wilfred Reid, Jim Barnes, George Heron and members of the Walker Cup team, besides Jones and Ouimet, George Von Elm, Jess Guildford, Jess W. Sweetser, Roland Mackenzie and Watts Gunn.

Carlin May Meet La Barba.

NEW ORLEANS, April 24.—Kid Carlin is to meet Fidel La Barba here in a 10-round bout in June and Martin Burke is to meet Tony Marullo June 14, according to present plans. Neither match is assured, however. Monday night the three Mallini brothers meet three opponents in three different fights of an all-star card.

Parking

Have you your car parked where there is no restrictions as to the time it can stay there? If so don't move it, leave it there. You may never find another place. If you feel that you have to use your car, why, buy another one. Don't move this one out of its parking place. There is thousands just waiting to get in.

Policemen are doing nothing but marking cars. A policeman used to carry a stick or billy, now he carries a piece of chalk.

There is more people looking for parking places, than there is for jobs. You live out, say fifteen blocks, from the main part of town. You drive down in the morning. After driving around looking for a place to park for a couple of hours, you finally find one, and walk by your own house on the way to town.

Parking regulations are getting so strict you are only allowed "thirty minutes in front of your own home." "People who own garages on their premises will be allowed to have their car spend two nights a week with them." Modern ads are reading nowadays, "Car for sale or trade, been parked three times. Will trade and give difference for 'once parked car.'" "Have brand new car, will trade for any car already parked."

"Bull" Durham is a boon to the unparked. It soothes the nerves, gives courage and confidence to face a parkless world.

Babe Ruth, as Fan, Would Prefer to See Good Pitching

From Viewpoint of a Hurler, He Praises Johnson's Opening Day Exhibition.

As Told to a Post-Dispatch Representative.

By BABE RUTH.

(Copyright, 1926.)

Ruth

NEW YORK, April 24.—It's a funny game—this baseball. I'm thinking now of two clubs in particular — the Senators and the Yankees.

We've got a team of kids; they've got a team of old fellows; our outfit wins games by slugging the ball out of the lot. They win games by airtight pitching and corking defense. Yet both clubs are considered pennant contenders by most of the fans.

Personally, I like to play on a team of sluggers, but if I was a fan, sitting in the stands, I believe I'd get a great kick out of the other kind of playing, too. I think I would rather have seen Walter Johnson in that opening game than to have watched 15 heavy hitters pound the ball over the fence in a slugfest. As I said in a previous article, I got more kick out of watching that Washington-Philadelphia scoreboard than I did out of our own battle, and I still get a big thrill every time I think of it.

Maybe it's because I used to be a pitcher. Maybe it's because we all think so much of Walter. But, regardless of who wins the pennant or who leads the league in pitching or home runs or anything else—I figure that first game of Walter's will still stand out as the biggest thing of the season.

During our series at Washington I was talking to some of the Washington boys who live at the hotel where we stopped. One of them was Roger Peckinpaugh, and he was kidding us a lot about our hitters.

"The difference between your club and ours," said Peck, "is that on our club our pitchers come around and say, 'now get us two runs and we'll win the ball game.' On your club you go out and get 15 runs lead and then say, 'well, if we get any breaks maybe we can hold it.'"

Of course, Peck was kidding. The Yankees' pitching isn't bad at all—and it will be better, but after all, that wise crack of Peck's just about tells the difference between the two different types of ball clubs that make up the big leagues.

No ordinary development could have set a whole city talking like this!

WHEN an entire city as big as St. Louis.... almost over night.... becomes so manifestly interested in a single residential development as it has in Osage Hills.... there must be something out of the ordinary going on to command such startling attention. Especially must this be true at this time, when as never before in the history of our city, realty developments of every type, most of them on a tremendously large scale, are being raised and offered everywhere throughout the metropolitan area.

Everybody....everywhere....is thinking and talking about Osage Hills. Thousands are visiting the place every week-end. And apparently St. Louisans are finding in Osage Hills exactly what they have hoped to find there, something new and unusual, and are giving tangible evidence of their approval of the undertaking by their investments.... over a half million dollars in sales in Osage Hills already....a record of achievement far beyond any ever made in any local realty venture.

Osage Hills is so extraordinarily different from anything yet developed in this locality.... so outstandingly unique.... that it is difficult to strike any comparison between it and anything with which St. Louisans are acquainted. Fashioned after the wonderful, picturesque hillside community projects of Europe, California and other sections of the country where modern city planning has worked its wonders, Osage Hills is ushering in a new era in St. Louis home developments. The creation of the proper home environment, the feature behind the finest and newest projects of present-day America, sadly neglected in most undertakings, is the paramount consideration in the planning of Osage Hills. Every improvement, fundamental, ornamental or recreational, and these are to be complete and numerous, will lend themselves to this general purpose, to make of Osage Hills the best possible place in which to live and play.

As for its investment possibilities.... Osage Hills is a two-for-one value.... for every foot of ground set aside for homes in the Country Club Grounds, an equal amount and more of footage is given to community parkways and recreational areas.

St. Louisans know value. By their judgment Osage Hills is already destined to become St. Louis' finest residential section.

Don't wait another day. Acquaint yourself with this project. Come out today! Visit the office on the grounds. Big Bend Road brings you right to the property. Manchester-Meramec and Kirkwood-Ferguson street cars end at Osage Hills.

THERE are two approaches to that fascinating study of elusive truth and conflicting opinion which we call history, the "Sneer method" and the "Drool method." The two represent the parties to an energetic debate, using the United States as a great laboratory, every school a test tube filled with the raw material of society—children.

Squinting carefully into these tubes, the educators bombard helpless youth with the theories of sneer and drool and lash at each other in fierce invective.

Harry Elmer Barnes, professor of historical sociology at Smith College, admits in his latest book, "History and Social Intelligence" (Knopf), that he is a protagonist of the sneer method. Perhaps it is not too uncomplimentary to class "The Story of Our American People," by Charles F. Horne (United States History Publishing Co.; 2 vols.), with the drool works, for this just completed model school text is frankly devoted to fostering national patriotism. It has been produced under the aegis of the American Legion and a number of other patriotic societies.

Prof. Barnes has collected a number of his previous writings and added to them with the glee of a schoolboy putting a tack on teacher's chair, for he confesses his sentiments will shock "the solemn mandarins of my profession." But there is more than mischief behind his work. He keenly feels the need of stimulating teacher; his tack is sharp, and it is placed with precision where he believes it will do the most good.

However, the American Legion history does not remain on the high, divine levels. It is an improvement on many texts of 15 years ago, for it does tell of some of our national mistakes and concedes to opponents, even to Revolutionary Tories, the justice of their sincerity.

"The economic considerations which swayed the Fathers but which did not undermine their patriotism would be incomprehensible to children of 12 or 14," Mr. Procter explains, "and would reflect inferentially on the patriotism of the Fathers. So we have omitted them."

Economics Brushed Aside.

The new historians question whether social and economic problems are duller or more difficult to understand than the issues of dead and gone politics and diplomacy which fill such a large part of this as it does of most histories, covering the study like the stale froth of a long-forgotten drink.

Prof. Barnes sets out clean glasses. The sneer method as applied to the American Revolution is more than a record of Washington's fondness for his bottle and Franklin's love for the girls. It recognizes all the factors, human and divine, material and spiritual.

The American Legion history does mention some of the economic reasons for the Revolution, but it brushes them away with:

"The dispute thus seemed at times to be about money. Really, it was always the deeper dispute caused by the newly growing ideas of government. Our people were insisting on their right to the freedom and equality which are the necessary basis of true law."

The chapters of the Revolution are carried through on the same high, inspirational level. Discussion of the westward expansion which followed winds up with:

"These years saw the start of that vigorous, free, joyous Americanism which makes us another race from the long suffering Europeans."

On the whole, however, the treatment of events up to 1900 is very fair, sound and gives quite a complete picture of national development so far as space permits.

But the story goes on the end of 1924, and we who have lived through it might be pardoned for not recognizing it as our own times. "The New Freedom" is the title of a chapter devoted to the Roosevelt, Taft and first Wilson administrations. It is meant to express the struggle against the domination of big business, although Mr. Taft's part in this crusade is not explained. The United States' little excursions in Mexico, Haiti and San Domingo are glossed over patriotically as undertaken in the interests of humanity.

Disagree On the War.

There follows the tale of our entry into the war, our part in it and our activities afterward. "Germany began the war" is the flat statement, and the calendar of German crimes is briefly rehearsed. A few years ago Prof. Barnes would have agreed, for he admits that in 1917 he helped a bullet maker prepare for the National Security League just such an "absurd and misleading account of the background of the war."

Now that he has studied the

Peasant General Whose Armies May Make Him Mussolini of China

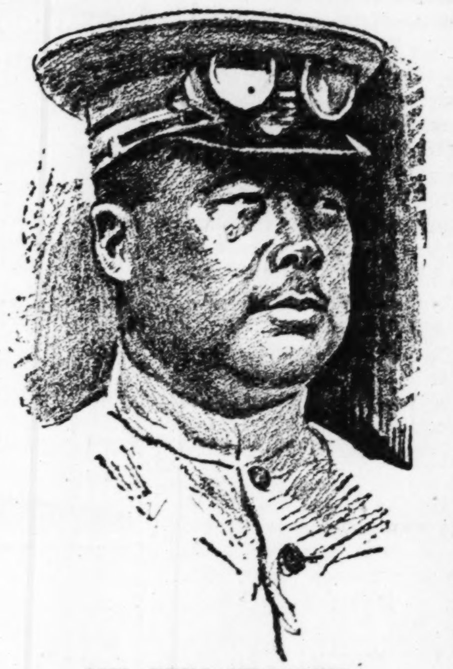
Feng-Yu-Hsaing Avoids Wars for Control of Pekin, and Keeps His Forces Busy on the Western Desert Lands.

The "People's Armies" Do Not Subsist on Loot as Is the Chinese Custom, and They Build Roads and Irrigation Systems.

A commander of powerful armies, held together and inspired by the dream of a revivified and united China, is Feng Yu-Hsaing, the "Christian" General. His aspirations are widely different from those of the leaders now striving for control of Pekin and the plain around it. The possibility of Feng becoming to China what Mussolini is to Italy has been suggested by the author of the following article, a correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG.

DEFEATS will not ruin the "People's Armies" of China. The deaths of leaders or even a change of leadership from Feng to a coalition with Wu, will not destroy them. The taking of Tientsin and the present rout is not a final battle, but an episode to be settled with the establishment of this or that dictator. The People's Armies are the beginning of a new epoch in China; around them may be built a modern nation. They are the growth of the past year, but they arise from certain definite social conditions which will continue to nourish them for years to come.



GEN. FENG YU-HSAING.

They are the first armies in Northern China, that are not completely dependent on a personal leadership. Feng may have been their original genius, though I have seen many of his subordinate Generals who looked also capable of doing it. But whoever originated the idea, it is bound to survive and flourish, even if a score of leaders are defeated or betray it. It has been adopted into the heart of the nationalist movement of China.

It has a program built to grow with decades. For it is not only an army but a road-construction gang and a land-development company and a trade-training school. Peace strengthens this army, for during peace it suppresses bandits, builds roads, reclaims waste lands and entrenches itself in growing order. War strenghtens these men, if it is not too costly or too long a war. But they do not have to justify themselves by war in fact they prefer not to. In the present civil war, it was several months before they were drawn in. To hold Pekin strengthens them with wealth, but adds to the complexity of their problems. To lose Pekin means only to withdraw to a thousand miles of back country, there to reclaim lands and build roads and strengthen themselves anew.

To ancient China, the soldier was the lowest of the low. "You do not use good iron for nails or good men for soldiers," says the proverb. Soldiers were bandits, preying upon the people—organized bandits, under a strong leader. The unhappy Chinese peasant usually preferred the bona-fide bandits, since they can perhaps be won by gifts of food and opium. Whereas soldiers—in the many letters sent to newspapers—"took so much loot that they had to steal horses to carry it away."

Soldiers and Bandits Were Identical in Old Days.

The line between soldiers and bandits has been thin. If a General cannot pay his troops they desert to the enemy. Until recently most of China's battles were settled by hiring away half the opposing army at higher wages. If no one paid them, they turned bandit independently. But even as bandits they cast longing eyes backward at the green fields of respectable looting. Bandit bands who kidnapped foreigners often made it a ransom condition that they should "be taken back into a regular army."

A bandit chief with a large enough force became "regular." He began to pay his force not by spasmodic loot but by "requisitions" under some legal formula. As he grew in strength, his taxes became more regular, till, with the greater Generals, they reached the respectability of Government demands. When Wu wants cash, he informs Chambers of Commerce that they must raise it for him in return for protection. Slightly lesser Generals subsist on compulsory opium planting, forcing starving peasants to cover fields with poppies, which bring greater revenue than wheat. Even the greater Generals, Chang and Wu, fight for possession of the millions of dollars of opium revenue yielded by the port of Shanghai.

Modern European armies also grew out of a similar past. But the armies of China are still in that feudal stage where an army is an asset, not merely an expense, because it can be used to force taxes from a starving people, and does not fight enough to squander all the revenue collected. It is an asset to its chief, but certainly not to the country. For it starves more and more peasants, who enter the ranks of bandits and perhaps later rise to be soldiers and starve more peasants. Till the land groans desperately under militarists, longing for a way out.

The People's Armies think they have found a way out. By building armies not of bandits and hoodlums but of young peasants, disciplined severely against looting, kept hard at work reclaiming lands and building roads and learning trades, steadily organizing yet wider reaches of country under their control.

Thirty-six hours to the west of Pekin, in the high, cold steppe of southern Mongolia, I spent a day with Feng Yu Hsaing and the "People's Armies" of which he was Commander in Chief. Chang and Wu were already fighting, but Feng had withdrawn further into the desert, sending word that he was busy with irrigation works. He had built that summer four hundred miles of 50-foot road, with four rows of trees, across a treeless plain, connecting the three provinces assigned to him.

Road Builders Too Tired For Looting and Vice.

I had a long talk with Feng. He is not a "red," though when his enemies control the sea coast he knows he must keep on friendly terms with Soviet Russia if he is to use the Transsiberian for his freight. Communism interests him little. He is a peasant. He knows the simple things that peasants know and great Generals forget. That it is a good thing to build roads and reclaim lands for the starving. That if you wear your soldiers out with hard physical work, they have no time for vice or looting; and that this makes you popular with the peasants. That when you are given a province to administer, the people will appreciate it if you do not throw them out of their house to make room for soldiers, but build instead your own barracks of hard Mongolian mud a little out of town. These are simple things, and they made Feng popular, offsetting even the high taxes he had to impose on merchants to support his soldiers in the rather barren lands.

"The first need of China," said Feng to me, "is to push popular education till every man can read. The next is to build good roads and railroads, reclaim waste lands by irrigation and flood protection and settle on them our surplus population. We must give loans to these new colonists. I have started a Credit Bureau in each of my three provinces."

The important thing about the People's Armies is that any one of the subordinate Generals can tell you just as clearly as Feng Yu Hsaing what their policy is. It was the General of Kalgan who outlined it to me; it might have been any of the others, for the principle is drilled into all of them. "When we need new soldiers, we go, not to hoodlums of the cities, but to peasant villages. We ask the peasant boys: 'Were you ever a soldier before.' If he was, we don't want him. All former soldiers were bandits. We want uncolored paper on which to write. We teach him reading and writing, and a trade; we make him build roads and irrigate lands. When the lands are reclaimed our soldiers have first choice as settlers. We shall create a population of farmers who can read and write and defend themselves. These will be citizens, the first true citizens China ever had. Always we have had family men, but not citizens of China!"

That is the voice of the new nationalism. And these soldiers study "politics," by which is meant a simple course in patriotism. They wear arm-bands on which is written: "Die for Country; Love the People; Don't Disturb the People." They put down looting with a hard hand. When Feng took over Kalgan, he searched all former soldiers for loot; those found with stolen valuables were carried by train to a bridge and annihilated with machine guns. Life is cheap in China, but order is difficult and dear; no one thinks less of Feng for his drastic ways of discouraging looting. Other Spartan habits he inculcates in officers and men; he stamps out opium, strong drink, and incurs the enmity of the British-American Tobacco Co. by prohibiting cigarettes among his soldiers. In this his forces are in strong contrast of those of Chang So Lin, whose officers are noted for the grandeur of their dissipations.

Since the Shanghai shooting last May, over a thousand students applied for admission to the People's Armies. An unheard of thing—students, the highest class, willingly entering the lowest. It was the new patriotism, the new nationalism. To "defend the nation" has become part of the student creed. "We put these students in the ranks," said one of Feng's Generals. "We give them hard work and rough discipline under uneducated officers. We wish to see if they are truly patient or only sentimental. If they endure this treatment, they will rise gradually, alternating between the military school and practical work in teaching peasants. We will have a new type of officer, close to the people of China."

Thousand-Mile Stretch of Country Held by Feng.

The stronghold of the People's Armies begins in the mountains west of Pekin, and continues thence for a thousand miles along the southern marches of Mongolia even to the borders of Turkestan and Tibet. Armed force can hardly dislodge them, and now with the four hundred miles of new road built last summer, they can bring food supplies from the fertile province farther west. They control territory larger than any country of Europe; strategically, they cannot be conquered against the will of the inhabitants; politically, they form the link between Pekin and the eastern edge of Soviet Russia, which will be only too happy to see roads and railroads extended here, as part, eventually, of a great Transasian system uniting Moscow and Pekin.

As new dictators or Presidents rise and fall in Pekin's unprotected plain, it will always be found wiser to come to terms with the People's Armies than to conquer them. New acts of foreign aggression, new suppressions of radical students or labor unions, will cast new streams of potential officers and organizers into this back country. If Feng himself should die, or go away on a vacation to Moscow, his army remains, under Generals younger but perhaps more than his equal in possibilities. The People's Armies are already a movement loyal to no one man, but to the idea of a nation. And to the idea of the peasant-soldier, replacing the defenseless peasant and the looting bandit, guarding his own soil.

Mrs. Sun Yat Sen said to me this past winter in Shanghai: "It is possible that the People's Armies will expand southward, and the armies of Canton expand northward, till we meet in two years or 10 years at the Yangtze. Then we shall unite with them and form one central Chinese Government." Much water will flow through the Yangtze before that time; many changes of allegiances and of official governments in Pekin. But the People's Army is one of those creative ideas which outlast governments, and on which governments are built.

Why one should be so impatient for a central government in China, when there is as yet no central government in Europe, it is hard to say. China is as big and as populous as Europe, and has as many languages. Her Pekin Government has about the force of the League of Nations—a pious gesture toward unity, for which many devoted men labor, while many undevoted men fish for their own advantage. In spite of all that can be said of Chinese anarchy, her moves towards unity are perhaps as hopeful as those of Europe.

"I think," said a Chinese friend to me, "that we shall have a united Republic of China in actual fact, before you have a United Republic of Europe. For we are naturally less quarrelsome than Europeans; and have more respect for peace and stable relations." Why should one expect any greater speed than Europe's from the ancient, patient East?

Reed Charges Administration Is Subservient to Money Powers; Holds Democrats Are Cowards

Italian Debt Settlement Inspires Scathing Speech in Which Missourian Turns All the Guns of His Oratory on Present Policies.

By Paul Y. Anderson,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 24.

"JIM REED'S greatest speech?" Some critics called it that, but such superlatives are of dubious value. The senior Senator from Missouri has made many speeches, and many great speeches, in his time. Yet certainly the oration which he delivered on the floor of the Senate yesterday afternoon will rank with the best. It has been many a day since the halls of Congress have rung with an address so eloquent, stirring, colorful and inflammatory.

It is not necessary to have heard it to enjoy it—although no written page can picture Reed at his best—nor is it necessary to agree with it to realize what a perfect whale of a speech it was. Aside from the subject matter and the opinions of the speaker, it is entitled to recognition as a fine specimen of an art which has been honored since Demosthenes' day.

The Italian debt settlement, which the Senate had just ratified, was Reed's text, but it was only a text. From it he digressed to make a formidable and sweeping attack upon the Coolidge administration and its bright particular hero, Secretary Mellon. It furnished occasion for an ominous picture of the dictatorship and ambition of Mussolini. It afforded him opportunity to flay his colleagues in language seldom heard in the Senate.

Indicts His Party.

Last, and most important, it gave Reed provocation for bringing against his own, "the Democratic" party an indictment of cowardice, aimlessness, futility and lack of leadership which was at once so bitter and so lofty, such an admixture of savage wit and humorous philosophy, so permeated with a contempt that was softened with sage advice, that it is difficult to imagine a parallel.

Few Senators heard it, and few of those who heard it seemed to enjoy it. An exception should be made of Senator David Reed of Pennsylvania, leader of the Republican "hard-boileds" and spokesman for Secretary Mellon. He grinned at Reed's ferocious attacks upon his party, and grinned more broadly at those upon the Democrats whose votes he has been able to count upon during this session. The galleries were packed.

The Missourian, always the handsomest figure on the Senate floor, and the most distinguished, looked unusually well. The bright silver of his hair made a striking contrast with the blue of his closely fitting suit.

Surrender on Tax Bill.

It was toward the close of his peroration excoriating members of his own party for joining with the Republican regulars to put over the debt settlement and other administration measures, that he reached his peak.

"I do not hesitate," he said, "to ask my Democratic associates what we are here for. Is it to join in these nefarious schemes? To unite with Mr. Mellon in all his demands? A few days ago my secretary defined a modern Democrat as 'one who worships at the shrine of Woodrow Wilson, and votes with Andrew Mellon.'

"When we united with those on the other side to pass a tax bill in the interest of great wealth, we abandoned the policy we had advocated here for years. If the Democrats had stood solidly with the Republican insurgents we could have written a tax bill for the benefit of the people. But we formed a coalition with the Republicans, and when Democrats coalesce with the hard-boiled element on the other side they simply enter its digestive apparatus, and do not even disturb its stomach, for a regular Republican stomach can digest anything that has ever been produced in Heaven above, or earth below, or in the waters under the earth."

A roar of laughter came from from the galleries, and the Vice President rapped sharply for order. Reed of Pennsylvania smiled delightedly, but the Democrats looked dejected.

"I compliment the Republicans on one thing," Reed continued, "they have a policy. They know what they intend to do. Even if it is a buccaneering expedition, it is well organized and ably led. When it is completed they have another one ready before the stupid Democrats on this side can find out what has happened to them.

"The Democrats get up on this floor and stick pins in them. That is the extent of our resistance. We deliver homilies about the President riding on a hobby-horse. It it the most innocent thing he ever did, and the most commendable.

"Padlock on Human Rights."

"We make speeches about about Thomas Jefferson and his principles, but Jefferson never wrote a law in his life that didn't grant more liberty to the people. Every time his pen touched paper it was to declare again for the old liberties and to demand new ones. The Bill of Rights which sprang from his brain was a declaration for the rights of the people. Likewise the statute on religious liberty.

"But over here on the Democratic side we sit with our little hammers, and forge a little chain here and a little restriction there. We put another little padlock on human rights. We set up organizations to invade homes and set their unholy hands upon the brow of motherhood.

"We hear it advocated that the constabulary have the right to enter any home in the land if a ruffian with a badge thinks there is a little beer there. We have Senators here who can say that a man who makes a bottle of beer should be executed. And I say to you that the man who says that is as much worse than the man who makes a bottle of beer than murder is worse than making beer. You cannot sanction murder by having a few gentlemen down in Congress say: 'Be it enacted.'

"We talk about Thomas Jefferson and repudiate him in every breath. What is the Democratic policy today? Chiefly its policy is to find out what Andrew Mellon wants and then fall ignominiously into the tail end of the procession. No wonder the people of the country repudiate the Democratic party. We would not even hold the solid South if it were not for the race problem."

Turning his menacing front full upon his silent colleagues, and speaking in a mixture of admonition and scorn, the towering Missourian went on:

"I appeal to Democrats to awaken to their duty of guarding this country, for with a Republican majority in full control, the Lord God of hosts knows it needs constant guarding. I say to Democrats here that you have no more concert of action or continuity of purpose than a lot of chickens in the barnyard when an owl comes along.

Party Policy Bankrupt.

"This measure (the debt agreement) should have been beaten, and if the Democrats had stood solidly it would have been beaten. The word came down from the White House to the Republican regulars to 'line up.' Here was a Senator who wanted a Revenue Collector; here was another who wanted a Deputy Marshal appointed. So they lined up.

The Fight for Liberty.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR editorials in support of the Dyer bill to amend the practice in Federal courts are being read with widespread interest and approval in this part of Missouri.

There is no good reason why a Federal Judge, in the trial of a case, should be permitted to express his opinion as to the credibility of witnesses or the weight of testimony. He is not better judge of such matters than any member of the jury and is by no means so good a judge of facts as are 12 impartial men

It is heartening to read that your editorial policy is being supported by such eminent lawyers as Charles Claflin Allen, Wayne Ely and Campbell Cummings. I know at least two of the Circuit Judges in this part of Missouri are in accord with you, as are, I believe, the majority of our bar.

The right of trial by jury should not only be preserved inviolate, but it should be extended and strengthened to still more effectively safeguard the rights of the people. While we have many able and conscientious Federal Judges who are not tyrants, we have also had many who were neither able nor conscientious and who were unquestionably despotic by nature and habit.

Tyranny was never enacted but in the name of law. Injustice was never decreed but by a court of competent jurisdiction. Freedom has never been put down in the name of law and order. From the time of Edward the Confessor until the present hour, the battle for liberty has been almost a continual contest with courts. It is unwise to permit the whim of any one man, learned or unlearned, to control the result of a trial where liberty is at stake.

Your reference to Lord Jeffreys was I think, most timely and pertinent. The American people have none too much liberty left. Let us conserve the little that remains.

Inconsistent Southern Drys.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I NOTICED in yesterday's paper that Bishop Cannon of Atlanta made a special plea for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment at whatever cost. He stressed particularly the "wet sections of the East." Since the good Bishop is so terribly excited over this matter of enforcement, why not let us all join in and demand that all amendments be enforced? It is notorious that the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments are not enforced in the South, and still our Southern prohibitionists shed crocodile tears over the Constitution. To my mind these worthies seem to think that the Constitution is a bill of fare, and that each section has the right to choose those portions which appeal to it.

Don't get the idea that I am a wet. I do get tired of people who try to be both hot and cold at the same time. I have been fortunate in going through the South not so long ago and found just as much liquor there as I found in St. Louis. Let the cry go up to enforce all the amendments and the South will shut up like a clam.

Practical Education.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

PROF. RAYMOND MOLEY of New York is certainly right when he says: "We cannot make leadership out of the material with which many of our college women are filling their minds—a badly digested diet of French literature, evolution, Victorian novels, H. L. Mencken, Karl Marx, psychoanalysis, Wm. James, Eugene O'Neill, Edmund Burke, international law, Sherwood Anderson and Thomas Aquinas, mixed with an occasional course in government, which is deeply concerned with distinctions between the theory of laissez-faire and the doctrines of the guild socialists."

What we need, above all things, to fit the present and future generations for the battle of life is a grammar school education in reading, writing, arithmetic spelling, physiology and a trade or profession, so a boy or girl will be able to take care of himself or herself if necessary. After a grammar school education and trade or profession is learned, then they can study for a higher education if they have the time or wish to do so. The newspapers today will teach them history, geography, grammar and many other things formerly learned in schools.

A trade or profession should come before a high school education, as a boy or girl can obtain a position quicker with the former. Thousands of high school and college graduates are looking for jobs today and cannot get them because they have no trade or profession.

Wake up, parents, and protect your children. They should have the most necessary part of their education first, to protect them against emergencies.

THE HAYES MYSTERY.

One rank, unsavory incident in the Government's prosecution of Senator Wheeler remains to be cleared up, namely the testimony of that New York lawyer, George B. Hayes, who declared, under oath, that Senator Wheeler made a corrupt proposition to him in the matter of procuring oil land leases from the Interior Department.

If Hayes told the truth on the stand Wheeler should have been convicted, expelled from the Senate and disqualified for holding any office or position of trust. If Hayes did not tell the truth he committed perjury. The jury, by its acquittal of Wheeler, morally convicted Hayes of perjury.

Senator Walsh of Montana, with characteristic tenacity, has stuck to the task of exposing Hayes' presence as a witness at the trial. He has introduced a resolution directing the Attorney-General to inform the Senate as to the expenses of the Wheeler prosecution and whether the Department of Justice plans to institute perjury proceedings against Hayes.

Attorney-General Sargent, appearing before the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee, declined to answer questions asked by Senator Walsh on the ground that "publication would be incompatible with the public interest." Concerning two witnesses who, the Government contends, would have corroborated Hayes, Mr. Sargent refused to give their names or furnish any information about them until the Senate asked for it.

In the face of the facts already stated the Attorney-General, it seems to us, fails to realize the enormity of Hayes' guilt as pronounced by a Federal Court. Hayes attempted by false testimony to destroy Senator Wheeler officially, besmirch him professionally and degrade him personally. Surely that is not overstating the consequences which would have befallen Wheeler if the jury had believed Hayes. Under such circumstances, then, how can Mr. Sargent as a man, as a lawyer and as Attorney-General, condone Hayes' felony? How can he explain the Government's failure to institute proceedings against Hayes? How can he, in logic, ethics or plain decency, persuade himself that it is incompatible with the public interest to furnish all the information he has in this connection to a committee of the Senate?

The truth is that the Government's prosecution of Wheeler has been looked upon with misgiving by the public conscience. The public pretty well knows the gang whose wrath Wheeler incurred by his successful crusade against Harry M. Daugherty—that ex-Attorney-General who has declined to testify before a Federal grand jury on the ground his testimony might incriminate him. The public knows about the shocking ramifications of that gang that linked the underworld with the Department of Justice. Thanks largely to Senator Wheeler the public has read the script of that gang's revolting and tragic drama, written in bribery and booze and finally in the suicidal blood of Jesse Smith.

This is the mafia that set out to destroy Wheeler. Familiar as it is with many of its black-hand operations, the public feels there is nothing this conspiracy would have stopped at to accomplish its purpose. Knowing this, the public conscience is haunted by certain questions: Was Hayes a creature of that gang? Did the gang find him, coach him as to his preposterous conversation with Wheeler and pay him a price? Or is Hayes simply a defective, with a notoriety complex?

Those questions can be answered by prosecuting Hayes, by tracking down every circumstance and influence in the fabrication of his repudiated testimony. As we see it, the man who should be most concerned, personally and officially, in exposing this plot and identifying the plotters is John Garibaldi Sargent.

ENGLAND WON'T TAKE A CHANCE.

Legalized betting for the purpose of raising revenue based on the sporting proclivities of a nation, has been voted down in the English House of Commons; while on the other hand the Irish Free State has removed the ban on betting and expects, with a 5 per cent tax on wagers, to collect three-quarters of a million dollars annually for the benefit of the State Treasury.

The wags will probably try to use these two acts as a measure of the difference in psychology between the Englishman and the Irishman. Perhaps they may be right. However, dire economic necessity has driven both peoples to consider every possible expedient for balancing their budgets.

We all recognize, even those of us who like to take a chance and back our opinions as to the best horse, the best man, the turn of a card, that the nationalizing of gambling possesses potential demoralizing factors of serious significance.

Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who ardently urged his gambling bill, overlooked a real revenue-producing possibility when he failed to eloquently champion a British imperial lottery. He might have had the whole world taking a chance.

AN UNSELFISH MAN.

The pastor of a church in Atlanta sent out a questionnaire as to the causes of crimes in that city. One answer was: "If some Atlanta business men saw a dollar the other side of hell they would reach for it and take a chance of falling in." The writer had evidently had experience with selfish men.

Thursday's Post-Dispatch told of the death of Gus Haltgren, a laborer, of Omaha, who appears to have been one of the most unselfish men ever discovered. He worked for the street car company. Being a bachelor and a man of few wants, he always quit his job in the winter months, when jobs were scarce, in order to make room for some married man in need of work. In the spring, when jobs were plentiful, he went to work again. His foreman testified that Gus did this regularly for 10 years.

At his funeral there were a number of sincere mourners. He "didn't amount to much," from the Main Street point of view. And his example cannot be commended for efficiency or far-sightedness. Industry and labor would lose heavily if many workers did as he did. But what a remarkable object lesson in the simple life, contentment and thought for others' needs he furnished. It was almost unearthly.

SHALL WE PASS OR WELCH?

A bill designed to settle American and German war claims was recently introduced in the House by Representative Mills of New York. It proposed to return the property of Germans which the Government seized during the war, and which, under the terms of the Versailles treaty, as well as the separate treaty of peace entered into between the United States and Germany, is still held by the Alien Property Custodian as security for the claims of American citizens against Germany.

The return of this property to its German owners would leave unsecured the claims of American citizens against Germany. It would practically void their claims. Such action might be legal, but it would be miserably cheap. The Mills bill, accordingly, provides that our Government pay the American claimants, and to that end proposes a Government bond issue of $250,000,000, which would be considered a loan from the United States to Germany.

This bill is indorsed by the President and also by the Treasury Department. It has been severely attacked by Representative Garner, who calls it a "gigantic steal" and charges that the author, Mr. Mills, and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon would both profit by the passage of this measure.

If that is true, Mr. Mills was unwise in fathering the bill and Mr. Mellon might well have remained noncommittal. But regardless of who will profit by it, there is an important principle of international law involved, namely, that private property shall not be taken in war without compensation.

Is that principle to be revived and re-established, or are we going to subscribe to the tenet that international law, after all, is fair-weather pretense, good enough to talk about smugly in intervals of peace, but ruthlessly repealed in the passion and pressure of war?

We can do the lawful and the just thing both by the Germans and by our own citizens or we can "welch" in either or both accounts. But if we choose the latter course let us, in plain decency, never again point an accusing finger at Mexico while hissing confiscation.

UPSHAW: EXPERT.

We have had many occasions to observe the power which the Antisaloon League wields over Congress, and the alacrity with which Congress has jumped at the crack of Wayne B. Wheeler's whip. Perhaps that is a brutal way of putting it. After all, there are some mad idealists among us who ascribe the affinity to the common possession by Congress and the Antisaloon League of one great moral purpose. To these, the fact that the affinity has been aided and abetted by Antisaloon League checks will come, we hope, with no great shock. Pussyfoot Johnson lied and bribed and even drank gallons of liquor in the holy cause, so what's a fee or two between friends of prohibition?

It appears that those eminent dry leaders of the House, Upshaw of Georgia, Cramton and Hudson of Michigan, have been in the habit of accepting fees from the Antisaloon League for making speeches in the dry cause. They are not troubled by the scruples of such dry Senators as Willis and Fess, who, though frequently giving their time and oratorical talents to prohibition, consider it a very doubtful practice to accept money for their efforts.

The case of Upshaw is particularly disappointing. Upshaw is one of the brightest gems in the dry diadem. We had always pictured him as a gallant Galahad in shining mail, as a jazzy Jason charging the Dragon Rum with a spirit inflamed by the Cause and a heart bursting with altruism. But Upshaw himself takes a very prosaic and professional view of his onslaughts against liquor.

"It is absurd," says he, "to say that I am on the regular payroll, but when I lecture under the auspices of that organization (the Antisaloon League), which is quite often, I charge a fee just like a lawyer or a physician for expert services." And he adds, in answer to his critics, that it is much more creditable to accept money for an effort to save the youth of America than "to use money as the wets do in trying to destroy the youth of America." So David, instead of being a crusader, is just a hired expert.

How many other dry chieftains in Congress there are who receive money from the Antisaloon League is unknown. But one thing is certain: Congress is full of men who could qualify, with Upshaw, as dry experts.

WHERE IS THE PARLOR ORGAN?

"Pianos and Organs for Sale" is still a standing head in classified advertisements, especially in Sunday newspapers. But where are the organs? Last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, under that head, advertised scores of pianos, hand and player, but not a single organ. Who, in recent times, has seen a single sample of the once popular parlor organ displayed in the music stores?

The organ, as a popular instrument, is still very much with us. But it has undergone a marvelous transformation. Vanishing, at least from city homes, where the piano, piano-player, phonograph and radio have taken its place, it has reappeared in our playhouses, especially movie theaters, in a glorified form, with many voices, played by electricity, and with possibilities not dreamed of by builders of organs for churches or homes.

Is the day of the home organ gone forever? It would seem so, at least in the cities. At its best, it was a fine musical instrument, capable of high entertainment. And it had an inspiring quality, especially with sacred music, that is not to be found in the average piano.

TALE OF A BULLFROG.

There once was a bullfrog, so merry and gay,
Who came out at night for to sing and to play,
His voice could be heard for many a mile,
And its sweetness could only compare with his smile.
(He was noted for beauty, eclat, and for style.)

His lovely green coat fit him just to perfection,
He drove all the lady-frogs plumb to distraction
With airs that were polished, distingue, unique,
He set all the styles for his own little clique.
(But some of the bullfrogs hopped off in a pique.)

One day as he sat, all puffed up in his pride,
Considering whom he should take as his bride,
"My choice is unlimited, varied and wide,"
He said, when he heard, "Tie that bullfrog outside!"
(And 'tis said that poor froggie just curled up and died.)

PARAGRAPHS.

What the Passaic strikers really need in those children parades of theirs is a few kids of the Mickey McGuire caliber, not to mention a goodly sprinkling of Tomboy Taylors.

In a recent blurb, Arthur Brisbane, that most prolific (and versatile) of writers, expatiated at length on the crime of wasting one's time. He has converted us. We shall hereafter pass up his column.

An uncle of President Coolidge recently appeared in an old fiddlers' contest and lost. John Coolidge Jr. plays the saxophone. A musical family that, but the only thing Cal plays is safe.

Deadwood, a South Dakota town of some 2400 souls, recently greeted the San Carlo Opera Company with packed houses at every performance, which some considered unusual, because most of the natives never before heard opera. However, what with wolves and coyotes and wildcats howling and yowling around those parts, they probably about had an idea what it sounded like.

After all, liquor isn't the only thing that can put one into a good humor. Most of us can have just as good a time reading the accounts of that tug of war now going on between the camels and ducks at Washington.

And so the dream of Hamilton has come true. He wanted organized wealth in possession of the Government—and we have it. He wanted the states deprived of their sovereign rights—and we have it. He wanted Federal agents swarming over the land like the locusts of Egypt and squirming through the keyholes on the privacy of citizens—and we have it. He wanted privilege given to a class for their personal profit—and we have it. He had no other thought than of industrialists riding with the arrogance of feudal lords over the fields of the farmers—and we have it.—Claude G. Bowers.

CAN DOGS THINK?

John Jack had been City Marshal of Salem, Mo., so long that the small boys and their dogs thought he was "growed" to the job. Now, Judson Young has an Airedale who boasts the euphonic name of Boris Thunderbolt Jr., but goes by his cradle name of Rex.

John's duties took him on regular rounds of patrol, while Rex's activities were along similar regular paths. He makes his regular trips to the Lumber Mill to see Bob, then calls on Budge for a stray bone or meat trimming, then goes to Bo's for a scrap or two, perhaps calls on Ben Ray to pass the time of day, wends his way on homeward and calls on the garages on the way.

Quite naturally the paths of the twain would cross, and when they did, Rex never failed to eye the Marshal and was wont to voice his feelings by emitting forth that sonorous baying common to dogs of this breed. Nothing antagonistic in his barking; perhaps he was trying to tell John where he saw some bootlegging going on.

Now time brings changes, so it was on a recent Tuesday night that, when the ballots were counted, it was found that Wednesday would see Monday as City Marshal and the reign of John was over. So the new Marshal took up the accustomed beat, while Rex, not dependent on the whims of man and uncertainties of elections, continued on his regular rounds. Naturally the twain would meet as they did the other evening.

The new Marshal was standing on the corner of the old feed store when Rex came along. Without a moment's hesitation he commenced to bark at the new Marshal, and no doubt was admonishing him to take up the cudgel that John laid down and "ask 'em kindly but firmly." He had passed Mr. Monday, the new Marshal, perhaps hundreds of times before and had never acted in that manner. Who says a dog can't think?

DOGMA IN RELIGION AND SCIENCE

PROF. JULIAN HUXLEY in Harper's Magazine for April.

DOGMA in some form, theology in some form, is a necessary part of any developed religion. Perhaps some of you read the articles on "My Religion," recently contributed to one of the daily papers by a series of well-known authors. Most of them were in revolt against accepted orthodoxy and, in their distaste for what they believed to be false dogma, had overbalanced into a position in which they were without dogma at all. And the effect was often nebulous. A modern society with such absence of beliefs would be like an organism [illegible] motion on land without a skeleton—it would collapse gelatinously. A religion needs a definite intellectual framework for two reasons: in the first place to guard it against doing the wrong things; and in the second to help it to do the right things. Organization is as necessary to a religion as to an animal or a business—though it is an organization of ideas that is needed. Without its tested framework of ideas it may tend to the excesses of intolerance and of exaggeration of its own importance, and will certainly proceed to draw false conclusions from half-baked premises if the utmost pains is not taken to do the baking in the most scientific way. In other words, an intellectual basis is needed for religion, because religion must overflow into action, and because in the long run the qualities and values of action are always determined by the correctness of the intellectual premises on which they are based. Science, too, has its dogmas, but is (or should be) willing to change them quickly and painlessly as occasion demands. In the same way, the set of dogmas for any future type of religion will need to be flexible and capable of development, so that they may not incur the evil repute which, not without considerable reason, attaches to the term at the present day.

Reed had been preceded by Senator Howell (Rep.) of Nebraska, one of the real fiscal experts of the Senate. He had analyzed the terms of the debt agreement at great length without raising any dust. Then Reed arose in his place.

Subservience of Coolidge.

"I hoped," he began, "that the proponents of this settlement would attempt to answer the objections which have been made by the Senator from Nebraska, but it appears they are to be treated with silent contempt, on the theory, I think, that the less said in defense of this proposal the better. You have the votes, they are ready to be delivered, and appeals to reason and fairness are futile.

"I want to say to the people of the United States——if not to the absent Senate—that the administration of Calvin Coolidge is as much owned by the great interests of this country as the subordinate of a bank is controlled by the board of directors. Not a demand has been made by the great financial interests that has not been obeyed by this administration with the same cringing subserviency that is manifested by a well-trained setter dog when ordered by its master to heel.

"In the past we have complained of the influence exercised by outside interests upon officials of the Government. In this case they have moved boldly in and taken possession of the office of the Secretary of the Treasury. Every demand made by the great banks has been obeyed. The Republicans, with the exception of the insurgent element, have been mustered to a man back of measures that are abominable, indefensible and infamous, and there are always enough Democrats over here to put them through.

Bankers and People's Money.

"We borrowed from the American people ten billion dollars. The washwoman, the laborer, the minister and the farmer were enjoined to buy bonds till it hurt. We employed every appeal from the charms of motion picture actresses to coercion by banks and employers. And we told these people that the money we lent to Europe would be collected in full.

"At the same time our great banks were lending their money to European countries at enormous discounts and high rates of interest. The battle flags had hardly been furled before these interests, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., launched a campaign to have this Government cancel the debts owing to it from the nations of Europe. They wanted these debts canceled because they knew it would make it easier for them to collect their own. If they were so eager for cancellation, why did they not cancel their own debts?

"Now Europe's wounds are healing, and they find a better market for their money in Europe than they find in America. They are lending at 7 and 8 per cent, and taking securities at a discount of 10 and 15 per cent. They do not propose to cancel these securities; they propose to collect them. And they want us to cancel our debts so they can collect them more easily."

"The efforts that have been made to cancel and camouflage the facts about this settlement have never been equaled, to my knowledge, by any set of men representing the United States. They start in blandly by saying that Italy will pay its debt in full. They told us on the floor of the Senate that Italy would pay in ful. Yet every man who has studied this proposition knows that what we are getting on this debt is 25 per cent of our due.

"Back of this subterfuge, in silence, with motionless tongues and dumb lips, but backed by a majority already delivered and ready to be delivered again, sit the sponsors of this infamy."

Senator Smoot was sitting a few feet away.

"Why is this proposition being put through? Because every bank that was in favor of canceling the debt wants 75 per cent canceled when they cannot get 100 per cent. Because these banks have rallied their correspondent banks, their allies and their confederates, and have appealed to Senators through them. They have not stopped there. They have appealed through the great corporations they control. Great copper corporations have appealed to Senators. Senators are yielding to the selfish appeal of institutions that are going to put money in their purses by virtue of the votes that have been cast here and will be cast again.

Parallel With Russia.

"What is the pretext? Ability to pay. What is the ability of Italy to pay? She has doubled her wealth in the last 10 years. The march of her prosperity is not arrested. Her population is greater. The power of nations to produce wealth has multiplied in the last quarter century by five or 10 fold. Today a single farmer with modern machinery can produce more than an entire family could produce 50 years ago."

"Sixty or 70 years ago a housewife sat at a loom and it required her months to weave the cloth for a few suits of clothing. Today one woman in a factory supervises a score of looms that turn out thousands of yards daily."

"The man who stands here and tells you today that he can look into the future 62 years and foresee what Italy will be able to pay then is a false prophet, because he doesn't know what he is talking about."

"Standing on the battle line until 6,000,000 of her people were destroyed, stood the great empire of Russia. Then the spirit of the people broke, and in their frenzy they rose and overthrew the Government which had oppressed them. They said they would not pay the debts which had been contracted by this tyrannical and discredited Government.

"Yet because they would not pay the debt contracted by the creatures who had driven them in hordes into the snows of Siberia, because they would not pay for the scaffolds upon which their fathers and mothers had been hanged, because they would not pay for the knouts which had been laid upon their bleeding backs, because they would not pay for the jewels of those whose feet were on their necks and whose swords were at their hearts, we said that bolshevism could not be recognized."

"They came to this country to buy goods. They had gold. We turned them away because we said their government was dishonest and would not pay its debts.

"Now, having done that, we propose to permit Italy to repudiate 75 per cent of the debt she incurred when we gave her the goods and money to save her from disaster.

Less for American Farmers.

"Ability to pay! The Senator (Nye) from North Dakota introduced a resolution in which he proposed to apply the same rule to the American farmer that we are applying to Italy. It was received with a polite senatorial sneer. He proposed that we tell the American farmer that he would settle with him just as we have settled with Italy—that we would not have our farm loan banks foreclose the mortgages on his farm, his house and his cow.

"I say it was received with a sneer. It wouldn't get three votes in this body. Yet if we are to apply the rule of ability to pay to foreign nations, rich and powerful, who are assembling armies to invade other lands, why shouldn't we apply it to the American farmer?

"Out in the Middle West is the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. It is in financial difficulty. It owes us a large amount of money and has an obligation to pay us 6 per cent and we are exacting every cent of it. Has anybody proposed that we apply the rule of ability to pay to that railroad?

"What is this spirit that has suddenly come over the Senate, that we shall yield billions of the people's money to a foreign nation and that we shall cancel 75 per cent of the debt owed us by the most autocratic government that has oppressed this earth in half a century?"

Reed then referred to Mussolini's policy in the Southern Tyrol, where the native German and Austrian population have been forbidden to learn or even speak their native language and contrasted it with the conditions which had been exacted from Jugo-Slavia in behalf of Italian-speaking communities there.

Condemns Administration.

"It has been said," he continued, "that we cannot collect this debt. We cannot as long as we are represented by men who want to give it away. Of course we can collect it. Until Italy settles this debt Italy's credit is ruined, and every man here knows it. The trouble with the French franc today is that France is declining to settle her debts."

He contrasted the terms of the Italian debt settlement with those of the British settlement, declaring that every British statesman know that the British Empire must keep its word to keep its standing in the world.

"What we need," he went on, "is a President and a Secretary of the Treasury who are thinking of the American people and not of the bankers of New York, London and Berlin. We are going to have that kind of a President some day, and when this thing is handed to him, I hope the names of the Senators who perpetrated this black infamy—who robbed a helpless people who never had a chance to express their opinion—will be handed along with it."

"Senators may consummate this infamy. They may ride in a party car driven by the great financial interests filled with the admiring throng of Republican Senators with a few Democrats riding on the tail end. Let them proceed. I am ready and resigned.

"I desire to say nothing unpleasant," he minced, and the galleries exploded in a roar. "This settlement cannot be justified in good conscience. The people never had an opportunity to pass upon it. It was brought in here after an election. I dare any man to postpone this vote until after election.

"I dare any man to go down to his people and say: 'I am going to settle the Italian debt for 23 to 25 cents on the dollar; I am going to extend its payment for 62 years with annual payments of 1.1 per cent, and at the end of 62 years the debt will be wiped out. I am going to do this for Mussolini and his government, that monstrous blot on civilization, that repudiation of everything in the nature of freedom and democracy."

"Do it in the State of Maine if you dare (This shot was for Senator Hale.) Do it in the State of California if you dare. (And that one for Senator Shortridge.) I can take a yellow dog with an honest record and beat any man who dares announce it to his people.

Unpopularity Abroad.

"What are we getting for it? In France the name of America is hissed by every audience. They received our boys with cheers and kisses and flowers, but now they hiss and spit upon us. There is more good feeling for America in Germany than there is in France. These foreigners hate us just as badly for asking them to pay us 25 per cent of their debts as they would for asking payment in full.

"Meantime their armies are forming. Their master's voice is the voice of tyranny. His black shadow falls across the sunlit plains where peace had been. His credit will be established, his honor increased, his hour magnified, when he can report that his representatives brought America to its knees and made us settle for 25 cents on the dollar.

"The members of this commission have projected their vision 62 years into the future. I have the temerity to prophesy that when the American people understand this thing, there will be a reckoning. For my part I am willing that it shall fall on Democrats as well as Republicans.

"Sirs, this is altogether the biggest steal in history. At no time has it ever been proposed to give away a thousand million dollars of the people's money to a foreign nation.

"What this country needs is a political upheaval. It needs a storm and the storm will come. It needs a storm of ballots that will take the deadwood that has been floated in here on political streams, and cast it out on the waters. It needs a storm that will awaken the conscience of the American people to the betrayals that are being daily perpetrated upon them.

"It needs a storm that will clear the atmosphere so that the people of the Pacific Coast, as well as in the near vicinity, can see how the hand of Ne[illegible] financiers is directing the affairs of this republic."

His Effort in Vain.

Then came his bitter and witty review of recent Democratic policies in Congress. The galleries were hanging on every word, eating out of his hands. Eight or 10 frozen and moody faces stared at him from the floor of the Senate.

"Coming back to this loan," he concluded, "with all the hatred and oppression that has been visited upon us for this great act of national generosity in the hour of direst need, for the act that put food in the stomach of Italy, that put arms and munitions in their hands, that stopped the invading armies of Germany—for that act we receive their hatreds and maledictions. I cannot help from recurring to the wisdom of the philosophy of Shakspeare:

"'Neither a borrower nor a lender be: For loan oft loses both itself and friend, and borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry. This above all: to thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man.'

"And I commend the last line to the American Senate, and I send my condolences to a country helpless while the robbery is done."

It had been a memorable speech, but the Senate is immune to speeches—even when it hears them. Soon the bells for a roll call sounded. Senators came trooping in. Reed's contemptuous forecast was fulfilled. The vote was 43 to 24 for ratification.

UNIVERSITY CITY SCHOOLS EXPAND

Construction Involving $470,000 to Accommodate 3200 Pupils Next Year.

The University City schools are preparing to care for about 3200 pupils in the next school year, an increase of about 700, due to the growth of that suburb. Its school system was started 15 years ago with two teachers and about 50 pupils. There will be more than 100 teachers in September.

A $470,000 buildinig construction program, with bonds recently voted, is under way, and officials say the structures will be ready just in time to meet the demand.

Instead of the 7-cent increase in the school tax rate which had been expected to meet the interest and sinking fund demands of the new bonds, an increase of only 5 cents will be made, and the school rate for this year will be $1.39 in all. This will mean an income of about $390,000 for the schools, since the assessed valuation of University City is about $28,000,000 now, compared wtih about $3,000,000 10 years ago.

Charles Banks, who is completing his first year as Superintendent of Schools, has been reappointed for another year.

Deciding on a policy of rotation in office, the School Board has elevated Alfred Fairbank, a broker, from the vice presidency to be president. John M. Atkinson, an attorney, has been made vice president. Fairbank has appointed the following committees: Instruction, Atkinson and Lewis E. Balson; Finance, Balson and John J. Fitzwilliam; Buildings and Grounds, Roy C. Sutton and Harry H. Wright; Auditing and Supplies, Wright and Fitzwilliam.

American History From Two Points of View

documents released by the opening of German, Austrian, Russian and other archives, he has repented. He places responsibility for the war first on Russia, then France, Austria, Germany and England, but he believes any nation might have acted as Austria did if placed in her position.

"The United States," he declares, "took military measures against Spain and Mexico on infinitely slighter pretext. Our own diplomatic conduct with Spain in 1898 will as little bear close scrutiny as that of Austria with Serbia in 1914."

In the American Legion history all this is ignored, possibly as not being strictly American history. At any rate this part of the story is devoted to the battles in which American troops participated, our huge loans to the Allies, the splendid organization at home and the sacrifices of the dollar a year men. There is no explanation of the Senate's rejection of the treaty, no hint of the vast sums wasted and stolen in the war and afterward, no reason for doubting that the war to make the world safe for democracy had done just that. Prof. Barnes does not agree. He says:

"We did not actually go into the World War to protect ourselves from imminent German invasion, or to make the world safe for democracy, but to protect our investment in Allied bonds, to insure a more extensive development of the manufacture of war materials and make it possible to deliver our munitions to Allied ports. . . .

"Even assuming that we did enter for the sake of advancing the cause of democracy, Mr. Wilson sanctioned during this crusade for Demos the most serious inroads upon democratic practice and human liberty in the history of our country, wiping out in three years most of the solid gains of a century and a half of struggle against arbitrary power."

The last few pages of the legion history are equally remarkable for their restraint. The interesting disclosures which followed Mr. Harding's death do not sully the page. There is none of the feeling which caused Prof. Barnes to cry:

"It is thus scarcely too much to say that the cost of democracy is essentially the cost of war and the preparation for war."

A Choice Of Evils.

One of our most cherished institutions, the political party, Prof. Barnes deals with in a manner which would hardly "inspire enthusiasm." The only difference between Republicans and Democrats, he says, is that the former have looted the Treasury more thoroughly but with more dignity.

"One may choose his American party affiliations, then," he concludes, "largely on the basis of whether he prefers to be blackjacked by a thug and relieved of $10 or courteously waylaid by a gentleman in full evening dress and dispossessed of $100.

"It is doubtful if we can ever hope to provide for thoroughgoing direct majority rule, and it is even more doubtful that this would be desirable if we could obtain it. What is disastrous in modern party autocracy is the type of leaders who have dominated contemporary political parties. What we need today is to substitute for the corrupt boss and his plutocratic backers properly educated and socialized leaders, who will realize their responsibility in public service and who will endeavor to use their position of ascendancy for the advancement and the well being of society."

In the chapter which Prof. Barnes devotes to "Democracy and Waste," he dwells on the graft, the pork barrel, the omnibus bills and, above all, the military and naval costs, in comparison with which all other government expenses are trivial. These, he finds, are just as excessive in democracy as in autocracy, pugnacity being a state of mind and not of government.

"Probably the only practical relief," declares Prof. Barnes, "will come from such incidental and superficial sources as the occasional existence of a President like Mr. Coolidge, blessed with a sense of primitive, bucolic economy, or a Governor like Alfred E. Smith, impressed with the desirability of introducing into state administration some modicum of the elementary principles of business economics."

The writer's estimates of Presidents Coolidge and Wilson, to each of whom he gives a chapter, illuminates clearly his attitude toward contemporary politics. The present President he describes as "a shrewd Yankee horse jockey of 1850, born out of his time," adding:

His Estimate Of Wilson.

"That he possesses a certain canny insight and innate shrewdness cannot well be denied. Yet his intellectual and educational limitations make it impossible for him to apply these qualities to the solution of the problems of contemporary statesmanship which in their scope and complexity quite outrun his limited outlook and intellectual grasp. The exactions of the office of Governor of Massachusetts put an over-severe strain upon his talents; those of the presidency of the United States simply overwhelm and submerge him."

Prof. Barnes goes into considerable more psychological and historical detail in writing of Mr. Wilson. He finds in Mr. Wilson's writing the words of a conservative and an aristocrat, forced into liberalism by circumstance and reverting after the war in his support of Attorney-General Palmer and Postmaster-General Burleson to his original ideas.

"Mr. Wilson's basic traits," says Prof. Barnes, "seem to have been fixed in childhood on a narcisstic pattern. It is, also, not an insignificant fact that, from his earliest recorded days, he was the recipient of uniform, persistent and extensive adulation from women. I here hint at nothing improper; (in a footnote he says, "the writer is firmly conviced of Mr. Wilson's sexual purity") I merely state a fact, itself certainly not discreditable. But every astute person knows the effect of such adulation upon masculine character, attitude and conduct. It makes for cockiness, self-assurance and intellectual exhibitionism."

Prof. Barnes solves the problems presented by the extreme complexity of Mr. Wilson's personality by "the flight of his mind from the reality of concrete situations into the illusory world of abstractions and rhetoric." For this he largely blames the habits of mind resulting from his 20 years as a lecturing professor.

All this discussion is used by Prof. Barnes to point a moral, the moral of history's place in the world. It is here that he chiefly takes issue with the school represented by the American Legion history. For he conceives history's role as educating men to a definite end—abandoning the ideal standard of truth for its own sake, which he has inferentially admitted is imposible. He concludes: "If the problems which face us are today more complex and baffling than ever before, it is apparent that we shall need as in no earlier period the freest and most untrammeled thought of the best intellects available. Hence blind conservatism, repression and censorship are today more wicked and foolhardy than at any earlier period in human history, and scientifically controlled liberalism, far from being merely desirable or tolerable, holds within itself the only possible hope of the salvation of the human race."

A NEW AUTOMOBILE FOR $1

If you should see such an offer, you would at once rightfully conclude it was a toy or a plaything—an imitation of the real thing.

Whenever anything is offered at a price far below the intrinsic value of similar goods—there's a catch somewhere.

When Glasses purporting to be valued at $10, $7.50 or $5 are offered for $1—be on your guard. The quality of the Glasses and the services you obtain in connection therewith are worth just $1, and your eyes deserve better treatment than that which is purchasable for $1.

If you are looking for a careful and conscientious eye test, properly made Glasses and fair and reasonable prices, come to my office.

SEWER PROJECTS IN COUNTY AWAIT COURT DECISION

Hearing on Constitutionality of Ralph Law Set for May 10 Before State Supreme Court.

Preliminary work in five incorporated sewer districts in St. Louis County, representing projects estimated to cost $2,700,000, which will serve approximately 50,500 persons, has halted pending a decision by the Supreme Court on the constitutionality of the Ralph Sewer District law, under which the districts were organized.

Workers organizing districts in North Wellston, Overland Park, Pine Lawn and other communities, likewise are awaiting the decision on the quo warranto proceeding seeking to remove the supervisors of the Northwest Maplewood District on the ground that the law is unconstitutional. The suit, filed April 10 by Attorney-General Gentry, at the request of Senator Ralph, author of the bill, and other attorneys, was brought with the expectation that the law would be upheld. The case is set for hearing May 10.

The former law, known as the County Court law, for the creation of sewer districts, was declared unconstitutional by Circuit Judge McElhenny at Clayton, Feb. 1, last, because of a defective title. This law provided for payment of sewer costs by tax bills in five years.

Bonds Payable in 20 Years.

The Ralph law permits the issuance of bonds by the sewer district, payable in 20 years. It is claimed that construction costs under the new law are much lower, the contractors, who formerly figured delay and cost in the collection of delinquent tax bills in their bids, being paid as the work progresses. The extension of time from five to 20 years also is held of particular benefit to the new, small home owner.

The largest of the incorporated districts is River des Peres District No. 1, which will serve Webster Groves, Shrewsbury, a portion of Glendale and parts of the county lying south of the west fork of the River des Peres and Manchester road and north of the Frisco railroad tracks. This area includes a population of 25,000, an increase of 30 per cent in two years. The estimated cost is $2,000,000. Several three-foot trunk lines will empty into the St. Louis system where the River des Peres reaches the city limits. A preliminary tax of 7½ cents per 100 square feet already has been assessed.

The Lemay Ferry district, including Luxemburg and environs, contains a population of about 8000, an increase of 40 per cent in two years and will cost approximately $250,000.

West Walnut Manor Incorporates.

An increase in population of 75 per cent in three years has necessitated a sewerage system in West Walnut Manor, where a community of 4000 has incorporated for the construction of a $200,000 project.

The Brentwood district, with a population of 3500, representing an increase of 50 per cent in three years, plans to lay trunk lines of sufficient size to meet the needs of 50,000 as a part of its $150,000 system. The district serves the northern part of Brentwood, being bounded by Clayton road on the north, Lay avenue and Gilbert street on the west, Manchester road on the south and Hanley road on the east.

Plans are complete for the construction of laterals to serve 2000 persons in the Northwest Maplewood district, where the population has doubled in two years. A preliminary tax of 4 cents per 100 square feet has been assessed. The district is bounded by Big Bend boulevard on the east, Manchester road on the south, Laclede Station road on the west and Bruno avenue on the north. The cost will be about $100,000.

Opposition in North Wellston.

Perhaps no community will await the action of the Supreme Court more anxiously than the residents of the proposed North Wellston district, where a well-defined opposition to the project has brought the question of constitutionality before Circuit Judge McElhinney. The district includes property south of Natural Bridge road, west of the city limits of St. Louis, north of Wellsmar avenue and east of Lucas and Hunt road. The population of 8000 is an increase of 40 per cent in three years. The estimated cost is about $750,000.

Opponents of the incorporation of the district declare the law is invalid because it is a special and local act, applying only to St. Louis county; that it violates the principles of majority rule, in that only 100 petitioners are needed, and it is unconstitutional because the creation of an indebtedness, as provided for, which may become a lien on the real estate, would result finally in the taking of property without due process of law. They further contend that sewers there are neither necessary nor desirable.

Agitation for organization of sewer districts has been started in Jennings, where the proposed area contains 5500 persons, and in Pine Lawn, with a population of 8000. The population has doubled in three years in both communities.

Miss Judith Dana Becomes Bride in an Elaborate Ceremony

Hundreds of Easter Lilies Decorate Church—Reception for Several Hundred Guests at Home of Her Parents.

THE fragrance of hundreds of Easter lilies greeted the fashionable congregation, which assembled at St. Michael and All Angels' Church late yesterday afternoon for the wedding of Miss Judith Virginia Dana, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Dana of Brentmoor, and James Ward Thorne Jr. of Chicago, the most elaborate held in St. Louis in recent years.

Clusters of the lilies nodded from low boxes at each window ledge and marked the satined pews for the families. More of them adorned the altar, lined the choir stall and filled the pulpit. At the chancel two sets of tall branched candelabra holding 44 cathedral tapers seemed to grow from a bank of Easter lilies to shed a soft light over the bridal party. The Rev. Dr. Karl Block read the service.

The bride wore an early Victorian period gown of ivory satin, fashioned with a close-fitting pointed bodice finished with a deep bertha of duchess lace drooped over the shoulder to form a suggestion of sleeve and a full skirt with a daintily scalloped hem from beneath which fell a wide tulle ruching. Appliqued embroidered flowers in each scallop trailed into vines at the upper skirt. Old fashioned lace mitts in lieu of gloves emphasized the quaintness of the costume. Her flowers were roses and valley lilies arranged Colonial fashion with a lace frill. Missourians Start Holiday Tours; Lively Spring Season Opens Abroad

PARIS, France, April 24.

SPRING is preparing the Emerald Coast of France to receive visitors by decking the peach and pear trees with blossoms. Deauville, famous fashion resort, entertained a large pre-season crowd for the Easter holidays. Le Touquet-Paris Plage, one of the newer channel resorts, is drawing visitors both from London and Paris.

The Basque Coast, from Biarritz to Hendaye, is having its usual spring success. The Biarritz fox hounds have been out often, the followers sometimes numbering more than 100. Just across the border, San Sebastian is preparing to welcome the Royal Spanish family for the summer.

The Italian lake resorts are playing host to visitors from a dozen countries. Stresa, on Lake Maggoire, has its worshipers of the Barromean Isles. Lake Como's constellation of beauty spots are filling with early spring visitors. Ceronobbio, Bellagio and Menaggio are awakening with the sap in the trees, and the golf courses are turning green. Locarno, the diplomatic town on the Swiss end of Lake Maggiore, is celebrating a camelia fete this week. The Sechselaeuten, Zurich's great spring festival, also was held this week. Golf, excursions and Bernard Shaw in Italian provide entertainment for spring visitors to Logano. The next Venetian festival will be held there on May 15.

Socially, Berlin's spring was ushered in by a big festival given at the Hotel Esplanade last week. Numerous Americans invited their friends to take part in the festivities. Mr. and Mrs. Paul von Gontard, formerly Miss Clara Busch of St. Louis were noted entertaining friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Orr of St. Louis, who recently completed a Mediterranean cruise, have been spending the past fornight at the Hotel Plaze-Athenee in Paris with Mrs. Warren Brown of St. Louis, who resides there permanently.

Wilson-Carr Wedding a Pretty Event in Webster

Five Hundred Guests Attend Ceremony at Bride's Home—Couple Depart for Honeymoon in the South.

MISS ELLA MARIE WILSON, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert E. Wilson of the Berry road, Webster Groves, became the bride of Alfred Chambers Carr Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Chambers Carr of 5719 Cabanne avenue in a pretty ceremony at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Rev. Father Collins of Our Lady of Peace Church of Webster Groves read the marriage ceremony in the presence of 500 guests.

A profusion of spring flowers decorated the home. The bridal party stood before an improvised altar of Easter lilies lighted by cathedral candles.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin of the Empire period, made with long tight sleeves, and a high waistline outlined in pearls. The back panel formed the train over which fell her veil of Brussels net, edged in rose point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Miss Julia Fay Carton, as maid of honor, and Miss Bertha Condie and Mrs. C. Edward Hermann, bridesmaids, were gowned in white georgette crepe, made simply with flared skirts and tiny cap sleeves. They wore picture hats of white horsehair trimmed in turquois blue velvet ribbons, and carried arm bouquets of spring flowers in the pink, blue, and lavender shades. The bride's young sisters, Margaret and Virginia Wilson in white lace frocks, trimmed in blue ribbons, held the white satin ribbons which formed an aisle for the wedding party.

Churchill Knapp was best man for Mr. Carr and Herman Wilms of Chicago and Edward Hermann groomsmen.

A reception followed, with a wedding sup-

Activities of Missourians In the Capital

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Society in the National Capital has centered around the Daughters of the American Revolution, which has been holding its annual continental Congress in the New Auditorium. President Coolidge was received by the Congress on Monday night and spoke, as did Speaker Nicholas Longworth and the French Ambassador.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who sat in a stage box, was introduced by Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president-general to the 4000 delegates. Mrs. Longworth arose and bowed in response to their applause.

On Wednesday afternoon, President and Mrs. Coolidge were at home to the thousands of delegates in the White House. This reception was given despite the mourning at the White House because it was regarded as an official occasion, it having been the custom at the executive mansion for years.

Missouri did not have any candidates on the national ticket of the D. A. R. this year. The State representative on the National Board of Management of the D. A. R., Mrs. A. V. Conelly, of Kansas City, who acted as reporter general to the Smithsonian Institution, retired from office at the close of the Congress. She was prevented from attending by illness. Mrs. John Trigg Moss, former vice-president general from Missouri, is prominently mentioned as a potential candidate for president general three years from now.

Mrs. Dwight L. Davis, wife of the Secretary of War, was among those who attended the opening session of the D. A. R. Congress.

Mrs. Mabel Parker Brueggeman was among those who entertained at the concert given last week by the Washington Symphony Orchestra.

Mrs. George Williams, wife of the Senator from Missouri, entertained at luncheon at the Congressional Club last week. Mrs. Williams is observing her Thursdays at home informally this spring.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Coontz, who are now at Hampton Roads, Va., had as their guest this week Admiral William A. Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Naval Aeronautics, who flew from Washington on an inspection trip.

Mrs. Cleveland Newton, wife of Representative Newton, was at home for the Missouri Daughters of the American Revolution.

James M. Thomson of New Orleans has returned to Washington from New York on his way back to his home in New Orleans. Mrs. Thomson, who was formerly Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, is now in New Orleans.

Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long have gone to Hot Springs, Va., where they will remain until the opening of the horse show in Washington, early in May.

Senator and Mrs. James A. Reed gave a dinner of 40 covers at the Mayflower Hotel on Tuesday night.

the same shade, made with boat-necked, sleeveless bodices and full skirts caught close at the hem line with green taffeta bows graduating up the left side to a small bow at the waist line. Their hats were of horsehair braid, tinted to match the gowns, with silver about the crowns and streamers of green tulle and apple green satin slippers with silver trimmings and heels completed the costumes. They carried vari-colored spring flowers.

George Corson Ellis of Chicago was best man, and William Harrison Luyties, Turner Clarkson and George Dana of St. Louis, Julian Farwell and Niblack Thorne of Chicago, Frank Stoner of Sewickley, Pa., William Henry Wemmer of Ohio and J. J. Livingood of Cincinnati, groomsmen.

Pink roses gave the dominating color note in the decorations at the Dana home, where a reception for several hundred guests followed. Rose trees, laden with blossoms, banked the fireplace as a background for the receiving line and arched the doorways. An open porch enclosed in canvas was transformed into a bower of roses, and baskets of the Claudius Pernet variety and blue delphiniums filled hanging baskets suspended at vantage points in the reception hall and music room. A bridal table seating 20 in the dining room had for its centerpiece dozens of roses and lilies of the valley, flanked by smaller vases and silver candelabra tied with tulle.

Mr. and Mrs. Thorne will sail Wednesday from New York for Bermuda to remain several weeks, and will make their home in Chicago.

The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. James Ward Thorne Sr., parents of the bridegroom; Mrs. Niblack, his grandmother; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. Alden H. Swift, his uncle and aunt, with their two children, and Mr. and Mrs. Newton Hudson, all of Chicago, and Miss Mildred Sawyer of New York, a cousin of Mr. Dana.

Mr. Thorne's gift to his bride was a set of solid gold dresser appointments, and Mrs. Thorne gave her attendants flat silver purses with filagreed monograms.

The bride is a graduate of Mary Institute and Miss Bennett's School in New York. She came out two years ago and is a member of the Junior League. Her family is an old one in Missouri, her grandfather, B. Gratz Brown, having been a former Governor and later candidate for the Vice Presidency of the United States on the liberal Republican ticket with Horace Greeley.

MONDAY morning the women of St. Louis and vicinity are invited to attend a Dress Sale that will establish a new high mark for these Garland events—long known as St. Louis' outstanding value-giving occasions. In the past we have held sales in which there were larger quantities but such a sale as this one places quality on a plane far above quantity. Here is one of those rare, awe-inspiring occasions that become a topic of comment for weeks.

We have purchased a collection of Frocks and Gowns that answer every need—daytime or evening—and offer them at the most extraordinary price, quality considered, in our recollection. We believe that you will experience the same thrill, when you see the offering that has been our pleasure in preparing it.

So eloquent are the values themselves that we have purposely been conservative in our claims of their true worth. We can but urge that you attend. Let your own eyes tell you what a marvelous selection we have prepared. You may find the less elaborate models to your liking or you may prefer the exquisite creations intended to be sold for $100 (and some even more), but we cannot recall a single instance of such a diversified selection at so remarkable a price.

Monday! Dress Salon—Second Floor

IF HAIR IS DRY
BLAME CONSTANT
CURLING, WAVING

Girls just must curl and wave bobbed hair to appear their prettiest. But constant curling and waving burn and dry the luster, vitality and very life from the hair.

To offset these bad effects, just get a 35-cent bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug store or toilet counter and just see for yourself how quickly it revives dry, brittle, lifeless and fading hair. "Danderine" is a dependable tonic and will do wonders for any girl's hair. It nourishes, stimulates and strengthens each single hair, bringing back that youthful gleam, glint and vigorous luxuriance. Falling hair stops and dandruff disappears. "Danderine" is pleasant and easy to use.

CAN a five or six dollar permanent wave really be a good wave? In all fairness, we say no. There is no hairdresser who can give you the time and attention, who can use the right equipment, who can exert the skill and artistry required to produce a permanent wave, and give it to you at this ridiculous price.
We have been giving our patrons the benefit of the very lowest prices compatible with good work—ten dollars for a permanent wave in our student department and fifteen dollars for a wave in the professional department—experienced operators and competent instructors in charge.
We have many patrons who come back to us time and again for permanent waves, because they have been so satisfied with our work and our prices. If you are planning to get a permanent wave this Spring you will find satisfaction here, too. May we serve you?

PLANNING TO PUT HOOVER CODE IN EFFECT IN STATE

Efforts to Reconcile Its Provisions With Traffic Laws of Missouri to Be Made at Conference.

Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association; Matt Morse, general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, and G. C. Varnum, secretary of the St. Louis Safety Council, make up a committee of St. Louisans which is to find a way to reconcile recommendations of the Hoover Safety Conference with Missouri statutes. The committee is to report at a meeting in Jefferson City April 29 preliminary to the State-wide conference on street and highway safety called by Gov. Baker for May 10-11 to draft a uniform set of traffic regulations that will be applicable through Missouri.

The committee is considering the Hoover conference recommendations as to certificates of title, registrations and examining and licensing of automobile drivers. A committee from Kansas City is to make recommendations on signaling and general highway driving practice.

Efforts will be made to draft a code for Missouri in harmony with the recommendations for the nation. It is planned to submit the recommendations to the next session of the Legislature in January, 1927.

Police officials of the traffic divisions in the largest cities in the State have been invited by the Governor to be present, as have other city officials from all cities and towns; members of Fire and Police Departments; County and Circuit Judges; Sheriffs and Prosecuting Attorneys; members of civic organizations such as Chambers of Commerce; merchants; manufacturers; business associations; automobile clubs and automobile dealers' associations; community safety councils; taxicab organizations; team and trucking interests; all public utilities, such as street railways, bus companies, railroads, and representatives of labor; school boards, women's clubs, bar associations and farm organizations.

Gov. Baker said that at the recent national conference on street and highway safety regulations were adopted providing for a uniform act governing operation of automobiles and other motor vehicles on streets and highways; a uniform motor vehicle registration and certificate of title act; a uniform motor vehicle operators' and chauffeurs' license act. Those and other subjects should be considered by the citizens of the State, he said, in order to make traffic laws in Missouri conform with those in other states.

"The rapid developemnt of our State highway system, together with the ever-increasing number of motor cars and motor travel, makes it al lthe more necessary that we bend every effort and give this problem serious consideration," he said.

Warns Gas Bootleggers.

Judge Rainey T. Wells of the State Tax Commission has warned dealers in gasoline that bootlegging in gasoline will not be permitted in Kentucky. He said the commission had received word that motorbus operators were carrying gasoline from states bordering on Kentucky into the State following enactment of the new 5-cent gasoline tax law.

BIDS ASKED FOR PAVING ON ILLINOIS NO. 2 WHERE WORK HAS BEEN HELD UP

BIDS will be received May 5 at Springfield, Ill., for paving on a number of State highways. Two of the jobs are of interest to St. Louis motorists. One is a stretch of 6.7 miles on Highway No. 2 at Clinton, in DeWitt County, where a right of way controversy has delayed completion of this great highway from the Wsiconsin line to Cairo. The other is on route No. 13—six miles of concrete near Vergennes, in Perry and Jackson counties, and 5.9 miles near Pinckneyville, in Perry County.

MOTOR VEHICLE TAXES GO UP 33 PER CENT IN YEAR

Increase in Special Imposts on Car Owners of $101,381,819 for Whole Country.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—While the increase of motor vehicle registration in the United States in 1925 was 13.4 per cent, the increase in the total amount of special taxes (exclusive of personal property tax) collected from motor vehicle owners by the 48 states and the District of Columbia was 33.2 per cent.

This is one of the facts brought out in connection with the issuance from national headquarters of the American Automobile Association of its motor vehicle registration and taxation map for the year 1925. Among other things, the map shows:

First, the average per vehicle tax levy for the entire country was $20 in 1925, as compared with $17.55 in 1924, an increase of 15 per cent in 12 months. The per vehicle tax has increased 133 per cent since 1919, when it stood at $8.55.

Second, special taxes collected from car owners by the states reached a new high peak last year, with a total of $406,648,561, as compared with $305,266,742 in 1924, an increase of $101,381,819.

Third, the states' revenue from the gasoline tax almost doubled in 1925, the total being $146,028,940, as compared with $79,734,789 the previous year.

Five states had more than 1,000,000 car registrations in 1925, these maintaining the same order as in the previous year. They were: New York, with 1,625,583; California, 1,440,581; Ohio, 1,346,400; Pennsylvania, 1,330,433, and Illinois, 1,263,177. Michigan had 989,010 and Texas 975,083.

In state fees, drivers' licenses and gasoline taxes, the highest five were: Pennsylvania, with $30,279,770; New York, $25,506,245; California, $22,773,087; Michigan, $22,762,089, and Ohio, $22,157,181.

In the amounts collected from the gas tax, California, with $14,956,789, led. Next came Ohio, with $9,009,950; Michigan, $8,236,078; Pennsylvania, $8,352,789, and Florida, $7,657,507.

The five states with the highest per vehicle tax were: North Carolina, $42; Florida, $39; South Carolina, $37; Oregon (where motor vehicle is exempt from personal property taxes), $38, and Arkansas, $33. Illinois, with $10, had the lowest per vehicle tax levy.

A. A. A. MEETING JUNE 7-8

The annual meeting of the American Automobile Association will be held in Chicago on June 7 and 8.

Scenes on Airline Route to Kansas City

Photos by R. H. Hall, Press Bureau, Automobile Club of Missouri.

PICTURES taken along Missouri Highway No. 2, the airline route from St. Louis to Kansas City, which Matt Morse, general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, reports in good, all-weather condition.

(No. 1.) Wood roadway in temporary use on No. 2 at a point 3.7 miles west of Concordia. It is built with a ridged center elevation so that a car, once on it, cannot roll off until it reaches the end. (2) The new concrete bridge over Perche Creek on No. 2. (3) The old covered wooden bridge over Perche Creek, which has been replaced by the concrete structure. (4) Showing how No. 2 has been cut through tops of rock hills east of Boonville.

Following an inspection trip, Morse stated that rumors that Highway No. 2 could not be traveled in inclement weather could be discounted. Construction will be going on much of the summer on several gaps in No. 2, but provision is being made to give motorists all-weather detours or graveled temporary roads alongside the construction work.

WATCHING BRAKES PAYS

Brakes should be adjusted every 1000 miles. Brakes that are not adjusted and equalized properly will rattle, shatter and squeak. The tread on one or more of tires is soon worn down, the frame of the car is distorted with strain and the wheels lose alignment.

REPORT ON STATE HIGHWAY 14 FROM ST. LOUIS TO CUBA

Road Conditions That Motorist Will Find on Main Artery Into Missouri Ozarks.

By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF.

Spring has clothed the Missouri hills along State Highway No. 14, the Springfield route, in verdure and blossoms through the counties adjacent to St. Louis. Meanwhile, the Sate Highway Commission is pushing pavement work.

Bourbon, in Crawford County, can be reached in an attractive drive of about 80 miles in any weather. The stretch from Bourbon to Rolla is fine in good weather and beyond Rolla there is an excellent ribbon or gravel penetrating the Ozarks. By autumn No. 14 is expected to be paved through to Cuba.

Paving Plans for No. 14.

Skidamaree, gasoline explorer of Post-Dispatch tours, eager after a winter of suburban loafing, has spun to Cuba and back to try out the road. The trip led to inquiry about construction plans on this highway, with the following findings:

Five miles of concrete is being laid from the present end of pavement near the Franklin-St. Louis County line to a point east of Gray's Summit. This will be finished about Sept. 1. The idea of a tunnel at Tucker's hill has been abandoned because of the nature of the underlying rock. A mile and a half of grading, to carry the highway through Gray's Summit, will be contracted for May 7. But, as this involves big fills, the earth with have to settle for a long time and a temporary surface will be necessary when the rest of the road is opened. Beyond there is a stretch of 45 miles to Cuba, all of which is under contract for concreting.

Auburn does not say the above claims are untrue. We simply ask you — "How can you judge a car's value by the dictionary?" Auburn also could make all the above claims, because we also own a dictionary. But, since there is only one way to judge a motor car, Auburn repeats what we have said in our advertising for a long time — "Drive the new Auburn yourself, test it, compare it, and if it does not sell itself, you will not be asked to buy." Auburn's success is due to this policy. And, this policy is possible only because of the quality of the Auburn car.

except 14.6 miles already paved and open to traffic. Grading has begun east of this paved strip and the job there will be completed in late autumn, while west of Bourbon grading has progressed farther and September is set as the time of completion.

New Road Junction Planned.

Between Cuba and Rolla No. 14 is maintained and generally is passable. The detour west of Rolla has been eliminated, and there is a fine new road on through Arlington, Waynesville and beyond.

Incidentally, on May 7 about six miles of concrete will be contracted to relocate No. 12, the Jefferson City route, between its junction with No. 14 and Union. The new junction will be at the Bourbois River instead of at Villa Ridge, and the route will parallel the Rock Island tracks into Union.

But to return to the journey—

The countryside is brightly dotted now with the pink of firebush, the white of dogwood, the delicate green of tree buds and the emerald of wheat fields. Landscapes smile enticingly out there, beckoning the motorist from valley to ridge.

To see this, go out Manchester road, always a pleasant drive in itself, and set the speedometer at 00.0 where the detour begins in Franklin County. The detour is in good, all-weather shape, winding over great wooded hills to Pacific, at 03.9.

If the roads are dry, the State route can be abandoned for the trip between Pacific and St. Clair, to diversify the tour. Leave the State's marked detour at a fork about a mile west of Pacific, taking the left-hand road instead of the right. This leads shortly to a ledge high above the Meramec River and then to a bridge across that stream. Upstream here is the land being developed for Shaw's Garden, on the north bank.

Along the Road.

This road leads to Catawissa, a Frisco Railroad station, where the turn is right, to parallel the tracks for a stretch, and eventually crossing the Meramec again near Robertsville. Next the main-traveled road to the left is followed. Surprisingly, it comes upon a bluff and, far beneath, the Bourbois River winds its way out of a broad valley. This is a tempting spot for a picnic lunch. Skidamaree's passengers lunched there, then discovered, almost under their feet, a little copperhead, hissing for all he was worth.

That incident should not frighten prospective tourists, though it should serve as a reminder that these and other snakes love sunny, rocky places, where they are hard to see.

The road proceeds into Moselle, past the spot where the Bourbois reaches the Meramec and supplies a gravel dredge with work. By turning right, along the Frisco tracks again, in Moselle, the motorist will be led to State Highway No. 30, the continuation of Gravois road. Turn right on No. 30 and go into St. Clair, the junction of No. 14 being at mile 27.7. There is a good gravel road out of St. Clair, from which grading for the new slab can be seen. The 14.6 miles of concrete recently thrown open starts at mile 35.6 and ends at Bourbon, 50.2. Beyond it there is a little green concrete curing.

From Bourbon the old, marked road, the highway of early motoring days, now well maintained, but mostly earth, is followed. It goes through Coffeyton and Leasburg, on the Frisco, and connects with the road which is to be paved just east of Cuba. At 65.0 is Cuba.

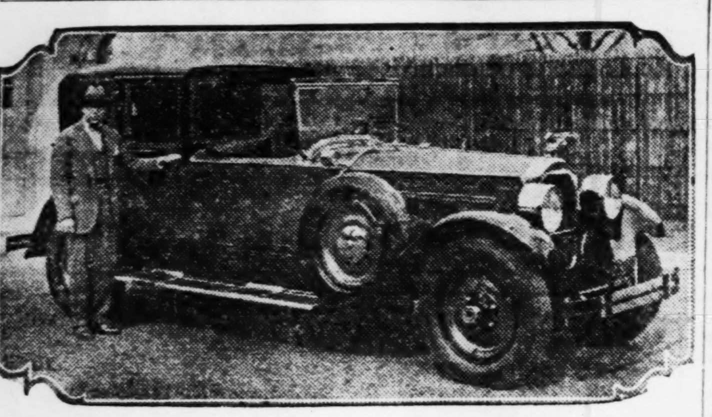
From the road here described, country roads may be followed to many finishing, hunting and vacation resorts, north and south. For instance, the big place south of Bourbon owned by a St. Louis printer, Onondaga Cave, south of Leasburg, and the Steelville section, south of Cuba.

Going back to St. Louis on No. 14 all the way, St. Clair is at 17.9; and Union, reached over an excellent ridge road, is at 125.0. The highway east of Union is in good condition, including the detour between Gray's Summit and Pacific. Mileage at Pacific is 144.1 and back at Manchester road is 148.0. From this point it is about 30 miles to residential St. Louis.

50 BUSINESS MEN FROM SAME CITY IN BUICKS DRIVE AWAY

Almost every day a few Buick owners from different parts of the country go to Flint to take delivery of their new cars. Often driveways leave the factory for widely scattered points. But 50 business men of Canton, O., put over a new one recently. Headed by their local dealers, they entrained for Flint in a body. When they left after a day spent as guests of the Buick Motor Co., each of the 50 was at the wheel of his new Buick.

Car Embodies Owner's Ideas



Wooster Lambert of the St. Louis Country Club Grounds and his new Packard eight cabriolet town car, delivery of which he has just taken from the Berry Motor Car Co. This custom built car, with body by Fleetwood, was designed to carry out Lambert's own ideas. The spare disc wheels are carried in wells on either side, and there is an exceptionally large trunk in rear for touring. The upholstery is imported broadcloth, with down cushions. Exterior finish is in Ditzler's marine blue with black bead and hairline gold striping. This is Lambert's third Packard eight.

DIANA 8 AVERAGES 49 M. P. H. ON CHICAGO-ST. LOUIS RUN

A fast run from Madison and Market streets, Chicago, to the McKinley Bridge was made Tuesday morning in a Diana straight eight roadster by Samuel Klein, a Chicago and Milwaukee businessman. Klein, with J. F. Darflinger, service manager of the Moon Motor Car Co. Chicago branch, as passenger, was checked out of Chicago at 4 a. m. Six hours 15 minutes later, at 10:15 a. m., he was checked at the McKinley Bridge. His speedometer showed 309.3 miles, so his average speed figured 49½ miles an hour.

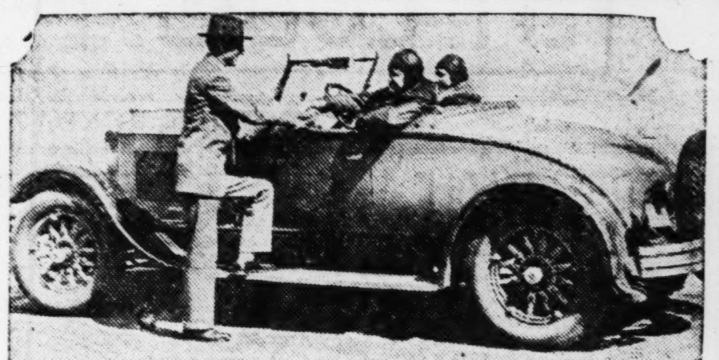
Klein made the run over State highway No. 4, via Joliet, Bloomington, Springfield and Mitchell. He was delayed by two long freight trains between Chicago and Mitchell, and, because of two more trains and bad street surface, it took him half an hour to drive from Mitchell to the McKinley Bridge.

The fastest trains make the Chicago-St. Louis run in 6 hours 30 minutes from station to station.

Klein's Diana car is the same in which he drove 97½ miles from the Northwestern station in Chicago to the same railroad's station in Milwaukee in 1 hour 50 minutes, averaging 53 miles per hour. He drove it 200 miles from Chicago to Springfield, Ill., in 3 hours 40 minutes, averaging 54 miles an hour, and 188 miles from Chicago to Davenport, Ia., in 3 hours 20 minutes, averaging 56 miles per hour.

Including Tuesday's run from Chicago to St. Louis, Klein had driven the Diana 6700 miles, most of the distance at speeds that tested the car's stamina and endurance to the utmost. He stated on arrival at McKinley bridge that not once had the car developed any mechanical or other trouble or weakness, and that it apparently was ready for any amount of continued speed work.

Makes Fast Chicago-St. Louis Run



Stanley Moon, secretary of the Moon Motor Car Co., congratulating Samuel Klein, of Chicago, on his fast run from Chicago to St. Louis in a Diana straight eight roadster. Klein's companion in the car is J. F. Darflinger, service manager of the Moon Motor Car Co. branch at Chicago.

TOURING BUREAU IN DEMAND AGAIN AS SPRING OPENS

Inquiries at Post-Dispatch About Roads Show Interest in Touring Is Kindling.

Interest in touring has begun to increase rapidly within the past few days. The Post-Dispatch Resort and Travel Bureau, which last year cared for more than 27,000 motorists in its first season, and the touring department of the Automobile Club of Missouri report many visitors seeking road information.

The demand for road maps is picking up. The Post-Dispatch Bureau has road maps of the individual states for 10 cents each or 12 cents each when mailed. It also has elaborate maps of the paved, all-weather and unimproved roads within a 50-mile radius of St. Louis, as well as the streams, sloughs and ponds. This map is 20 cents, or 24 cents when mailed. The bureau also has atlasses of road maps of the states west of the Mississippi River, with camp sites and information about the national parks and monuments. These or 50 cents, or 64 cents when mailed.

For the last week, the Post-Dispatch Bureau reports, motoring interest has been chiefly in the routes to Little Rock and Hot Springs and to cities in Northeastern Texas.

Many motorists who bought maps and atlasses at the Post-Dispatch Bureau last season are studying out their summer tours, then are bringing them to the bureau to make sure that the routes they have chosen are practicable.

Indications are that tourist traffic into the Missouri Ozarks will be heavier than ever before.

INCREASED TOURIST TRAFFIC INTO MISSOURI IS PREDICTED

A large increase in tourist traffic from all parts of the United States has been apparent during the past week, automobiles from California, Colorado, Kansas and Indiana being most in evidence among cars from other states, according to George Drummond, manager of the touring department of the Automobile Club of Missouri.

Drummond said that the club's touring department had handled thus far in April approximately 50 per cent more member requests for touring information than in March, and over 60 per cent more requests for information about roads in the United States from members of clubs in other states in April than in March.

There will be a decided increase in number of Missouri motorists, especially St. Louisans, who will tour extensively this year. Drummond said. The gradual completion of the Missouri State road system, especially Highway No. 2 between St. Louis and Kansas City, will do much to further touring.

Advices from American Automobile Association headquarters at Washington are that officers of many clubs affiliated with the A. A. A. predict a great increase in touring.

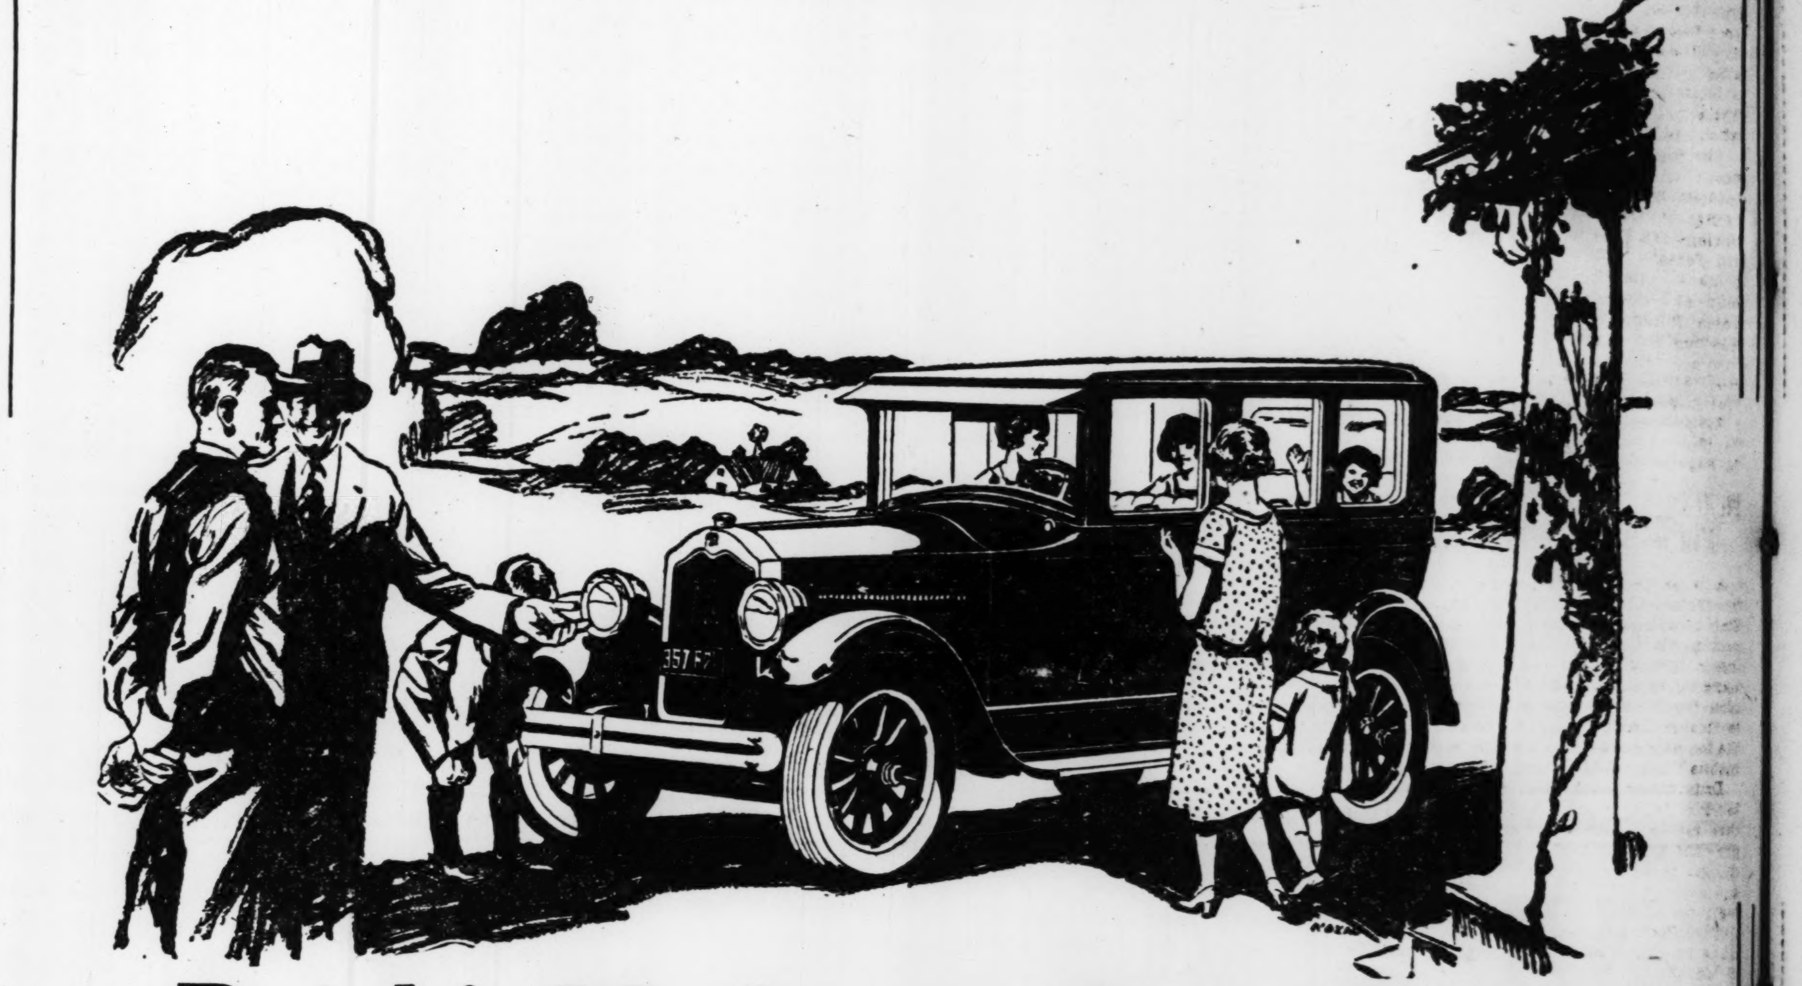
"IT'S A GREAT AUTOMOBILE"



Buick's Moderate Price Buys Quality--And Here's Why!

Buick can build a finer motor car and still keep prices low by reason of the great public preference that Buick motor cars have won.

Because so many people have bought Buicks and are continuing to buy nothing but Buicks, Buick's moderate price buys quality.

Every dollar of Buick's great volume savings is put back into Buick value.

Look, on other cars in Buick's price class or higher, for such fine-car construction as the Torque Tube Drive; Controllable Beam Headlights; mechanical 4-wheel brakes with operating parts of drop forged steel; Sealed Chassis; Triple Sealed Buick Valve-in-Head Engin; and luxurious Fisher Bodies.

You can see Buick superiority with your naked eye! Buick shares its price with many motor cars, but its value with none!

BACK IN ST. LOUIS TO BE MEMBER OF AUTOMOBILE FIRM

R. B. MANN,
Who returns to St. Louis to associate himself with the MacCarthy-Archer Automobile Co., Jordan distributers in this territory.

R. B. MANN TAKES INTEREST IN JORDAN DISTRIBUTERSHIP

R. B. Mann has resigned his position as general manager of the Detroit branch of the Packard Motor Car Co. and has returned to St. Louis, having purchased a substantial interest in the MacCarthy-Archer Automobile Co., Jordan distributers in this territory.

Mann has been a Packard executive for the last 13 years. His first connection was with the New York branch. Later he was general sales manager of the Chicago branch. For three years he was manager of the St. Louis branch before its sale to the Berry Motor Car Co. For the past three years he has had charge of the Detroit branch.

The MacCarthy-Archer Automobile Co., which has been established here for many years, will reorganize under a new corporate firm name, not yet decided upon. Mann will assume his duties immediately as vice president in charge of the sales department.

Before deciding to make this change, Mann made a survey of the Jordan organizations in Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia and Cleveland. He is enthusiastic over the prospects of Jordan sales in this territory.

PIERCE PETROLEUM CORP. CENTERS INTERESTS HERE

The Pierce Petroleum Corporation is enlarging its actvities in the St. Louis territory. The company is the oldest petroleum refiner in the United States. It was organized in 1855 by James Robert Finlay, who brought from Scotland a process for making coal oil out of coal found in Kentucky. Finlay organized J. R. Finlay & Co. and established his plant west of the city limits in St. Louis, at what is now Thirteenth and Gratiot streets, where the local plant of the Pierce Petroleum Corporation is located today.

After the Pennsylvania oil fields were developed in 1859, Finlay developed oil fields in West Virginia and brought crude barges to St. Louis. In 1865 the firm name was changed to the St. Louis Coal Oil Co. Henry Clay Pierce, who was associated with Finlay in his early enterprise, took the company over in 1869 and changed the name to the H. C. Pierce Co. In 1877, the name was changed to Waters-Pierce & Co.; in 1878 to the Waters-Pierce Oil Co., and in 1913 to the Pierce Oil Corporation. In 1924, the present name, Pierce Petroleum Corporation, was adopted. The general offices of the company were moved from New York to St. Louis early this year.

The Pierce Petroleum Corporation is a $26,000,000 company with its own producing wells, refineries and pipe lines. It has wide distribution throughoout the Southwest.

Pennant gasoline and motor oils are distributed through 178 filling stations and garages in St. Louis and vicinity and are dispensed from more than 700 cities and towns in the company's entire territory.

The Pierce Petroleum Corporation has just moved into temporary quarters in the International Fur Exchange Building, pending completion of the Pennant Building, which is under construction at Seventeenth and Locust streets.

ALBUQUERQUE-LOS ANGELES RECORD BY CLEVELAND SIX

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, April 24.—A Cleveland six, Series 31, sedan has just set a new record from Albuquerque, N. M., to Los Angeles. The elapsed running time of the Cleveland for this run was 24 hours, 26 minutes. This is one hour, 42 minutes better than the previous automobile record and one hour, 34 minutes faster than the best time of the west-bound California Limited, the crack train of the Santa Fe. No car trouble was experienced. The elapsed time for his run is particularly interesting; the Cleveland factory states that the sedan was strictly a stock model. This sedan was the same model which set a new record between Salt Lake City, Utah, and Los Angeles.

DIRT ON LINCOLN ROUTE IN IOWA NOW 124 MILES

Reduction in Amount of Road in State That Causes Trouble After Rain.

With completion of paving on the Lincoln highway between Marshalltown, Ia., and the Story County line, there are now 162 miles of concrete pavement on the Lincoln highway, 79 miles of gravel road, 124 miles of graded dirt road and 4 miles of ungraded dirt, in Iowa.

So in wet weather there are now 128 miles of mud to be traversed by the tourists crossing Iowa, a far better showing than that a few years ago.

Concrete paving on the Lincoln highway across Linn and Marshall counties in 1925 appears to have greatly stimulated the sentiment for hard-surfaced roads all over the state. Clinton was the first Iowa County to pave its Lincoln highway. The results of this paving were so satisfactory to its taxpayers that the electors of Clinton County voted, in February, 1926, another bond issue of $1,000,000. In Johnson County, lying immediately south of Linn County, a bond issue of $1,453,000 for paving primary and graveling secondary roads was submitted to the voters. The issue prevailed by a majority of 7 to 1.

As a result of the action in Johnson County, it is now believed that similar bond issues will carry in Cedar, Benton and Tama counties this year . Each of these counties has approximately 24 miles of unpaved Lincoln highway.

The State Highway Commission desires to see paving completed across each of these counties. Should their electors vote as did those in Johnson County, this will reduce the unpaved and ungraveled Lincoln highway mileage in that state to 56 miles, all of which is situated in Pottawattamie, Harrison and Crawford counties, the three most westerly counties on the Lincoln highway in Iowa.

The remaining 128 miles of dirt road will be properly surfaced within the next four years (if the plans of the Iowa State Highway. Commission are carried through). Then Iowa will have a completed Lincoln highway.

Much Copper Used in Autos.

The consumption of copper by the automobile industry in 1925 totaled over 245,000,000 pounds, a record figure.

ORDERS FOR $7,250,000 WORTH OF STUTZ CARS ARE REPORTED

The Stutz Motor Car Co. on March 31 had orders on hand to the value of $7,250,000, representing 2414 orders for cars for immediate shipment, according to E. S. Gorrell, vice president. All orders are for standard production to be moved to dealers as rapidly as the factory production facilities permit.

In March Stutz shipments were 527 cars, representing a value in excess of $1,500,000. This was the largest month's shipping record the company has ever established, the Benjamin Motor Co., local Stutz distributer, is informed.

NUMBER OF CYLINDERS DOES NOT FIX CAR RUNNING COST

Engineers have debated the relative cost of operation of an eight-cylinder motor as against the six. Here is Edward S. Jordan's comment: "The expense of running a motor doesn't depend so much on the number of cylinders as it does on the number of cubic inches of piston displacement.

"Take a given piston displacement and divide it up any way you want to, into two cylinders, four cylinders, six or eight cylinders and you will use just about the same amount of gas.

"Of course, the greater the number of cylinders, the more overlapping of power impulses occurs and the smoother the operation of the motor. But don't make the mistake of thinking that additional cylinders mean additional expense, unless the piston displacement is increased."

GERMAN INDUSTRIALISTS VISIT CHRYSLER PLANTS

The Chrysler Sales Corporation was host last week at Detroit to a group of German industrial leaders from the Leipsic Industrial Fair and representative of most lines of German industry from toys to automobiles.

The party visited both Chrysler plants and were impressed by the precision and quantity production methods which they saw. All were more or less familiar with modern machine shop practices, but said they never had seen anything to compare with the perfection of detail and of inspection in the manufacture of Chrysler cars.

The Packard Six
Five-Passenger Sedan

The Packard Six five-passenger Sedan is illustrated. It has proven the most popular of the eight beautiful and distinguished Packard Six body types.

First Cost vs Cost Per Mile

LAST year Packard Six sales were far more than double 1924 volume.

The reason for this greatly increased demand for Packard Six comfort, beauty and distinction is simple. An ever-growing proportion of the public is learning three important facts.

These facts are:

First. That the Packard Six is not high in price, costing far less than most men think. For example, the five-passenger sedan is but $2785.00 delivered at your door.

Second. That the Packard Six may be bought on a liberal payment plan which distributes its cost over a year. For example, the down payment on the five-passenger sedan is $720.00, from which is deducted the value of the used car turned in. The monthly payments are then but $191.61.

Third. That it is better business and real economy to buy a good car and keep it twice as long than to buy a succession of low-priced yearly-models cars—and pay in depreciation more than is saved in first cost. For example, the car most frequently turned in by Packard Six buyers has been driven an average of only 15,087 miles!

Those thousands who bought Packard Six cars last year expect to keep them at least twice as long as the cars they turned in. And 98% of those who bought Packard cars during the past six years are still Packard owners.

Packard Six ownership costs less by the mile. May we tell you more about this famous car? We will be glad to do it while you ride in one.

LOS ANGELES-SALT LAKE RUN RECORD SET BY STUDEBAKER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 24.—The fastest run ever made between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City, now a distance of 756 miles, has just been made by a Studebaker Big Six "Sheriff" model, which, running over a route 90 miles shorter than the one over which the previous record was made, broke the old record by 8 hours and 20 minutes. The Studebaker took only 16 hours 17 minutes elapsed time for the trip, so averaged 47.8 miles an hour. Even after deducting two hours because of the shorter distance traveled, the old record was broken by six hours. The Studebaker also broke the best railroad record by 8 hours and 9 minutes. The car averaged 16 miles to the gallon of gasoline—no water was added to the radiator.

The run from Los Angeles to Salt Lake City is generally upgrade. The Studebaker also encountered heavy wind and pouring rain for 150 miles.

The run was checked at both ends by the Western Union. The car was driven by Ab Jenkins of Salt Lake City, its owner, and Ray L. Peck, a Salt Lake garage man. Jenkins bought it several weeks ago, and had run it less than 1000 miles when he started the record-breaking run. He stated that it was stock in every way, except that hydraulic shock absorbers had been added.

Studebaker cars held the records both ways between this city and Los Angeles until a few months ago. Now, of course, it holds the record from the coast city and its time was better by 3 hours and 45 minutes for the Salt Lake-Los Angeles run than the 20 hours 2 minutes made by another car. Because of the down grade the trip from this city to Los Angeles naturally can be made in much less time.

CADILLAC SCHEDULES PUT UP 4 TIMES SINCE LAST JULY

Cadillac production schedules have been revised upward four times since the introduction of the new car in July last year. Lynn McNaughton, vice president, reports that these increases total 58 per cent of the originally anticipated yearly production. Dealer demand from widely separated points made the increases imperative, he said. Reports for 1926's first quarter indicate no letup in business. Shipments in March were 14 per cent higher than those originally estimated. They made March not only the largest March, but the largest single month in the company's history. "During the last year," says Mr. McNaughton, "we have definitely revised our opinion regarding the size of the market for cars selling at $3000 and above. Both for cash and upon sound purchase plans, persons are willing to invest in high-grade cars, when they have been brought to realize that such cars represent permanent value."

RIGHT HEIGHT OF CHASSIS ABOVE ROAD IMPORTANT

Hanging a chassis at a height to give an allover road clearance of 10 inches is most satisfactory on the greatest possible variety of road conditions, engineers of the Auburn Automobile Co. declare as a result of prolonged tests. The roadability of any car depends to a great extent on the distance of the weight center from the road surface. If the car is set too high, this elevation of the body weight makes it top-heavy and taking sharp turns is hazardous while handling the car is harder. If the car is too low to the ground, axles and other projecting points strike the higher road elevations and are a handicap in deep snow or ruts. Auburn, in designing the 1926 cars, went to great length to provide the proper height for the lowest chassis and running gear members.

A-C BRAKE SHOP NOW IN NEW SERVICE STATION

THE A-C Brake Shop, which specializes in complete brake service for automobiles and features Rusco brake lining, is now in its new building at 2723-37 Locust boulevard. The shop is equipped with special testing apparatus and the newest mechanism for saving time in fitting and adjusting brakes, and has a special department for servicing motor trucks with high bodies.

Instead of telephones, the shop and its departments are fitted with distograph speaking tubes to save time and complications. This and careful arranging of the shop for routing service work result in material saving of time and consequent savings for car owners.

William J. Chaudet, proprietor of the A-C Brake Shop, has specialized for years in brakes from the viewpoint of repairing and brake engineering. S. Fiorita is his service manager and Harold Linnenberger his chief tester.

SAYS 81 PER CENT OF ALL VELIES BUILT ARE IN USE

"When we recently announced that 81 per cent of all Velies built are still serving their owners we meant just that," says L. F. Murphy, general sales manager of the Velie Motors Corporation. "We have been building Velie automobiles for the past 18 years. Our figures include the cars we built from the very first year of our production. It can be appreciated then that we are making our statement on an extremely conservative basis. Had we used figures based on the last 10-year period, the number of cars in use would probably be actually greater than the number built. There are, however, many Velie cars still delivering good service which were built much longer ago than 10 years."

W. T. Chapman of the Chapman Motor Co., has been appointed Star six and four dealer in the Doniphan (Mo.) district.

TOTAL OF 9639 BUICK CARS DELIVERED IN TEN DAYS

Buick retail deliveries in the first ten days of April were 9639 cars, 1594 more cars than were shipped from the factory in the same ten days. The Buick sales department says dealers' stocks are the lowest in years at this season. The Buick production schedule for April is being held at around 25,000 cars, which was set in March. The Buick company is making every effort to complete a $2,000,000 expansion program which will make possible a monthly capacity of 30,000 cars.

Interesting Things On New Chandlers

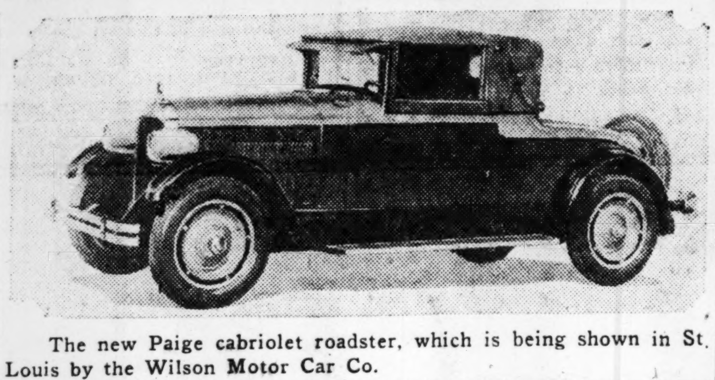
AN INTERESTING and worthwhile improvement in automobile steering gear is in use on the Chandler six. It consists of a flexible coupling in the steering wheel column, and its purpose is to dampen out road shocks when running over rough streets or highways so that they will not be transmitted to the driver's hands. Its principal part is a circular disc spring which affords just enough give and take to soften road shocks away to virtually nothing and at the same time is as rigid as the usual type of steering wheel column.

The crankshaft in the Chandler has been increased in size until it is three full inches in diameter and weighs 124 pounds. The four crankshaft bearings have been increased in length, as well as in diameter, and a second flywheel has been fitted at the front end of the crankshaft. The result is that the Chandler engine, which has won a name for power, runs with astonishing smoothness and lack of vibration.

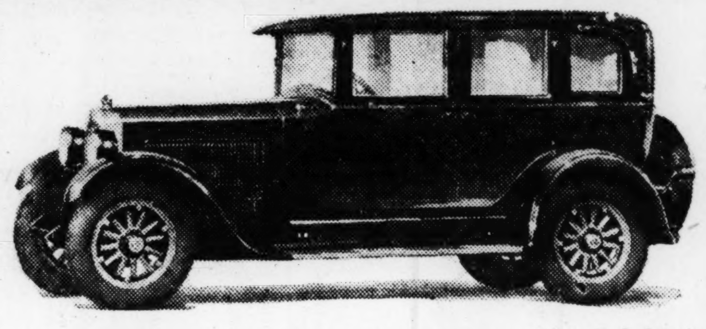
An automatic take-up keeps the spring shackle bolts always tight and free from rattles. The rear springs are now 59¼ inches long, and Chandler springs are calculated for the weights of the various types of bodies. For example, rear springs on Chandler roadsters have eight leaves; those on coupes have nine and those on sedans have 10 leaves. A Chandler chassis, on which all these features are very much in evidence, is being exhibited by the Lewis Automobile Co. at its showroom, 4700 Washington boulevard.

Ford Factory in Germany Opens.

The Ford Motor Co. of Germany has begun operations in its new plant at Pliotzensee, a suburb of Berlin. It is planned to build about 700 cars the first month.



The new Paige cabriolet roadster, which is being shown in St. Louis by the Wilson Motor Car Co.



The new Studebaker Special Six brougham, which is being exhibited by the Weber Motor Car Co.

New Studebaker Special Six Brougham

A NEW Studebaker special six brougham of the four-door type is being shown by the Weber Motor Car Co. Like all other Studebakers, it has the gracefully curved visor integral with roof. "D" windows in the rear quarters and landau irons enhance the appearance of stylishness. Seats are full width, so that the car accommodates five persons comfortably. All doors are wide, so that entrance and exit are easy. Upholstery is of fine blue woolen fabric or gray mohair is optional at $100 added cost. Equipment includes clock, gasoline gauge, full-sized balloon tires, stop light, inspection lamp, dome light and aluminum-bound trunk rack. This brougham is on a 120-inch wheelbase. It is delivered at $1985 with wool upholstery and at $2085 with mohair.

Gas and Oil Expense Low.

The average motor car, it is estimated, uses 300 gallons of gasoline a year. At 21 cents a gallon, this would be only $63, while lubricating oils, it is estimated, cost only $11 more.

FRENCH FIRM PLANS TO MAKE 100 CARS A YEAR AND SELL 60 IN U. S.

TESTS are under way of a new Bugatti car which the Bugatti Co. of France plans to produce at the rate of only 100 a year. Of the 100, the company hopes to sell 60 in this country, 15 in France, as many in England, and 10 in Italy. If the car stands up in the tests, tentative plans are to fix a price of about $12,000 for the chassis and $18,500 for a complete closed model. The Bugatti car is famous on European race tracks and a sports model of it is sold with a guarantee that it will run 100 miles an hour, or 120 miles an hour if specially tuned.

Hudson-Essex Seat Arrangement Changed

A NEW seating arrangement in Hudson and Essex cars, by which it is said an advanced standard of comfort is provided the passengers, is announced by the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., Hudson-Essex distributer in St. Louis.

"This new plan," says R. C. Frampton, "is used in the Hudson brougham and in both the Hudson and Essex coaches. The front seats in all these cars are now of the 'individual companion chair' type, and have been so changed in design that one can be assured of a seat which fits him like a tailor made suit. I believe this is the first time in the industry this advantage has been afforded in a standard car.

"The factors which make a chair comfortable or uncomfortable, of course, are the position of the sitting cushion and of the back. In the new seats, both these parts of the chair can be adjusted to any position desired. As a matter of practice, we ask each purchaser to find out by experiment which position he likes best, and when this is found, the chair is made to conform to it.

"At the same time we show that he can change the adjustment if he wishes with less than five minutes' easy work. For instance, if the driving seat is set in position for a man, it can be easily adjusted so that his wife may drive without reaching for the pedals. Or on long drives the position may be changed as a matter of variety. Another advantage is that the two front seats need not be adjusted alike, but each may be suited to the person who uses it most.

"This advance in design is proving highly popular—particularly in the Hudson brougham, in which we formerly used a bench seat. The trouble with that type of seat was that it could not be adjusted to suit everybody as the 'companion chairs' can. Also, chair seats are much more comfortable in warm weather."

UPHOLSTERY RIGIDLY TESTED BY UNIQUE FORD METHODS

Determining the life of upholstery long before it is used to trim a car is a problem which the Ford Motor Co. has solved by a number of unique and conclusive tests. Before Ford upholstery cloth is released for production, samples are eaten by chemicals, pulled apart and even worn out in an especially constructed rubbing machine.

Some of the cloth used in Ford cars is manufactured in the Ford plant where it may be held to the required specifications. Most of the upholstery, however, is supplied by outside sources and must prove its fitness before being used.

Color and structure of the cloth are first scrutinized. Then, samples are sent to the laboratory for chemical and physical tests. In the test for tensile strength, samples from the running direction or warp of the cloth, and from the cross direction or the woof of the cloth, are pulled to pieces by a standard testing machine. Although the Ford specifications are unusually rigid, upholstery now being used shows virtually twice the required strength.

In another test, a cushion is trimmed with sample upholstery and placed in a machine with a cushion trimmed with material of known quality so that the faces of the two cushions touch. Then the machine rubs the two cushions back and forth at the rate of 120 times per minute, until one or the other is worn out. If the sample wears out first, it is discarded. But if it stands up as long as the cushion trimmed with the known material, it has proved itself to equal Ford standards.

Cabriolet Roadster On Paige Chassis

A DASHING custom built model is a new Paige six cabriolet roadster which is being shown by the Wilson Motor Car Co., This model is a stanch solid coupe in stormy weather, with full-sized glass windows that rise from out both doors. In fair weather, the whole top can be lowered, so that the car becomes a rakish roadster. A rumble seat provides seating space for two additional passengers. The feature of the new roadster is the elaborately worked out upholstery—in the rumble as well as in the main compartment. The upholstery is leather, finished with an embossed surface that resembles watered silk. The rumble seat has arm rests, and these, too, are carefully upholstered. Exterior finish is in two tones of blue and gray. There is a double black bead on the body which is continued as a single bead on cowl and hood. The folding top is covered with khaki colored cloth. Disc wheels are standard, as are balloon tires and full equipment. The car is $2410 delivered.

Tows Star Car With Fish Line.

The R. T. Mitchell Co. gave a demonstration in Ogden, Utah, to prove the easy rolling of a Star car. For three blocks on the principal downtown street a boy towed the car with a fish line.

First Peerless Roadster in Green

THE first of the model "72" six-cylinder Peerless roadsters that has been finished in green is being shown by the Park Automobile Co. It is a two-tone job, with black bead striped in gold. This roadster is not only unusually lithe and racy in appearance, but also has a distinctive, streamlined rear end. The rumble seat is finished as carefully as the front compartment. This roadster is on the larger of the two six-cylinder Peerless chassis, and is especially speedy and powerful, rivaling the eight-cylinder Peerless in performance.

G. M. C. HAS NEW LINE OF 10 TO 15-TON TRACTOR TRUCKS

The General Motors Truck Co. is introducing a new line of GMC "Big Brute" tractor-trucks in 10 and 15-ton sizes. These newest GMC models are companions to the GMC "Big Brute" three and one-half and five-ton trucks recently announced and give the General Motors Truck Co. a complete new line ranging in capacity from one to 15 tons.

The GMC "Big Brute" tractor-trucks, while closely following the principles of the "Big Brute" trucks, have been designed for heavy duty work.

These tractor-trucks with a semi-trailer attached, can turn around in a 34-foot street without "jockeying" even if the length of the trailer is equal to the width of the street itself.

In combination with this short turning radius, the GMC worm and split nut steering gear give these tractor-trucks a maneuverability such as has never before been attained. Specially designed front springs, double progressive rear springs and the essential comforts of the Fisher built cab, which is standard equipment on all tractor-trucks, make for efficiency of operation.

The power plant is a 52-horsepower GMC engine, developing tremendous reserve power in conjunction with the GMC two-angle transmission.

CHEVROLET FACTORY TO HAVE SCHOOLS FOR ITS SALESMEN

More than 17,000 Chevrolet salesmen are to be trained in 3700 national sales schools conducted by the Chevrolet Motor Co. in May to insure the automobile buyer accurate and complete information on the car he is considering purchasing. Dealers are being instructed in conducting the schools, which will consist of five evening classes from May 10 to May 24. A textbook, "Selling Chevrolets," prepared for the salesmen, is regarded as the most complete of its kind. It sums up the experience of years of intensive study and investigation within the Chevrolet selling organization and is filled with authoritative information on the improved car.

Salesmen will be examined at the close of each class through written answers to a questionnaire. Men attaining an average grade of 80 per cent or more for the course will get awards of merit signed by R. H. Grant, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

Aluminum Strip Saves Wear.

By placing a metal strip of aluminum along the upper edges of the doors and bdy sides as well as along the upper edge of the front seat on a Flint sport model the designer overcame a source of trouble. Such edges on a motor car always suffer heavy and neither lacquer, enamel or varnish will withstand the service as will aluminum.

Ford

Highest in Quality Lowest in Price

Ford cars are built throughout of the finest materials that can be produced. The very best steels available are used in Ford manufacture. The plate glass for windshields and windows is as perfect as can be made. Upholstery material contains a larger percentage of wool than is ordinarily specified—even for much higher priced cars. The basic features of Ford design have never been improved upon by any manufacturer.

No other car offers greater dependability. The Ford car has won the favor of millions of users, under every conceivable motoring condition. Its convenience is known and appreciated the world over; its performance is taken for granted.

Such quality is possible at Ford prices because every operation, from mining of ore to final assembly is under direct control of the Ford Motor Company.

Iron is taken from Ford mines in Michigan; coal from the Company's mines in Kentucky and West Virginia. Glass comes from Ford glass plants; wood from the Ford timber tracts in the North. Raw materials and finished products are carried over the Company's own transportation routes; coke ovens, blast furnaces, a steel mill, foundries and saw mills—all are part of this complete organization. There are even salvage plants, paper mill, cement plant, etc., to transform waste materials into useful by-products.

In this way every possible economy is effected. Under no other circumstances could Ford quality be had at Ford prices.

Features That Maintain Ford Leadership

Simple, Dependable Lubrication

The Ford lubricating system is simple and efficient. Practically all of the parts of the engine and transmission are oiled from one oil reservoir in the crankcase. No pump is required.

Three-Point Motor Suspension

First used by Henry Ford in 1908 and a feature of the Model T power plant for eighteen years.

Thermo-Syphon Cooling

Circulation of water is entirely governed by engine temperature. There is no water pump requiring frequent need for packing.

All-Steel Bodies

Built entirely of steel to provide maximum safety and service, the bodies of Ford cars are as carefully manufactured as the Ford engine and chassis.

Dual Ignition System

(1) The Ford magneto and (2) the generator and storage battery. Elimination of the magneto would reduce production costs—but Ford standards specify the additional value.

Multiple Disc-in-Oil Clutch

Generally conceded to be the best, the smoothest and the most reliable for any car. The Ford clutch operates in a bath of oil. This assures smooth, silent action and long life.

Planetary Transmission

The Ford planetary transmission is the ideal speed control for a light car. Costs more to build than the conventional sliding gear type, but is used because of its superiority.

Torque Tube Drive

Henry Ford originated the Torque Tube in 1903. By use of this construction the rear spring does not take any of the driving thrust and is free to act solely as a flexible support for the car body.

CHEVROLET FACTORY TO HAVE SCHOOLS FOR ITS SALESMEN

More than 17,000 Chevrolet salesmen are to be trained in 3700 national sales schools conducted by the Chevrolet Motor Co. in May to insure the automobile buyer accurate and complete information on the car he is considering purchasing. Dealers are being instructed in conducting the schools, which will consist of five evening classes from May 10 to May 24. A textbook, "Selling Chevrolets," prepared for the salesmen, is regarded as the most complete of its kind. It sums up the experience of years of intensive study and investigation within the Chevrolet selling organization and is filled with authoritative information on the improved car.

Salesmen will be examined at the close of each class through written answers to a questionnaire. Men attaining an average grade of 80 per cent or more for the course will get awards of merit signed by R. H. Grant, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

Aluminum Strip Saves Wear.

By placing a metal strip of aluminum along the upper edges of the doors and bdy sides as well as along the upper edge of the front seat on a Flint sport model the designer overcame a source of trouble. Such edges on a motor car always suffer heavy and neither lacquer, enamel or varnish will withstand the service as will aluminum.

Bus Trips From St. Louis

By JEAN CAMERON.

A bus trip of about 100 miles which takes the traveler into some of the busiest manufacturing centers on the East Side, and through a part of the richest farming lands in Illinois, is made in motor coaches of the Superior Bus Co., carrying interstate passengers between St. Louis and Jacksonville, Ill.

The first bus in the morning leaves Famous-Barr garage at 7:30. The route is across the Free Bridge to East St. Louis, National City, Venice, Madison and Nameoki. Here for the first time on the trip, city streets and city traffic are left behind, and now and then off to the left are glimpses of the prosperous farms and rich bottom lands toward the river, until presently the bus is running through the northern part of the richest farming lands in Illinois, known to the early settlers as the American Bottoms.

Scenes Along the Way.

Long Lake, with its boats, cottages and other accommodations and attractions for summer guests and picnickers, is seen on the left. At Mitchell, State highways No. 3 and No. 4 separate, No. 4 turning right toward Edwardsville, while the bus continues on No. 3 through Hartford, Wood River, East Alton and Alton.

Gradually the road approaches the river, until before Alton is reached there are many lovely water views.

Alton is the principal city of Madison County, and if one stops there, a delightful and interesting day can be spent climbing and perhaps picnicking on the bluffs, which in some places rise 250 feet above the river, or in seeking historic places and scenes in this old river city, started as a French trading post in 1807 and laid out in 1817.

McCluskey is the next scheduled stop beyond Alton, and at Jerseyville, county seat of Jersey County (named by early settlers who came from New Jersey about 1834), the bus halts for a few minutes before continuing to Carrollton, county seat of Green County. This is a still older city than Jerseyville, having been settled about 1820 by Gen. Fry, pioneer soldier, who won his title in the Black Hawk War and served in the Civil War, in spite of his advanced years. Between Jerseyville and Carrollton are some of the finest farm homes along the highway. Several mansions of brick and others of frame in purest colonial style of architecture, with well-kept grounds, are particularly attractive. The country is prairie land, in places slightly rolling, and great barns and silos bear mute witness to the general prosperity. It is said that land in this section is worth $250 to $350 an acre. Belltown, Whitehall and Roodhouse, all in Green County, are passed in succession, and Scott County is entered before reaching Manchester. Murrayville, Woodson and South Jacksonville are next, and Jacksonville is reached at 11:30.

Here connections with other bus lines can be made for Pittsfield to the west, or for Chicago, via Springfield toward the east. It is expected that another bus line for Quincy will be in operation before the season is over.

Jacksonville, county seat of Morgan County, was laid out in 1825, though probably the first settlers arrived four or five years previously from Virginia and Kentucky. These were followed by a wave of New England pioneers, and the vicinity was considered for years as the most "Yankeelike" in the State, as the names of the surrounding towns attest.

At Jacksonville.

It never has been a manufacturing or business city, but from its earliest years has been almost exclusively known as an educational and institutional center. Here is a State insane asylum, occupying several hundred acres, and caring for about 3500 inmates. Here is an institution for the blind, another for the deaf. Illinois College, with several hundred students, was the first to graduate a collegiate class in the State. In 1931 the Rev. Edward Beecher, son of the famous preacher, Henry Ward Beecher, became its president. The Illinois Woman's College, commenced in Jacksonville in 1830, was the first "Female Academy" (as it was then known) in the State. A Catholic college has been established there in more recent years. Among the more famous of Jacksonville's early lawyers were Stephen Douglass and Richard Yates, later known as the "War Governor."

Bad Places in Road.

State Highway No. 3 has been completed, and is in fine condition, except for several strips of dirt just outside of towns, which are to be completed this year, and for three breaks of a few hundred yards left for the subways to be built under grade crossings, one at the C., B. & Q. tracks and two others at C. & A. crossings. Two of these are very bad in wet weather, as are several temporary detours in towns, necessitated by street and sewer construction. The Superior Bus Co., with a fleet of Yellow coach and Studebaker busses, operates three round trips daily each way.

How you can profit by the experience of others when buying a motor car today

WHY are so many people buying the Overland Six today . . . what is the reason for this tremendous popularity . . . and what do present owners say about their cars?

Recently we asked thousands of owners what were the particular reasons that made them select an Overland Six in preference to other competing makes?

Out of 1024 replies received from one city, 863 owners stressed the TREMENDOUS POWER of this car.

"Its wonderful performance sold me", said one owner. "I get a thrill every time I drive it."

"Its beauty and comfort", answered another. "Easy handling and the splendid reputation of the Overland."

"If others knew what I know about the Overland Six, they would certainly purchase no other car of the same class", replied still a third. "My Overland is a little over one year old, has traveled 20,000 miles and is averaging a little over 22 miles to the gallon".

Such popularity as this is not a chance result. Sheer merit alone has won this whole-hearted praise from 92,000 owners.

They all praise its power

Owners everywhere tell us about the remarkable performance of this car. Its power, flexibility, acceleration and pick-up absolutely defy description.

Up to 60 miles an hour whenever you want it. 5 to 40 miles an hour in 21 seconds. Ability to take, on high, mountain grades which few cars have ever climbed in high gear. That's the dashing, thrilling performance of this Overland Six.

It will absolutely out-pull, out-run and out-perform anything else of its size, or weight, or price-class.

Full 40-brake horsepower is delivered in a straight line from its low swung engine through to the rear-axle shaft. The result is a speed capacity that is positively amazing.

It took 2 years to design and build the Overland Six. And in addition 12 months to test it. We doubt if any car ever built received more careful study from the engineering standpoint.

It embodies the major advantages of 18 of Europe's and America's finest motor cars. Plus many others our own engineering experts developed.

The Overland Six will turn in a forty foot circle. Rear springs are underslung and 52" long. 141 square inches of braking surface provide an ample safety margin.

It has more inside space. More cubic feet than the average car of this price.

The result is ample comfort for 5 full-size passengers . . . with plenty of room to step in or out . . . room to stretch your legs with the utmost ease.

The seats are wider, the windows larger, the doors much broader. All features you'll certainly appreciate when you inspect rival cars of this price.

Plus style from the Rue de la Paix

In style and body lines this car resembles the creations of famous European coachmakers.

The famous Hispano Suiza, the Belgian Minerva, the Italian Fiat and other costly foreign cars frankly influenced its design.

It is smart, yet unobtrusive . . . in dignified good taste.

And contrasting with this beautiful appearance, is the sturdy, rugged way it's built. In this car we use the same steels, the same standards of material and workmanship we employ in building the famous Willys-Knight.

The world affords no finer quality.

Fine Cars on a tremendous production basis

Under ordinary production standards this Overland Six Sedan could not be sold within $300 to $400 of its price.

Yet because of the tremendous purchasing power and production facilities of the great Willys-Overland organization, this quality Six now sells for only $935 f. o. b. factory.

To spend more is extravagance. To pay less means a great sacrifice in comfort and performance.

Get the utmost for your money. Ride in this car . . . test it in comparison to the value others offer. In fairness to yourself, buy no car until you do.

PARTS SALES TO OAKLAND DEALERS ONLY $7 PER CAR

Service department records of the Oakland Motor Car Co. for 1925 reveal that parts sales to Oakland dealers averaged only $7.08 per car, based on the number of Oakland cars known to be in operation. As these parts sales included a large volume of accessories, the actual parts used for replacement averaged much less than the per car amount given. The number of Oakland cars in service totaled 248,658, including all Oakland cars registered on Jan. 1, 1925, plus cars sold during the year. Approximately 20 per cent of these cars are more than five years old.

Change in Attitude of Motorists Toward Speed

How Much Driving at 40 to 45 M. P. H. Car Will Stand Without Being Hurt Is Now the Big Question.

By "SPENCE."

Interest of motorists in the speed possibilities of standard automobiles seems to be changing in direction. Interest in racing cars and racing drivers apparently is keener than ever, as is witnessed by the building of new board speedways and indications that this year's 500-mile race at Indianapolis will attract the largest crowd in its history. But when it comes to stock models for street and public highway use—well, the change in attitude of the public was put the other day by E. T. Ustick Jr., president of the Rickenbacker St. Louis Co.

Two Questions Tell Story.

Ustick and the writer had been discussing the special 100-h.p. stream-lined Rickenbacker eight, which is guaranteed to do 90 miles an hour over a measured mile. Word had just come that this speed job, which was introduced at the automobile shows, had been put into production and soon would be turned out at the rate of one a day. Ustick said he expected that some of these cars would be bought by St. Louisans, as there was considerable interest in them. But he recalled that "Eddie" Rickenbacker had said that this "super sport" job was not designed for general use, but for the comparatively few men who wanted and could afford to pay $5000 to gratify the desire to "have a boat that will pass anything I want to."

"You know," Ustick continued, "last fall people were all for speed. 'How fast will it go?' was generally the first question asked about a car. Today relatively few ask that question. Those who do are usually young men. Now, people want to know 'How does it run at 45 miles per hour, and how long can I drive it 40 to 45 miles per hour and not hurt it?'

"Evidently people are realizing that a good car will run as fast as it is safe to drive it, and faster. With the rapidly increasing mileage of paved roads and the general use of balloon tires, they are coming to feel that ability to hit a sanely fast pace and keep it up is far more important and far more practical than mere ability to do 70 to 80 miles per hour for a few miles now and then. And 40 to 45 miles an hour is safer today on good highways with four-wheel brakes and balanced cars than 25 miles an hour used to be. If your car will stand long stretches of 45 miles an hour running, you can cover a lot of road in an afternoon or a day of touring.

"There is no question that a good car will stand that kind of running hour after hour. A Rickenbacker six, for instance, that I recall offhand, has been driven 26,000 miles. It has made many trips to Chicago and back at high average speed. Prolonged sessions of 40 and 45 miles per hour are commonplaces in its life. Yet its engine has never been taken down; in fact, the only work that has been done on it is to grind the valves. As far as we can see it is running as sweetly as ever.

"A salesman recently brought to us a Rickenbacker six that he had driven 22,000 miles, mostly at pretty high speed, for he drives fast and hard. He wanted us to sell the car for him so that he could get the newest model. Because we were going to sell the car and guarantee it, we took down the engine, thinking, because of the way we knew he had driven, that there might be some cylinder wear. We put a micrometer on the cylinders. It showed wear of 1½ to 2 thousandths of an inch—not enough to bother about. Yet, remember that car had done 22,000 miles of fast going.

"These are only two out of any number of cases that prove that a good car of today's make will stand 45 miles an hour driving without being injured. As people realize it, and then realize what it means in extending their week-end trips and touring radius, their interest in speed naturally takes a new direction."

U. OF M. ENGINEERS SEE FILM OF OLDS FACTOR

"A Trip Through the Olds Motor Works," a moving picture film, was shown by invitation to the Engineering Society and Engineering Class of the University of Missouri at Columbia, Mo., Wednesday night by R. H. Connell of the De Luxe Automobile Co., Olds six distributer in the St. Louis district.

The showing was in the engineering building of the university and the picture was viewed by about 120 student engineers and members of the Engineering Society and members of the faculty. The picture was followed closely and applauded warmly by the audience. At the close of the run, various parts of the Oldsmobile motor were examined by the engineers.

Prior to the showing of the picture, Capt. Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, talked to the engineers on "The Relation of Automobile Development to Highway Building and Community Development," arguing that the automobile had done more for the development of highways, and more for community development, than any other one agency.

All Its Looks Imply!

THE very smartness of the new Chandler is its badge of quality. It looks powerful, and is powerful; it looks comfortable, and is comfortable; it looks just what it is—a car built for years and years of happy motoring.

Chandler has gone well beyond the average attainment in modern body development, in chassis construction, in motor efficiency. And yet Chandler prices are today very much lower than they were a year ago.

As a striking instance of this, just look at the new Twentieth Century Sedan, here pictured. This great 4-door Sedan is priced only $1590, plus freight and tax—which is $405 less than the corresponding model of a year ago. Think of it!

Unusually Appealing Prices

Besides the great record-winning power of its Pikes Peak Motor, the new Chandler offers the inestimable advantages of "One Shot" centralized chassis lubrication. To oil the entire chassis you simply sit in the driver's seat and press a plunger with your heel!

"One Shot" eliminates all the inconvenience, work, worry and uncertainty of keeping the car properly lubricated. Some of the highest-priced cars have already adopted centralized chassis lubrication—and many other cars are planning to embody it in later models.

The best test of any car in Chandler's price range is how well it is able to compare with Chandler. Do ten or twenty miles in a new Chandler today. Let performance speak for itself.

AUXILIARY OILING BENEFITS CAR BY PREVENTING WEAR

Perfection of Engine and Chassis Lubrication Gives Motorist Time for Minor Things.

Motorists today are saving parts of the car and its accessories which in the past dried up, rusted and wore out prematurely. They are not taking any extra time in which to do this work. In most instances the time used is a fraction of that formerly consumed in greasing the major units or in changing the engine oil.

The hinges of the average hood are benefitted by little oiling now and then. Where the sides of the hood rest on the radiator shell and the flange of the cowl lubrication is particularly necessary. Whereas, the hinges require a light oil, the hood sides should be smeared with graphite or a heavy cup grease. When the hood sides are locked down there is considerable friction at these points, and whatever lubricant is used must have body.

AUXILIARY OILING BENEFITS CAR BY PREVENTING WEAR

Perfection of Engine and Chassis Lubrication Gives Motorist Time for Minor Things.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—With engine and chassis lubrication approaching a high state of perfection and simplicity, some owners of the newer types of car are seeking new economies through better lubrication.

Now that they do not have to bother with grease cups and do gymnastics under the engine every 500 or 1000 miles, they turn to lubrication of certain units never before have been favored with this treatment. Super-lubrication of engine and chassis, in short, is stimulating interest in auxiliary lubrication.

Oiling Is Money Saver.

Motorists today are saving parts of the car and its accessories which in the past dried up, rusted and wore out prematurely. They are not taking any extra time in which to do this work. In most instances the time used is a fraction of that formerly consumed in greasing the major units or in changing the engine oil.

For the first time hoods are being lubricated, even windshields and gasoline tanks. Running boards are coming in for a bit of attention, too.

The hinges of the average hood are benefitted by little oiling now and then. Where the sides of the hood rest on the radiator shell and the flange of the cowl lubrication is particularly necessary. Whereas, the hinges require a light oil, the hood sides should be smeared with graphite or a heavy cup grease. When the hood sides are locked down there is considerable friction at these points, and whatever lubricant is used must have body.

In well-made hood clamps, there are holes for lubrication, but in the struggle to keep the more important units of the car oiled these have been neglected.

A point which many motorists do not appreciate is that when lubricant will not work out of a chassis bearing, even when forced through the grease nipple under high pressure, the trouble can be offset by external lubrication. This is well illustrated in the case of king bolts, which support the front wheel spindles.

Oiling King Bolts.

If regular lubrication has not been 100 per cent effective, these parts will be rather dry and rusty at points of exposure, although there may be sufficient grease around the main part of the king bolts themselves to prevent excessive wear and breakage. To remove rust and clear the parts so that grease forced in through the nipple will go all the way through it is customary for mechanics to oil the parts externally on the theory that some of the lubricant will work in and meet what is on the inside trying to force out.

Kerosene, or a 50-50 kerosene-oil mixture will have to be used in some cases. The oil cuts a way through the rust and dirt. Once the way has been opened, the grease on the inside of the bearing will have a clear road to exit under pressure.

The rubber of a windshild cleaner will last longer if it is treated to an occasional drop of oil or smear of vaseline just before starting across the glass. After long idleness, the rubber wiper becomes dry and tends to crack when it begins sweeping. Some wipers are hinged. If this is the case a drop of oil at this point now and then will pay dividends in long wiper life.

Oiling break bands never has been so popular as in the last six months. With four breaks instead of two, and the braking system offering super-service in return for a little care and attention, owners are finding that a little oil helps to tone up the brake linings and prevent screeching. As in auxiliary lubrication in general, the precaution against overdoing it holds good. One drop of oil goes a long way on brakes.

Other Places to Oil.

Another feature of auxiliary lubrication is its preventive phase. It is illustrated in the case of brakes. There is nothing that slows down a brake relining job more than rusty pins and other parts which must be removed before the work can be started. Owners who now lubricate such parts, if only to keep them from rusting, will find that they are saving delay and expense later.

The float mechanism of the carburetor is improved by an occasional drop of very light oil, particularly if the car is operated in a damp climate.

It is not unusual to oil the gas indicator on the main tank and to lubricate the points where the tank is attached to the frame. After lubricating such parts, it is advisable to tighten them thoroughly, since oil has a tendency to loosen them.

Too Much Is Too Much.

It is well to avoid lubricating the nuts and bolts that hold the license plates to the car. It is a convenience in some cases to have it easy to remove the plates, but in nine cases out of 10, the secure plate is insurance against loss or theft. Bolts can be sheared at the end of the year when the new plates are attached.

The end of the water pump shaft is benefited by a drop of oil occasionally. This sort of treatment is beneficial even to a fan belt that happens to be burning through riding fan pulleys that are too dry. Oil on frictional points of the windshield will stop annoying noises.

Oil will stop windows from creaking when dirt has worked in where it doesn't belong. Vaseline on the door catches, and oil on the hinges, will stop door wear and make for a queter running car. Now and again it is well to remove the floor mats and let a little light oil flow through joints formed by floor boards and body beams.

Just as the automatic chassis lubricating system is regulated to supply just so much lubricant and no more, so must the car owner who goes in for auxiliary lubrication take care to avoid overdoing it. It is always preferable to lubricate lightly and often than excessively on rare occasions.

NEW GLARE SHIELD TO END HEADLIGHT MENACE

A new glare shield for automobiles, designed to eliminate the blinding glare from approaching headlights when driving at night, has been perfected. It is made of blue-green transparent pyralin sheeting, the color having been developed in the laboratory of an eminent surgeon-oculist. It fits any type of closed or open car. When properly adjusted, it is said, glaring lights are diffused in the glare shield, giving the driver clear vision ahead. Many automobile accidents that occur at night are due to the driver becoming blinded from the glare of headlights on approaching cars and this new shield, it is said, will tend to avert danger of collisions from this cause.

BALLOON TIRES REQUIRE DIFFERENT REPAIR METHODS

Balloon tires are sufficiently different in construction to require different repair treatment even when making roadside repairs. For instance, a close-woven fabric patch should not be used in balloon tires even though it is very satisfactory when used in regular tires. A close-woven fabric patch is usually heavy and stiff and does not flex easily enough to become an integral part of the ballon tires unit. Special ballon tire patches may be purchased which are light and thin, yet possess strength with suppleness and flexibility, declare Miller tire men. A plaster cord patch has been designed for balloon tires which serves the same purpose as a blowout patch in regular tires.

A plaster cord patch, tube patching rubber, patching cement, rubber plastic, extra valve parts, balloon tire jack, and extra rim nuts constitute a good repair assembly for emergency use.

A special jack has been designed for use with ballon tires because a balloon tire equipped car's road clearance is less, requiring a lower jack.

A motorist also is likely to require during the driving tubes, an extra tire and tube, inflated and mounted ready to use. The "spare" should be protected with a tire cover. The extra tubes should be wrapped and placed where they will not be injured by tools.

Old tubes never should be used with new casings. New tubes should be bought. A good tire guage should be carried and used once or twice a week or even more often.

So called "slow leaks" and mysterious losses of air pressure often are due to faulty valve parts. Considering the wear it receives, the valve inside is a mighty efficient part. Yet they often wear out and for this reason should be replaced as needed. The cost is trivial.

RECORD WILLYS-KNIGHT AND OVERLAND SALES

Sales of the Willys-Knight "great six," brought out by Willys-Overland, Inc. in 1925, show a 130 per cent increase in the first quarter over sales in the same period last year. Compared with total sales of this model in all of last year, the increase in retail deliveries in the first three months is at the rate of 32 per cent over the total volume for 1925.

With the Overland six showing an increase at the rate of 50 per cent over last year's sales, with the four-cylindered Overland still maintaining its record-breaking sales of 1925, and with the new Willys-Knight six "70" as an addition to the line and already exceeding the greatest estimates of factory officials, the general business of Willys-Overland in the first quarter is making great strides.

Red Tail Lights Favored.

Supporting the stand of the motor clubs in favor of tail lights on automobiles, the directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce oppose the demand in some quarters for yellow tail lights.

There's Something About the Playboy

EVERYBODY knows that the Jordan Playboy started the roadster craze all over again in this country.

It was built for red-blooded Americans who never grow old.

It dominated its field—and, of course, was imitated.

But there has always been something distinctive about the Playboy—something in its lines—something in its charm—something in the way it carries itself along the road which makes it the leader among the style sport cars in America.

It's an eight, of course, with the smooth flowing power that only an eight can give.

It's compact—easy to handle—easy to park—turns on a dime.

Of course, there's all the speed you dare to use—the Playboy will always have that.

And it is priced well within your reach.

Of course, there won't be nearly enough of them to go 'round.

Orders should be placed immediately.

MOTORING FAIR PLAY URGED BY A. A. A. HEAD

Henry Would Make More Police Supervision Unnecessary by Mutual Consideration.

Fair play by all motorists as a substitute for increasing legislation, to combat the lack of respect some drivers show for the rights of others is advocated by the American Automobile Association.

Thomas P. Henry, president of the A. A. A., commenting on the need for mutual consideration of the comfort and safety of motorists, declares that all drivers must play fair with each other if the street and highway safety program is to be successful. It makes possible, he says, lessening traffic hazards by realizing one's moral obligations instead of resorting to wider police supervision.

The A. A. A. head, who made several long-distance motor trips in 1925, had plenty of opportunity to note instances of the lack of consideration on the highways. One of the most annoying things he observed was the reluctance of local drivers to allow through traffic to pass them.

TEN CITIES IN ONE REGION USE SAME CODE FOR TRAFFIC

First Instance in U. S. of Combination by Municipalities to Insure Uniformity.

Uniformity in traffic regulation by all cities in the same region is one of the objectives of the Albert Russell Erskine Bureau of Traffic Research of the University of California. Dr. Miller McClintock, who is in charge of the bureau, reports he has been advised that 10 of the larger cities near Los Angeles already have adopted the uniform code which he worked out. These cities are Bakersfield, Glendale, San Diego, Anaheim, Long Beach, Pasadena, Venice, Pomona, Santa Monica and Santa Barbara. This is the first region in the United States to have the advantages of uniformity. Every resident in the region knows what rules he must observe in driving through the southern part of the State.

Exact Definition Is Keynote.

Inquiries from many other cities all over the United States for information concerning this, the first ordinance ever drawn by a technical traffic expert, indicates that theer is widespread recognition of the fact this kind of work is a task for engineers.

Simplicity—and the clear definition of the rights of both pedestrians and motorists—is the basis of the uniform code. "Growing traffic," says Dr. McClintock, "requires both pedestrian and driver to yield something of what each has considered his rights, so that not only will traffic move more expeditiously, but that accidents will be prevented.

"So, the ordinance exactly defines these rights. When the pedestrian has the right of way, and where he may travel; when the vehicles may proceed and where; these are fixed by the code. With the same code in effect in neighboring cities, people from one community are not confused in another city."

Defines Pedestrian Rights.

These are the pedestrian's rights as fixed by the uniform code: Where traffic is not being directed by a policeman or signals, the person on foot has right of way across streets which have marked crossings; if crossings are not marked the pedestrian obtains the right of way by holding his hand up to warn vehicles that he is about to cross the street. Where a policeman or a signal controls traffic, pedestrians, like motorists, must heed the signals. If a central traffic district has been established, no one on foot may cross a street except at crossing walks; this ends "jay walking." If outside of the central district, a pedestrian wants to "jay walk," it must be done straight across the street, not corner-wise, and he must then yield the right of way to all vehicles.

Fixes Driver Rights.

Drivers' rights are thus defined: Where traffic is directed by a policeman or a signal, drivers must heed the signals. At other street crossings, drivers must stop to permit pedestrians to cross marked roadways, and must stop if a pedestrian by raised hand indicates he will cross a street at an unmarked crossing. Drivers must keep out of safety zones for street car loading. A driver wishing to turn to the left must approach that turning point as near the center of the street as possible and must not cut corners; he must round the center point of the street. Sections of the city to be determined by the Aldermen will be established, within which no left turn may be made.

The code contains provisions for boulevard stops; prohibits following fire apparatus with an automobile or crossing fire hose in a street; forbids bicycle riding on a sidewalk or carrying anyone on handlebars of a bicycle; driving through funeral processions or standing on running boards of either a car or a street car.

Most important of the provisions is that requiring pedestrians to observe traffic signals in congested districts. It has reduced injuries from motor car accidents by 30 per cent. Requiring motorists to yield to foot persons in other districts lessened crossing accidents in those districts, fewer mishaps occurred between crossigns, fewer children at play were hurt and reckless driving was curtailed.

Copies of the uniform code may be obtained without cost by writing the Albert Russel Erskine bureau of the University of California at Los Angeles. The bureau will advise and co-operate with any community in meeting its traffic problems.

HEADLIGHT GLARE OFTEN DUE TO DUSTY LENSES AND DIRTY WINDSHIELDS

DIRTY windshields and dust-covered headlights often are the cause of glaring lights in night driving.

Raindrops on the windshield or headlight lenses have the same diffusing effect. The particles of dust and rain form miniature lenses, so when the windshield or lamps are covered with dust or raindrops, glare is the result.

AUTO STYLE PARADE SEEN AT LINCOLN LOADING DOCK

The loading dock of a builder of automobiles is a long way from the fine car salon. Yet daily over the loading dock passes a constant parade of striking designs and colorings.

At the Lincoln Motor Co. plant, where color tone and individuality in treatment have been developed to a high degree, this revue is particularly interesting.

A four-passenger sedan to be shipped to the Northwest is finished in shades seen in the plumage of the Chinese jay. The body is in two tones of warm brown, with a bright blue stripe.

Contrasting sharply with that family of car, is a sport phaeton consigned to Mexico City. The body, below the moulding line, is royal chariot red with jet upperworks, fenders and running gear, and red wire wheels. A folding tonneau cowl and windshield suggest that the top will be folded most of the time. All metal is nickeled.

A sport phaeton for Florida is finished in buckskin brown with Scotch gray stripe and upholstery in dualtone leather. Six wire wheels, with the two spares carried forward in fender wells, tonneau cowl and windshield, mahogany top bows and all metal in nickel, add to its suggestion of fleetness.

To Hollywood go two club roadsters, one with Coromandel maroon body trimmed in Granada maroon and jet, with a fine maize stripe, the other in a combination of cream, black and orange chrome. Behind them follow a fully collapsible cabriolet in cotinga blue for Vermont and a victoria coupe in the light brown and red of the Red Chatterer on its way to the nation's capital.

MEXICO CITY, April 24.—Fully 66 per cent of the purchase price of any automobile that is operated for five years in Mexico is, in one form or another, paid to the Government. This statement constitutes the basic argument of the automobile dealers of Mexico in their fight to amend a new law which imposes an additional tax of 10 per cent on every sale made.

In a year the various divisions of General Motors use three billion standard parts in making automobile.

Bus Operation Expensive Under New Kentucky Law

Total of $627 a Year in Taxes and Fees Must Be Paid to Run Large Motor Coach on Set Schedule.

Bus operation has become expensive in Kentucky, where, under a new law, a 31-passenger motor coach must pay a total of taxes ranging as high as $627.50 a year when running between fixed points on a set schedule. Taxes on a 20-passenger bus total $327.50 yearly.

Busses operating on schedule are assessed a seat tax on the following basis: $5 a seat on a two to five passenger bus; $10 a seat on a 6 to 20 passenger bus; $15 a seat on a 21 to 31 passenger bus. In addition, there is a gross weight tax of $1 the 100 pounds. As many of the large busses weigh around 10,000 pounds, this means an extra $100 tax. Then there is a license tax of $10, $25 and $50 the bus, according to seating capacity. On top of all this, there is a $12.50 drivers' license fee for all busses, except city busses. Operators must take out personal liability insurance in the amounts of $10,000, $15,000 or $20,000 for each bus, according to the size, and also $1000 property damage insurance on each bus, unless they file sworn statements that their net assets exceed the above amounts.

Bus operators, in turn, are protected from competition by taxicabs and roving service cars. Taxicabs, city busses, jitneys and "drive yourself" car operators are licensed to operate within city limits. They may operate on public highways only on "casual trips."

"Casual trips" are defined by the new law to mean that any person, firm or corporation, not operating under a permit between fixed termini or over a regular route, may operate over any route between fixed termini where other persons hold permits, provided that on the "casual trips" no one shall be allowed to pick up any passenger along the route, nor be permitted on the return trip to haul any person or persons other than those included in the original trip.

This prohibits taxicabs from "cutting in" on the authorized bus operators. The first conviction for violation of this section of the law was obtained in the Boyd County Court March 31.

TWO HISTORIC EASTERN ROADS TO BE PAVED 36 FEET WIDE

With the building of new concrete pavements the historic Boston Post Road, which runs from New York to Boston, and the Albany Post Road, from New York up the east side of the Hudson River to Albany, are on the way to be made super-highways. The Boston road has been widened in stretches to thirty-six feet, or sufficient for four lines of traffic. The most recent of this work was done in Westchester County, N. Y.

Changing a motor road into a super-highway is a progressive action, each reconstructed section adding to the capacity of the road. On the narrow type of highway suitable for only two traffic lanes, trucks, in particular, slow up the motor cavalcade.

In Connecticut, several stretches of the Boston Post road have been rebuilt to provide a 36-foot concrete surface on an 80-foot right-of-way and plans have been made for about fifty miles of this type of highway from the New York line to New Haven, Conn.

NCREASED INTEREST IN THE SHORT WAVES

eal Distance Is Obtainable ith Sets Which Operate on the Lower Wave Bands.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—With rt wave radio transmission now anating from practically every rner of the earth, a tremendous terest in this form of communi- ation is being predicted for this mmer.

According to the most recent list the world's short-wave stations, ere are approximately 130 trans- itters operating on regular sched- es on wave lengths between 13 d 115 meters. The total is ex- cted to be almost doubled by the d of the year.

The United States maintains the in the short wave stations, incipally through its naval trans- itters and the experimental sta- ons of the low wave pioneers ong the radio manufacturers. eneral Electric Co., A. H. Grebe d Co., the Westinghouse Electric d Manufacturing Co., the Radio rporation of America, together erate practically one-fourth of e high frequency plants.

Included in the list of stations low waves are transmitters lo- ted in Germany, England, Java, eden, Holland, Russia, France, waii, Samoa, Canal Zone, the ilippines, Japan and aboard the ips of the United States fleet attered throughout the world.

In addition there are many hers operated by amateurs who ve received experimental licenses broadcast within the low wave nds assigned for that type of rk. Through co-operation of e International Radio Amateur ion, which was created last year, e low wave communications, th in code and voice are being ayed extensively throughout the rld.

Among the interesting experi- nts to be undertaken soon in ort wave transmission is the adio boat" to be launched by the ebe company next month, and ich is expected to cover the Ber- da races, not only for short ve receivers but for broadcast- g by the higher wave stations.

The extent to which the short ve is being used for re-broad- sting in other parts of the world s shown today in the announce- nt by the General Electric Co. t a scheduled relay of a pro-

Causes of Diminished Volume

When a radio receiver fails to give its customary volume the "B" batteries are almost invariably blamed. It is true that they are sometimes the cause of this trouble but it is advisable to measure their voltage before arriving at this conclusion. A good make of "B" battery of adequate size should last, even with a receiver consuming heavy "B" battery current, for at least six months and if it is a moderately economical receiver, from nine to 12 months, provided it is given the average use of about two hours per day. Failure to give such life is an indication, either that it is a battery of inferior make, or of inadequate capacity for the set used or that there is a defect in the receiver.

Briefly, the factors most frequently causing short "B" battery life are:

1. Audio-frequency amplifier not equipped with "C" battery.
2. "C" battery exhausted.
3. Excessive plate voltage.
4. Tubes draw excessive current because of accidental displacement of grid and plate.
5. "B" battery of insufficient capacity for the drain placed upon it.

This last cause is frequently overlooked because the first cost of large batteries is somewhat more than that of small ones. But it is indeed a wasteful practice to use a battery of inadequate capacity; this is apparent if the cost is figured in cents per hour of use, rather than in first cost. On the face of it, certainly it seems more expensive to pay about 25 per cent more for a heavy duty "B" battery, but the economy is apparent when the heavy duty lasts twice as long in service as the "large" size battery. The savings are even greater when heavy duty "B" batteries are substituted for the small portable size batteries which are sometimes erroneously used for home receivers. There have been cases when "B" battery maintenance cost has been reduced from 12 cents an hour to 2 cents an hour by using a heavy duty or extra large "B" battery in preference to one of the portable sizes.

It frequently happens that receiving set owners replace their "B" batteries when volume falls. The slightly increased volume which new "B" batteries give may lead to the conclusion that an exhausted "B" battery was the cause of the reduced volume. A "B" battery volt meter, however, might show only a normal fall in voltage which would not account for the reduction in volume.

In such cases it is advisable to inspect the antennae connections for a broken or corroded lead-in, loose ground connection, worn out "C" battery or lost magnetization of lour speaker unit. Still another cause of reduced volume is the loss of active material on the tube filaments. Quoting from the Technical News Bulletin, issued by the National Bureau of Standards:

"Electron tubes in radio receiving sets eventually lose their sensitivity. This sometimes progresses to the point where the receiving set operates very poorly or not at all, even though the tube filament is not burned out. The user of the set frequently confuses this condition with that due to an exhausted "B" battery. If the tubes are of the thoriated tungster (X-L) filament type, they can usually be rejuvenated by a simple process, and made to serve as well as new tubes in the receiving set."

A simple process of rejuvenation, which can be performed at home, consists in disconnecting the "B" battery from the set and burning the filaments at full brilliance for a half hour. Usually this restores the filaments to full activity.

The two major causes of reduced volume, are exhausted "B" batteries and worn-out tube filaments. It is easy to determine which is responsible for the loss of volume. A good, reliable voltmeter will indicate the condition of the "B" batteries. If each 45 volt "B" battery registers 34 volts or more, the cause of reduced volume lies elsewhere, probably with the tubes. Lacking a reliable voltmeter to test "B" batteries, a good plan is to have on hand one or two spare tubes which are known to be in good condition. Substitute the new tubes for those in the set and if this makes a marked improvement in volume, it is an indication that the old tubes require reactivation or renewal.

RADIOGRAMS.

An ordinance has been passed in Dixon, Ill., making it unlawful for any persons "to have, operate or maintain any instrument or device that interferes in any way with radio reception."

The Department of Commerce is now co-operating with nearly 150 broadcasting stations in sending out weather reports, and practically all parts of the United States are within their range.

A radio workshop has been installed in a large department store in London, in which fans can build their own sets under the guidance of a skilled radio mechanic. There is no charge for the service.

GREAT BRITAIN PLANS TO CONTROL RADIO

Elimination of Private Corporation Ownership Recommended by Committee of Parliament.

While the Congress of the United States is considering new radio legislation, the question of reorganizing the British broadcasting monopoly is before Parliament. A special broadcasting committee has just recommended that a new commission succeed the present British Broadcasting Co.

Agreeing that broadcasting in Great Britain should remain a monopoly to avoid the confusion resulting from free and uncontrolled transmission and reception in the United States, the committee urges state control.

The creation of a British Broadcasting Commission of between five and seven paid members of judgment and independence, to serve in the capacity of directors of a public service is urged. The members would be appointed by the Crown for a period of five years; such a commission would become effective on Jan. 1, 1927, and control all broadcasting with the assistance of the Postmaster General in the matter of licensing receivers and the collecting of fees. Blind persons would be permitted to listen in free.

"Broadcasting is not only an in-situation, but has become a necessity throughout the civilized world," the report states, adding that it will become a "handmaiden rather than the usurping rival of literature and the arts."

The British broadcast system, which opened its first station at London in November, 1922, now includes ten main and eleven relay stations and contemplates more high-powered stations, similar to that opened last July at Daventry. On Jan. 31 there were 1,840,268 receiving licenses in effect, but the total number of listeners is estimated at two or three times that figure.

Commenting on the new scheme, one British publication urges Parliament to ascertain whether or not the listeners are satisfied with the present system before making any radical changes.

In its report, the committee states in part as follows:

The new commission would assume control of Jan. 1, 1927, when the license of the British Broadcasting Co. expires. The motive for this recommendation lies in the belief that a corporation for such service should be publicly, rather than privately, owned.

Two proposals for the organization of the commission were made: The first, its creation by act of Parliament, which would specify its organization and the manner of its operation; the alternative, to create a corporation under the companies acts, with shareholders to be appointed by the Postmaster-General.

All property and operations of the existing company would be transferred to the commission, arrangements being made to prevent any interruption of broadcasting service, by taking over the present operating staff. The commission would receive a 10-year-license, similar to that now held by the B. B. C.

It was recommended that the present listeners' license fee of 10 shillings per year be continued, under the direction of the Postmaster-General.

The commission would be empowered to operate present and future broadcasting stations in the United Kingdom, arrange programs in accordance with public demand, and handle other business necessary to improve broadcasting, excepting broad questions of policy, which would be decided by the Postmaster-General.

Old and New Batteries.

Rundown batteries are a very prolific source of dropping sensitiveness of a set. A receiver with more than two tubes ought to be equipped with a volt-meter. Contrary to popular notion it does no harm to new "B" batteries to hook them in series with old ones. In the case of dry-cell "A" batteries, however, the best practice is to get a whole new set at once. Never connect an old and a new dry-cell "A" battery in parallel, as one will discharge into the other.

NORTH POLE BROADCASTING

A special license has been granted by the Department of Commerce to the New York Times for the establishment of a station at Point Barrow, Alaska, to transmit news and messages regarding the spring and summer activities in and around the North Pole. The station is licensed as KDZ and will operate on 21.4, 42.08, 74.77 and 149.2 meters. Four other commercial land stations have been licensed during the past month to operate in Alaska, all on wave lengths above 600 meters. They are KGAF, the Annette Island Packing Co., at Annett; KGAD of the Sunny Point Packing Co. at Kake; KHH of the Buchan and Heinen Packing Co. at Port Armstrong, and KFJF, the Alaska Consolidated Canneries at Saginaw Bay. The General Electric Co. was given a license to operate on 18.3 and 23.3 meters as WBQ at Schenectady, and the Inter-City Radio Telegraph Co. station, WCL, at Columbus, O., was authorized to use a wave length of 1960 meters for telegraph communication.

A "B" Battery Tip.

"B" batteries have a high voltage but the capacity in amperes is very low, and for this reason they should never be tested by shortening them with a piece of wire, as is very often done, to see if a dry cell is "hot." They should be kept clean and dry and no metallic substance placed near them which might short circuit them.

MAILMEN COLLECT RADIO FEES

The license fees in Germany are collected by the letter carriers of the Postoffice Department, so that very little administrative expense is incurred. The Government is also obtaining a considerable revenue from selling space on the receipt for advertising purposes.

The radio amateur or broadcast listener pays a license of 24 marks annually, payable in 12 monthly instalments of two marks each. Total receipts of the German Government from the broadcasting service therefore amount to approximately 28,000,000 gold marks annually, of which 60 per cent, or 17,000,000 marks, are paid to the nine operating companies licensed by the German Government. The remainder is held by the Government and used for technical development and the building of new transmitting stations.

According to the latest public statistics about 1,200,000 radio receiving sets for which regular license fees are paid are in operation within Germany.

The Reiss marble block microphone is used almost exclusively in the German broadcasting studio. This patented device is a pulverized coal-dust microphone inclosed in a marble block, which is said to deaden undesirable oscillations and vibrations.

Chrysler "70" Means 70 Miles Per Hour Plus

Chrysler model numbers have a special significance and are an actual index to Chrysler performance and value.

Motor car model numbers up to the present time have meant little or nothing to the public.

They have rarely expressed horse-power and almost never miles per hour.

In the case of Chrysler you know what you are buying in miles per hour and all that miles-per-hour implies as soon as you see the model and know the number.

Chrysler "70" for instance is a 70—in other words it delivers 70 miles an hour.

The model number is not the maximum—Chrysler "70" delivers 70 miles per hour and more.

Comparatively few people, it is true, care to ride as fast as 70 miles an hour; but the power which is indicated by 70 miles plus represents the utmost in acceleration, in smooth performance, as well as in sheer speed.

It means the highest possible quality in design and materials and the finest of precision manufacture. It means a soundness and a stability that assure unequaled Chrysler performance for the entire long life of the car.

We are eager to demonstrate the many Chrysler superiorities of quality, strength and endurance which are the foundation of Chrysler's famed power and speed abilities.

RADIO SIGNALS PICK UP

Radio signals are better 600 miles from the broadcast transmitter than they are at 300 miles, according to the engineers of the radio department of the General Electric Co., under whose supervision an investigation of radio wave propagation is now being made.

The tests showed that the signals drop off rapidly during the first 300 miles, then increase in strength until at 600 miles they are stronger than they were at 300. From that distance on, the limit of the station's range, the signals gradually grow weaker. These results are considered only preliminary and are not absolute, the engineers announced.

Noted Chorus on Chain Tonight

The famous Schola Cantorum of New York will present the A. Atwater Kent radio program, broadcasting from Station WEAF through KSD and 14 other connected stations at 8:15 p. m., Central time, tonight.

This choral society now numbers 200 highly trained voices. It was founded in 1909 by Kurt Schindler, composer and former assistant director of the Metropolitan Opera. At that time it consisted of 40 women's voices.

The original organization sang so successfully with the Philharmonic Orchestra that it was enlarged and male voices added in 1910, when, in addition to singing with various orchestras, it gave its first subscription concerts. Since then it has played a prominent part in the musical life of New York.

The Schola Cantorum takes its name from the Italian organization. It has been a pioneer in the presentation of folk songs, and from the beginning has sung such large works as those of Chabrier, Borodine and Moussorgsky.

The program for the 25th follows:

Church Music:

Glory to the Trinity (from the 'Liturgy') .... Rachmaninoff
O quam gloriosum
Jesu dulcis memoria
O vos omnes
(Old Spanish Motets.)

For women's voices:

Song from Shakspeare's "Twelfth Night" .... Brahms

Wedding Song from the opera "Sadko" .... Rimsky-Korsakoff

Lyric Pastorals:

DECISION MAY SPEED NEW RADIO LAWS

Close Watch Is Being Kept on Stations to Prevent Claim Jumping in the Ether.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Radio officials of the Government are watching closely for indications of an outbreak among the country's broadcasters which had been promised if the Government lost its suit against station WJAZ, Chicago.

Although their hands apparently are tied by the decision that denied the Department of Commerce the authority to regulate the ether, word has gone out from Washington to the radio inspectors throughout the country to keep a close check on nearby broadcasters and to report immediately any stations that jump their wave lengths.

During the last two months approximately 30 stations, dissatisfied with their allocation, notified the department that they were prepared to take more desirable ether channels if WJAZ should be upheld in its alleged "piracy." Only one ether station, however, was known today to be operating on an unassigned wave length, namely KWKH at Shreveport, which followed the lead of WJAZ two weeks ago.

Officials were watching also to see whether any of the applicants of recent months who have been denied licenses would endeavor to go a step further and assume the right to broadcast without a Government permit. It was said, however, that there was only a remote possibility of this.

In view of activity in the Senate to create new radio legislation before adjournment, it is not believed that the outbreak, if it occurs, will assume very alarming proportions for at least another month, and then only if Congress fails to act.

Most of the dissatisfied broadcasters, it was explained, will probably wait to learn the Congressional attitude before taking any radical steps that might endanger their chances of obtaining more favorable allocations under the proposed legislation.

Meanwhile every effort is being made to push some sort of radio bill through Congress. Petitions to the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce have been received from many stations asking for immediate legislation to prevent further ether marauding. Among these petitions was one from 10 Chicago stations opposed to the action of WJAZ.

It is also expected a further appeal will be made to the listeners of the entire country to urge remedial legislation.

CHICAGO, April 24.—Official announcement was made today of a complete change in the status, personnel, plans and policy of Station WBBM.

In the past it has been identified with two organizations, one of which was the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation. This status has been changed, the whole of the "air time" having been taken over by that company. It will be known officially as "WBBM, the Stewart-Warner Station, Chicago." The broadcast time will be 40½ hours per week.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. I have a five tube tuned R. F. set on which I am unable to tune in stations below 260 meters. What can I do to overcome this condition?—J. M.

A. Remove about 10 turns from the filament end of the secondary winding of each transformer.

Q. Why is it that I am unable to separte KSD and KYW with my set. Station KSD and KYW are only 10 meters apart and on other dial settings my set separates stations that are only 5 meters apart. I would like to tune in on the WEAF programs that are broadcast through your station but find it impossible to do this when KYW is on the air.

A. You seem to have the mistaken idea that stations are separated by wavelengths in meters. This is not true. Stations are separated according to frequency and frequency is measured in cycles. The nearest that two stations can be placed without causing interference is 10 kilocycles. Between KSD and KYW there is a difference of exactly 10 kilocycles. Between a station operating on 200 meters and one operating on 205 meters there is a difference in frequency of over 30 kilocycles, room for 3 stations, as compared with a difference of only 10 kilocycles between 535 and 545 meters. Located as you are about half way between the two stations you are bound to have trouble if either of the two stations gets off of their assigned wavelength.

Q. Am owner of Radiola 25 and find that I now have to turn my volume control up about twice as far as I did when the set was new to get good volume. I have new batteries throughout. V. X. D.

A. The condition might be caused by a number of things but the trouble probably is due to a tube that has worn out. Test all the tubes in a tube tester for plate current.

Q. Will a lead pipe ground give as good results as an iron pipe ground?—G. B.

A. No.

Q. We have a local noise in our town that the city electricians cannot find. One cannot enjoy a program for the local noise. This noise has been continuous since last December. How can we go about getting this noise eliminated?—R. L. F.

A. The problem of eliminating interference is a large one and requires quite a bit of work by several people. Before the interference can be eliminated it must be located and it is frequently found that the interference comes from several different sources. In the April issue of the Radio Home there is a story telling how the town of Lancaster, Pa., got rid of a bad cause of interference. This article will give you all the information that you will need in getting rid of interference.

Q. Where is station 6KW?—N. C.

A. Station 6KW is located at Tuiniucu, Cuba.

Q. What are the dimensions of r. f. transformers suitable to use with .00025, .00035 and .0005 mfd. tuning condensers? I have three of each type of condenser mentioned and would like to wind a set of tranformers to go with each one. —G. K.

A. For 3-inch tubing, and a .00025 mfd. tuning condenser the secondary should have 65 turns of No. 24 or 26 silk or cotton covered wire. The primary should have not over 12 turns, wound at the filament end of the tube, and either on the 3-inch tube itself or on a 2¾-inch tube slipped inside the secondary. For the .00035 mfd. condenser, the secondary may be reduced to 58 turns, and for the .0005 mfd. condenser the secondary need not be over 50 turns. The primary with the 58-turn secondary should not be more than 10 turns, but the exact size is best determined by test at time of construction. It might be a good thing to wind 12 turns at first, and remove a turn or two if the total is found to be too great.

POWER TUBE OF NEW TYPE MADE BY R. C. A.

UX-171 Said to Eliminate Distortion From Local Stations and Improve Reception.

A new power tube that promises to be an improvement over the old types has been announced by the Radio Corporation of America. This tube will be known as the 171 and is designed to improve reception from local stations as well as to work more efficiently on distant stations. This tube and the others referred to in this article are of the UX type which indicates that the base is of the latest design.

The 112 operates normally with 135 volts on the plate. A plate voltage of at least 250 is required on the 210 to make it very much better, as a power amplifier, than the 112. The 112 is somewhat better than the 201-A when used for this purpose but is not nearly as good as the 210 when the latter is used with a high plate voltage. The maximum plate voltage that can be used on the plate of the 210 is 425 volts. The 210 is almost prohibitive to the average listener because it requires such a high plate voltage. The new 171 tube operates with a maximum of 180 volts on the plate. This means that the average voltage of 135 obtainable from "B" batteries and "B" eliminators the 171 is a better power amplifier than the 112 or 210.

At 135 volts the 112 requires a "C" battery of 9 volts. At 250 volts the 210 needs a grid bias of 18 volts. With maximum plate voltage the 171 requires a C battery having a voltage of 40.5. Under normal conditions a power tube of the old type overloads and distortion occurs when the grid of the tube becomes positive. An excessive AC voltage on the grid caused by a strong local station opposes the grid bias and if the AC voltage is greater than the 9 volts in the case of the 112 or 18 in the case of the 210 with the plate voltages mentioned above overloading and therefore distortion takes place.

The "C" battery of 40.5 volts, at the maximum plate voltage, on the 171 is high enough that the average signal from local stations will not cause the grid to go positive. With this tube the locals can therefore be picked up with more volume and better quality than when any of the other power tubes are used with the exception of the 210 when used with a very high plate voltage.

Another advantage to the new power tube is that at the maximum plate voltage the output or plate resistance is 2000 ohms, which permits the use of a low impedence loud speaker and comes nearer to matching the impedence of the average loud speaker than any of the other power tubes. The 112 has an output resistance of 5500 ohms at 135 volts and the 210 6600 ohms at 250 volts.

The connections for the 171 differs slightly from those of the ordinary power amplifier. The plate current drawn by the tube is rather high and therefore should not be permitted to flow through the loudspeaker unit as it might burn out the coils or demagnetize the magnets. To avoid any damage to the speaker it should be connected to the plate circuit through either a one to one ratio transformer or, better, through a choke coil of from 10 to 15 henrys and a large fixed condenser. A diagram showing these two methods is supplied with each tube.

The voltage amplification factor of the new 171 tube is not as high as that of either of the other two power tubes. The 112 has a voltage amplification factor of 7.9 at a plate voltage of 135, that of the 210 is 7.5 at 250 volts, while the 171 has a voltage amplification factor of only 3 at the maximum plate voltage. At first this would indicate that the 171 is not as good as either of the other two tubes, which is true as far as voltage amplification is concerned. However, the amplification obtainable from the radio frequency amplifiers and the first stage of audio in the average receiver is sufficiently high to overload the grids of either the 112 or 210. Therefore, very little amplification is needed from the last stage of audio, the main purpose of this tube being to convert the voltage amplification into current strong enough to operate the loud speaker and the 171 should do this very nicely.

The specifications for the new power tube indicate that it will be more useful to the listener than any of the other tubes made for power amplification. Laboratory tests and trials by the multitude of listeners will prove its real value.

For the Notebook.

Use good insulators and solder all connections in the aerial.

Headphones should be bought for their ampere turns and not the resistance.

Grounding the cores of audio frequency transformers may eliminate squealing.

Nearly all interference producers are of the regenerative type in the hands of an experienced operator.

It is needless to expect good work from a set unless the prongs of tubes are making absolute and firm contact with the tube-socket springs. The least looseness of contact means trouble.

Reducing Controls by Tandem Tuning

By ZEH BOUCK

According to Herbert Spencer there is a well established evolutional tendency, acting on all processes, from the unintegrated homogeneous to the integrated heterogeneous—which all goes to prove that Spencer should have written radio articles. But seriously,— and in language a little less involved, this merely means that, through a process of evolution, all things tend to change from something ununified and simple to something complex but unified. And this principle of unification may move so rapidly that often, along the evolutionary path, the complex will appear less complicated than the simple.

This tendency is easily recognizable in radio. It is inevitable that, as time goes on, circuits and receiving arrangements will become more and more complex. The modern receiver presents a far more complex operation than the crystal set of 20 years ago. But apparatus will, at the same time, become more unified—integrated; it will be simplified in its outward aspects. The super-heterodyne of today, with its multitudinous electrical complications, is vastly more simple to operate than the crystal set, with its ten to fourteen controls, already referred to.

Typical of this combined and simultaneous action toward the simple and the more complex, is the highly commendable move toward control elimination by tandem tuning. Tandem tuning refers to the mechanical linking of two or more variable units, usually condensers, in a receiver, so that they are controlled or moved by a single dial rather than by individual dials.

Thus, if we mount two of the three condensers, in the conventional neutrodyne receiver, on a single shaft, we shall have eliminated one control, and the resulting set will be better suited to our manual ability. You might say that the receiver has been simplified. However, the electrical concomitants of this tandem arrangement have really made the circuit just a little more complicated, bringing into consideration new conditions which the interested fan should study.

It is the purpose of this article to consider the new ideas involved in tuning several radio frequency circuits simultaneously, by means of two or more condensers mounted on a single shaft.

The "problems" of tandem tuning are really nothing more than the problems of scientific set design slightly emphasized. In some respects they are mechanical rather than electrical, and in all cases are modified, with other problems, in individual receiver design. There are, however, some general points which should receive primary consideration before the specific niceties are tackled.

Matching the Inductances.

There is really only one fundamental "secret" to successful tandem tuning. This is the matching of inductive and capacitative values in the individual tuning circuits, which considers the inductance and capacity introduced by leads, and wiring. It is the problem of the designer so to arrange his parts and their interconnections that the parasitic capacities and inductances are either negligible, or are the same in each stage of radio frequency amplification.

This accomplished, there remain only the matching of the deliberate inductances (the tuning coils) and the capacities of the tuning condensers. The latter is taken care of in the case of any reliable condenser, such as the Amsco "Siamese," which are measured and matched within a fraction of a micomicrofarad.

It is the designer's job to match the inductors.

"Vernier" capacitances and inductors, of any type whatever, can be used to balance stray capacitative and inductive values, as well as poorly matched inductors. However, no vernier can efficiently compensate the capacitative discrepancies of inferior condensers. Compensation on one wavelength is immediately upset upon tuning to another frequency.

Coils characterized by a relatively low L to C ratio are recommended for use in tandem circuits, contrary to general practice. In other words, space wound coils and similar tricks designed to reduce the capacity of the windings, are not recommended in tandem tuning circuits. The use of higher capacity coils lowers the proportion of tube and stray capacity to total circuit minimum capacity, thus reducing whatever effect tube changing may have upon tuning.

Application to Circuits.

Tandem tuning, needless to say, can be adapted to practically any tuning system. A foundamental circuit (Figure 1) accompanies these notes.

Attention is particularly directed to the input or antenna coupling circuit. The proximity of the antenna circuit, in almost every case, will throw the tuning of the first condenser out of alignment unless this condition is especially considered and properly compensated. There are two immediately possible ways of doing this. The first is to employ the usual aperiodic primary with very loose coupling, or variable coupling correctly compensated by the King Equamatic system. The second, and at present preferable arrangement, is the use of the antenna tuning condenser C. A certain optimum input (across primary) capacity should be decided upon by the designer—say 25 or 30 micromicrofarads. The average antenna capacity will vary anywhere between this value and perhaps 200 micromikes. To reduce it to the desired across coil capacity, the series condensers of about 50 Mfd. is introduced as suggested. The condenser is varied for individual antennas, and left set when the correct value is discovered. It is recommended that this condenser be mounted within the cabinet, to discourage the itching fingers of the average fan.

If two stages of tuned radio frequency amplification are employed previous to the detector tube, with one single and one tandem condenser, it is advisable to shunt the single condenser across the first secondary. This will eliminate the antenna compensation problem. (Antenna compensation, however, is still desirable, if only to maintain dial alignment).

Almost any efficient system of stabilizing the r. f. stages is recommended for use with tandem tuning circuit. The addition of the stabilizing arrangement, presents no extraordinary difficulties.

All grid returns, in virtue of the common grounded rotor, are brought down to the negative side of the "A" battery. This fact slightly modifies the detector circuit. Detecting efficiency postulates a positive grid potential. To secure this, instead of shunting the grid condenser with the leak, as is usually done when the grid return is brought down to the plus filament terminal, the resistor is connected between the grid and filament (plus of course) direct.

Tandem tuning presents no real difficulties, and demands only the intelligent application that must go into the design and building of any receiver satisfactory to the discriminating enthusiast.

DEALER BUREAU REORGANIZED

At a meeting of the board of directors of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association at Hotel Mayfair the necessity for a larger Dealer Bureau Membership was recognized and it was decided to take action in this direction at once.

In order to properly carry on this work of building up the association's dealer bureau much time is required and it was decided to place the work under the direct supervision of the new executive secretary, W. P. Mackle, who will be able to devote more actual work and real effort thereto than any dealer member possibly could be expected to do.

The Dealer Bureau will have one of its members represent it on the board of directors of the Radio Trades Association and this member will be expected to bring before the directorate all matters referred to him or the chairman by dealer members for attention of the board. Under this new arrangement dealer problems will have closer attention.

R. W. Bennett, chairman of the Show Committee, suggested that the October show tickets be sold in advance and it was decided to do this on a plan to be worked out later.

Britain Speeds Radio Chain.

Advancement of the date for opening the imperial wireless telegraph chain, through which it is planned to link the entire British empire, has been announced. The Bodmin and Bridgewater stations, which are to be used for the Canadian and South African services, will be completed this month, and the Grimsby and Skegness stations, to be used for the Indian and Australian services, in August. Erection of the corresponding stations in India and the dominions will be completed at about the same time.

MANY STATIONS HEARD ON SHORT WAVE SET

Phone, Code and Foreign Signals Picked Up With Good Intensity on CR-18.

A short wave receiver, the CR-18, designed especially for reception of the short wave length code and phone stations is being manufactured and sold by A. H. Grebe & Co. of Richmond, New York. The CR-18 employs the latest improvements in short wave receivers including plug-in coils and capacity regeneration control. Five plug-in coils are furnished with the set the total wave length range being from 10 to 200 meters. One stage of audio amplification gives volume enough for good headphone reception. A very small vernier condenser is placed across the regular feed back condenser for adjusting the beat note to any desired frequency. The two main condensers are of the straight line frequency type and each can be operated directly or by means of a vernier.

One of these receivers has been tried out by this department and found to give excellent results. Three phone stations were picked up. WGY and KDKA were heard just below the amateur 40 meter band and KDKA above this band. WGY came in much better from the viewpoint of clarity and signal strength than when listening to them on their regular broadcasting wave length of 380 meters. Static was very light and if the signals faded at all it was not noticeable. The amateur 40-meter band was so crowded that in turing the main tuning dial one or two degrees twice that number of stations were heard. A few amateur stations were heard on the 80-meter band though the highest amateur band seemed deserted.

Two amateur stations using the code letters NZ before their calls came in very nicely. The NZ indicating that the stations were in New Zealand. One naval station on the Pacific coast and one on the Atlantic came in clear and distinct using code. Two army stations came in just below the amateur 40-meter band. The strongest signal of all was that of WIZ a Radio Corporation experimental station at New Brunswick, N. J.

RADIO TO THE RESCUE

That the radio compass is becoming more and more important as an aid to navigation and rescue work at sea is evidenced in a letter received by the Bureau of Lighthouses of the Department of Commerce.

Last January the S. S. Georgian of the American Hawaiian Line lost her propeller off the southwestern coast of Mexico. Messages had been sent to Balboa requesting that a tug be sent to tow the disabled vessel to that port. The tug Gorgona of the Panama Canal Department was immediately dispatched and arrived at the estimated position of the vessel four days later.

After a fruitless search for nearly 24 hours the tug sighted the U. S. Army transport Chauteau Thierry, and made for her, believing that she was the disabled vessel. As the S. S. Chateau Thierry was equipped with a radio compass its facilities were offered in assisting the tug to find the S. S. Georgian. During an exchange of messages between the two vessels and the S. S. Chauteau Thierry the discrepancy was found.

From the information obtained from the use of the radio compass on the transport, the tug was able to locate the S. S. Georgian at 5:32 p. m. of the same date.

A poor loud speaker will make a good set sound cheap, while just an average set will sound good over a high-grade loud speaker.

For the Notebook.

Never touch the inside of a set when it is in operation.

The most common source of trouble within a radio set is in the tubes or in the sockets.

The direction in which the antenna points affects the loudness of the signals received.

An aerial is not essential with a sensitive set employing two stages of radio frequency amplification.

When using a vario-coupler as a single circuit set, reverse the tickler connections if it will not oscillate

Coils for high frequency currents should always be wound with nonmagnetic material, preferably copper.

The ground is one of the most important portions of the radio circuit.

Crystal detectors operate as long as the detector is in good condition.

Excessive resin from solder can be removed with alcohol and a soft cloth.

CHANGES IN TIME ON KSD PROGRAMS

Eastern Daylight Saving Will Cause One Hour Earlier Start on New York Chain.

Daylight saving time schedule, which goes into effect today in New York, will be the cause of a complete rearrangement in the broadcasting schedule at Station KSD for the summer. Tonight the Capitol Theater program will go on at 5:15 instead of 6:15 Central Standard Time, and will be followed at 7:15 by the Atwater Kent Radio Hour, in which Schola Cantorum, the famous choral organization which began in 1909 as the MacDowell Chorus, will present the program. Tomorrow night the opera "Martha," by Flotow, will be sung by the WEAF Grand Opera Company, beginning at 8 o'clock Central Standard Time, instead of 9, as formerly. At 10 p. m. a local program will be given by the glee club and orchestra of the St. Louis Chapter, American Institute of Banking, under the direction of A. Lawton Gordon. Prior to the New York grand opera presentation will be a local artist recital in which the St. Louis pianist, Josephine Carradine Dixon, will give a program of ultra modern music, following the presentation of the Grief piano concerto by Elise Lamy of Sedalia, Mo., with Hortense Doyle of St. Louis at the second piano.

Tuesday night will be devoted entirely to New York, beginning at 6, with a program by the Grand Prize Eurekas. Wednesday night also, at 6, the Shinola Merrymakers will be heard through KSD from New York. At 6:30 the first half hour of the dinner music at Hotel Statler in St. Louis will be broadcast, to be followed by the Ipana Troubadours in New York.

Thursday night will see a new feature in the local program, with the introduction of the orchestral and organ music, presented by Allister Wylie's orchestra at the West End Lyric Theater. This concert will begin at 9 o'clock and will follow a series of programs at New York, which will start at 7 o'clock. The local program on Friday will be a song recital by Myrtle Hartman, soprano of the Municipal Opera, and the "Commerce Hour" given by the Kotana Brothers, John and Colomon, in which a program of Hungarian music will be played on the dolzymbal, an instrument that is little known in America, but the sound of which has become somewhat familiar this season through broadcasting from KSD and WEAF, New York.

On Saturday night a special program will come through Station KSD from Washington. This will be a Boy Scout program in Washington, with addresses by President Coolidge and Sir Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scout movement. Music by the United States Marine Band will be a feature of this program, and an interesting item in the list will be the presentation of the Distinguished Service Medal to several men who have been outstanding in their service in work for the boys of America.

WJJD Has Real Eskimo Artist.

Simoon Oliver, whose Eskimo name is Nutchuk, is the only Eskimo broadcasting from any station in the country regularly. He is studying music in Chicago and his excellent touch on the piano can be heard on Wednesday nights from WJD, Mooseheart, Ill. Considerable interest has been aroused in this young man by virtue of his musical ability. He broadcasts each week from the Palmer House (Chicago) studio of the Loyal Order of Moose Station.

I Will Decide For Myself

When I am aggravated with my old automobile . . . and wonder how I ever came to buy this iron horse . . . I recall that I let others decide this important matter for me . . . I relied on the judgment of friends . . . and finally let a clever salesman slip one over on me.

Not the first time, either . . . happens about once a year, to me.

A car is such a personal thing, too . . . why, one lives in it more than he does in his home . . . every person should own a car which will answer to his own moods . . . his needs . . . and his peculiar kind of driving.

Had my heart set on a Rickenbacker last year . . . never have been able to get it out of my system.

Every time a Rickenbacker passes me on the open road . . . or jumps away from me at a traffic signal . . . I cuss myself for my weak-mindedness . . . and resolve that next time I buy a car . . . I shall decide for myself.

There is only one way to do that deciding . . . drive the car with my own hands.

I am going to drive a Rickenbacker . . . nobody is going to sell me any car until I do.

Friendly advice is all right . . . sincere for the most part . . . I know my friends mean well when they tell me they are sure the cars they drive are "just as good" as a Rickenbacker . . .

But their tastes are not my tastes . . . I want a car that is made to measure for me . . . and that Rickenbacker they tell me is Custom-Built, so to speak, for car-connoisseurs . . . That means me.

I've owned a lot of cars . . . have bought my experience . . . and even if I don't know all there is to know about automobiles . . . I sure do know what I want.

Those "advanced engineering features" . . . which, I am told, are to be found only in a Rickenbacker . . . intrigue me . . . I admit I'd like to own a car that has every last one of them!

Tandem Fly Wheels . . . Dilutioniser . . . Double Depth Frame . . . Cradle Springs . . . Air Cleaner . . . Mechanical Four-wheel Brakes . . . Custom Built Body . . . every one of these . . . and all the others.

I confess I don't know just what all of them are . . . Last year I was persuaded that some were only useless "talking points" . . . put in to make Rickenbackers sell easier.

But at this year's shows I noticed that those very makers who then flouted the idea, have since copied those features . . . must have been right . . . must have been better.

I am going to know about all these things . . . I have an ordinarily intelligent mind . . . an average amount of mechanical acumen . . . and, even if I don't quite understand when a salesman tries to tell me . . . I sure can when I see for myself.

And that is just what I am resolved to do . . . see with my own eyes . . . decide for myself.

Then I am going to take a Rickenbacker car and drive it with my own hands . . . going to take Rickenbacker's word for it that the car is its own best salesman . . . let the eloquence of that super-performance . . . about which I hear so much . . . tell its own story.

Don't want any salesman or expert driver along . . . going to do my own driving . . . uninterrupted by any sales talk.

Going to decide for myself . . . this time.

And if I don't buy a Rickenbacker . . . I will have no one but myself and Rickenbacker to blame . . . I have a hunch I will own a Rickenbacker by tomorrow night.

Let's see . . . . Rickenbacker St. Louis Company is Rickenbacker Distributor here . . . . 2218 Locust Street . . . phone is . . . CEntral 1852.

Rickenbackers are made in "Sixes" and "Vertical Eights"—all popular body types—prices range from $1695 to $2595—f. o. b. Detroit, plus tax

CHURCH'S GREATEST MUSICAL PROGRAM

Thousands of Singers to Take Part in International Eucharistic Congress in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 24.—Evidence that music will be one of the outstanding features of ceremonies at the International Eucharistic Congress here in June is given in a program issued today by Prof. Otto A. Singenberger, director of music for the Congress.

No such elaborate program of ecclesiastical music has perhaps ever before been planned for a public assemblage in the United States. Orchestras, huge choruses, a score of marching choirs and a colossal pipe organ for open-air singing are among the many features.

Three Modern Masses.

Masses of three modern American composers have been selected for the congress. Pietro Yon, a New York musician and honorary organist to the Vatican; Vito Carnevali of New York, and the late Dr. John A. Singenberger, who was knighted for his work in church music, are the American composers whose masses will be sung by the congress choirs.

The Cathedral of the Holy Name will be the scene of the formal opening Sunday, June 20, of the Eucharistic Congress by the Papal Legate. Here the combined choirs of the Seminary of St. Mary of the Lake and of Quigley Preparatory Seminary will sing the Missa Solemnis by Pietro Yon. Sixty members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra will accompany the chorus and Dr. Albert Sieben will be at the organ. Prof. Singenberger will direct the choirs on this day as well as on the other days of the Congress.

A Great Choir.

The largest of all choirs, possibly the largest ever known, will assemble in the stadium on the Chicago lake front the second day of the Congress. On that day, 62,000 Chicago school children will sing the Mass of the Angels composed in the tenth century by St. Dustan. It is on this occasion that the immense pipe organ specially constructed for open air work with the great choir, will be played for the first time.

Rosa Mystica, a new Mass by Vito Carnevali, will be sung on "Women's Day," the third day of the Congress, by two choirs of women, one of 3800 trained singers from Chicago church choirs, and another of 6000 nuns from all over the United States. Music for this Mass was distributed to all convents that intended sending representatives to the Congress, and Chicago women have been rehearsing it for months.

High School Singers.

On "Higher Education Day" at the stadium, more than 30,000 picked singers from Chicago Catholic high schools and colleges will sing the St. Francis Mass by John Singenberger.

At all the high masses to be celebrated in the stadium, the vested choir of the Seminary of St. Mary of the Lake will sing the principal part of the Mass.

At the Seminary of St. Mary of the Lake at Minedlein, a pontifical high Mass will precede the procession which will close the Eucharistic Congress. At this Mass, which it is expected will be attended by hundreds of thousands of pilgrims, to receive the papal blessing the last day of every Congress, the choir of seminarians will sing again. The mass selected is one composed by Lucino Refici of the Pontifical School of Church M[illegible] at Rome. Prof. Refici is expected to attend the Congress, and be invited to direct the choir during the ceremonies of the final day.

Hair Dye Not a Necessity.

BERLIN, April 24.—The Provincial Appellate Court in Duesseldorf has ruled that laws making profiteering in necessities of life a crime do not apply to hair dyes because they are "inventions for the gratification of women's vanity, tending to circumvent the orderly procession of nature." The case which had been appealed twice was that of a woman who had sued a beauty parlor proprietor for charging an exorbitant price for a bottle of hair dye. Counsel for the plaintiff argued that hair dyes had become a necessity in the sense of the law because in this age "beauty and youthful appearance are needed by women almost as much as food."

That children are taught music at school is of vital concern to every

Father and Mother

THE schools of St. Louis are doing a wonderful work in the musical education of children. In the public schools alone, 120,000 children have a daily musical period. Participation in musical activities is required through the kindergarten, grade school, high school and teachers' college.

Thus from the earliest school days music is an integral part of the great program of progressive education graduating young men and women with well-defined ambitions into all walks of life.

The children are taught to read music, to sing, and, in instances where inclination exists, to play various musical instruments.

The school chorus, accompanied by the school orchestra, is a thrilling event, filling the hearts of the listening children with joy and pride.

Music in school is an introduction to art rapidly developing into an attachment that modifies disposition, quickens perception, broadens vision, refines association, and encourages the pursuit of culture.

In this perspective, music accomplishes much. Melodious sounds are preferred to careless noises. Underneath art is found painstaking effort. Beauty in literature appeals more than sordid narrative. Glimpses of attainment clarify into actual performance. Emotions are absorbed in the upbuilding of integrity.

While this constructive work is going on in schools, what, father and mother, are you doing to take advantage of this vitalizing interest in music?

If the schools give to music so large a place in the preparation for useful citizenship, how also important is it that within the family itself should be the means of studying and enjoying music?

With music in the home there is pleasure for all. Such homes are self entertaining. The tendency to wander is checked. The family functions as a unit. The love of home is never lost.

A Piano is essential. It is the one musical instrument that fulfills every musical requirement. A good Piano will last for years.

Go to an established store selling Pianos. There you will be met with courtesy, helpful advice and interested service—and you will find the Piano of standard make best suited to your needs.

Convenient terms will be offered. Take advantage of them, and if you have a Piano that has seen its best days or possibly a Phonograph, it will be accepted as part payment at a fair valuation.

Introducing
...a new and pleasant tasting eating yeast

Gone is unpleasant taste ~ only health-giving virtues remain

EARLY in 1917, eminent medical authorities in full recognition of the health-giving virtues of live yeast, freely recommended its general prescription.

Since then, innumerable feeding and treatment experiments conducted by authorities, worldwide, proved the soundness of their judgment. New uses, successful in remedying widely varied ailments were discovered. And people, realizing that a new aid to health was to be found in almost every neighborhood store, soon swelled the sales of baking yeast.

But, baking yeast, even at its very best, was really never intended to be eaten raw. These health-seekers endured the unpleasantness knowing their health improved. And today, more than ever, we hear on all sides, "Isn't there some pleasant form in which yeast can be taken?"

There is. And a most delicious chocolate wafer form.

The first successful blend of yeast and chocolate

Laboratories have long sought to blend (not merely coat) yeast with popular chocolate. Recently, after many months of test and experiment, Dr. W. B. McLaughlin of New York, succeeded.

Known as C-Y Chocolate Yeast Wafers, each one contains as much yeast as one best grade compressed yeast cake. The unpleasant yeasty taste has been banished. Yet, the vital vitamin substance remains intact. Now yeast in truly palatable, even delicious form, can bring health to all.

Blended—not coated

Three wafers daily, eaten as a food or sweet, will remedy most stubborn skin and stomach disorders. Take them faithfully, and constipation, lost appetite or sapped energy will be quickly overcome. Under doctor's prescription, even serious conditions will be relieved.

Make it a point to start regular chocolate yeast eating today. Let yeast in this pleasant form give you new health — renewed vigor. You will find C-Y Chocolate Yeast on the counters of stores, everywhere. Always fresh, always effective, ever delicious. Write today for the free booklet "For Your Health's Sake". It tells how you, personally, can best be aided by yeast.

Girl of 17 Original of Hilda Wangel

Ibsen, at 61, Met Emilie Bardach of Vienna, and Wrote "The Master Builder" Around Her Piquant Personality.

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
Music and Drama Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

TO women, remarks John Tanner in "Man and Superman," the true artist "is half vivisector, half vampire. He gets into intimate relations with them to study them, to strip the mask of convention from them, to surprise their inmost secrets. . . He persuades women that they may do this for their own purpose, whilst he really means them to do it for his."

This sardonic way of a poet with a maid is exhibited with ventripotent humor in the scientific detachment with which Henrik Ibsen transmuted an adventure of amour into the stuff of tragedy for "The Master Builder," which Miss Eva Le Gallienne and her company will present tonight at the Shubert-Rialto.

September and May.

THE great dramaturge, in 1864, shook the dust of Norway from his feet and departed on a self-imposed exile which continued until 1891. During the autumn of 1889 he found himself at Gossensass, in the Tyrol. He was 61 years of age and world famous, for he had written "Pillars of Society," "A Doll's House," "Ghosts," "An Enemy of the People," "The Wild Duck," "Rosmersholm" and "The Lady From the Sea." At the moment, he was at work on "Hedda Gabler."

In Gossensass he made the acquaintance of a sprightly damsel of 17—Fraeulein Emilie Bardach, of Vienna. She appears to have flung herself at his head, with the purpose of decorating her belt of trophies with the most illustrious scalp in Europe.

It was a scalp which numerous ladies had sought to detach. Among the papers Ibsen left behind were sheaves upon sheaves of letters from women. All of them had something to demand from the creator of Nora—a cure for their agonies of soul, or for the incomprehension from which they suffered. "Almost every one of them," says Dr. Julius Elias, "regarded herself as a problem to which Ibsen could not but have the time and interest to apply himself." Mrs. Ibsen spoke of this chapter of his experience with ironic humor.

"Ibsen," she would often say to him, "keep these swarms of overstrained womenfolk at arm's length."

"Oh, no," he would reply; "let them alone. I want to observe them more closely."

"His observations," continued his pholosophical spouse, "would take a longer or shorter time as the case might be, and would always contribute to some work of art."

"The Norwegian Mastiff."

DESPITE his years, Ibsen at 61 was an impressive specimen of the masculine gender. Huneker speaks of him as "the old white-haired mastiff of Norway, with the head and hair of an electrified Schopenhauer and the torso of a giant, his temperament coinciding with his curt, imperious name."

"To the end of his career," according to the vivid portrait penned by Dr. Otto Heller, "he loved to spy out of a safe corner on the unwary, gloating over each unconscious self-revelation conveyed by speech and gesture, and hoarding it up in the iron safe of

TELVA AND PERALTA LEAD CAST FOR "IL TROVATORE"

James Wolfe, Judson House and Greek Evans Also Engaged for English Production of Grand Opera in Forest Park.

THREE members of the Metropolitan Opera Co. appear on the list of principals, made public today for the first time, who will sing in the Municipal Theater Association's producton of Verdi's "Il Trovatore" at the open air theater in Forest Park during tne week of July 5. They are Marion Telva, contralto; Frances Peralta, soprano, and James Wolfe, basso.

Miss Telva, a native St. Louisan vocalists at the Metropolitan, has been engaged for the role of Azucena. This will be her first St. Louis appearance in opera, though she has sung here as soloist on a regular program of the Symphony Orchestra.

Peralta in "Aida" and "Carmen."

MISS PERALTA, who has also been a soloist with the Symphony Orchestra, played the title role in the production of "Aida" in 1917, which christened that auditorium as a musical institution, and also sang the part of Carmen during Guy Golterman's season two years ago. She will have the role of Leonora in "Il Trovatore."

Mr. Wolfe portrayed Zuniga in the Forest Park production of "Carmen," and last year appeared at the Garden Theater, particularly as the Father in "Haensel and Gretel." His role this summer will be that of Ferrando.

The other principals will be Judson House, tenor, who plays Manrico, and Greek Evans, baritone, who will appear as Count di Luna. Mr. House is a well-known oratorio and concert singer, and appeared here in recital some seasons ago. Mr. Evans sang at the Odeon in 1920 as a member of the Scotti Opera Co., and has lately turned to operetta with appearances in "Blossom Time," "The Student Prince" and "The Song of the Flame."

Chorus to Number 96.

THIS production of "Il Trovatore" will be novel in that it will be sung in English. It is announced that an elaborate investiture will be undertaken. The season will open May 31 with "Eileen," and the succeeding works will be "The Red Mill," "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Spring Maid," "The Pink Lady," "Il Trovatore," "Sweethearts," "Iolanthe," "The Count of Luxembourg," "Woodland," "Fra Diavolo" and "Babes in Toyland."

The advance season seat sale is said to be in excess of $110,000. The chorus school is in its final weeks, and the 96 singers who will form this summer's ensemble will be selected shortly. The principals for the light opera productions will arrive May 17.

Adler Film Shown Today.

In commemoration of the late Jacob P. Adler, Yiddish actor, his single essay in the films, "The Struggle for Freedom," will be exhibited today at the Odeon, beginning at 1 p. m. and continuing until 11.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

TUESDAY will be an important anniversary in the history of entertainment. It is the thirtieth birthday of the movies as a theater-shown form of amusement. They made their debut before an amazed, almost unbelievable assemblage of New Yorkers in Koster & Bial's Music Hall, at Broadway and Thirty-fourth street, on the night of April 27, 1896—some jumpy, flickering images thrown on a canvas sheet at the end of a program of "variety" acts. The politer word vaudeville had not yet reached the American vocabulary.

A lot of things with which we are all familiar today were at that time either entirely unknown or, like the movies themselves, in the most elementary stage.

There were few automobiles, almost all of them foreign-made. Henry Ford was an obscure mechanic in Detroit. The safety bicycle was still rather a new thing, and pedaling on this—single or tandem—was the chief diversion of America. We ware singing "Daisy Bell," and there was no such word as jazz. There was no such thing as practical wireless telegraphy, much less the radio. A "new game called golf" was played by a handful and laughed at by everyone else. Women's hair and skirts were long. Cigars and cigarettes cost a nickel and a snappy suit of clothes might be had for $15. Grover Cleveland was President and the Spanish-American War was two years in the future. Such was "the American scene," as the intelligentsia would put it, when the "vitascope" appeared.

The spectators first gasped in astonishment, and then burst into applause and cheers, as a pencil of light pierced the pitch-black

Eva Le Gallienne In Contrasted Ibsen Roles

FROM Hilda Wangel, the incarnation of youth, to Ella Rentheim, an old maid dying and heartbroken—that is the span which Miss Eva Le Gallienne will undertake to compass this week at the Shubert-Rialto in her productions of Henrik Ibsen's "The Master Builder" and "John Gabriel Borkman."

"The Master Builder" has been played here many times, but this appears to be the first St. Louis presentation of "John Gabriel Borkman," next to the last of Ibsen's dramas. The youthful actress, last seen here as Princess Alexandra in "The Swan," will be supported by Egon Brecher of the Staadt Theater, Vienna; Miss Beatrice Terry of His Majesty's Theater, London; Harold Moulton, Ruth Wilton, Sayre Crawley, Sydney Machat, Ellida Pierra and Beatrice de Neergard.

"The Master Builder" will be given tonight, tomorrow, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings, and Wednesday afternoon. "John Gabriel Borkman" will have its first performance Wednesday night, and will be repeated Friday evening and Saturday afternoon.

A war film, 'The Big Parade," by Laurence Stallings, will begin a run at the Shubert-Rialto next Sunday night. On the same evening Miss Irene Bordoni, in Avery Hopwood's "Naughty Cinderella," will open a week's engagement at the American. Miss Anna Fitziu, opera singer, will be featured at the Orpheum next week in a miniature song recital.

"Hell Bent for Heaven."

LONDON April 24.—One of the new plays of the week is "Hell Bent for Heaven," an American importation, which one critic described as having "more power than anything Eugene O'Neill ever wrote." It was likewise well received by the public.

Gustafson to Be Apollo Club Soloist

THE Apollo Club's ninety-sixth concert, with which it concludes its thirty-second season Tuesday night at the Odeon, will present as soloist Miss Lillian Gustafson, soprano of New York. She has sung actively with various symphony orchestras and other musical organizations.

Her program will be as follows: Aria, "Rossignols Amoureux," Rameau; "Somni Dei," Handel-Bibb; "Pastorale," Carey; "Echo Song," Norwegian folk tune; "Invocation of the Sun God," Troyer; "Fairy Pipers," Brewer; "Virgin Lullaby," Reger, and "Sing Again," Protheroe.

Sullivan's "Chorus of Peers."

THE chorus of male voices, under the direction of Charles Galloway, will present Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Chorus of Peers," Mark Andrews' "Sea-Fever," John Lund's "Woodmen's Song," Eric Meyer-Helmund's "The Magic Song" and Dudley Buck's "Chorus of Bishops and Priests." Paul Friess will be the piano accompanist, and Herbert Fenton will be at the organ during the two final numbers for chorus.

The Philharmonic Society of St. Louis, an orchestra of nonprofessionals directed by Frank Gecks, will give a concert Thursday night at the Roosevelt high school auditorium. Miss Helen Musick, soprano, will be soloist, and Mrs. Esmeralda Berry-Mayes accompanist.

Haydn's "Surprise" Symphony.

THE program will be as follows: "Surprise" Symphony, Hadyn; aria, "Il est doux, il est bon," from Massenet's "Herodiade;" Debussy's Minuette, three songs—Lehmann's "The Cuckoo," Gartlan's "The Lilac Tree" and Strickland's "My Lover Is a Fisherman"—and the overture to Weber's "Oberon."

The Missouri Chapter of the American Guild of Organists will meet tomorrow evening at Sheldon Auditorium, and discuss "The Unit Organ—Is It a Heresy?" The annual election of officers will be held. Ernest R. Kroeger will give a pianoforte recital Thursday night at Progressive Series Hall, 4525 Olive street. The Musicians' Guild, with Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum as chairman, will manage the activities of St. Louis in connection with the third celebration of National Music Week, May 2-8.

Drama League to Meet in New York

NEW YORK, April 24.—The seventeenth annual convention of the Drama League of America will be held at Hotel Pennsylvania May 5-8. These dates coincide with those of the annual Little Theater tournament.

Among the speakers at various sessions will be Augustus Thomas, John Murray Anderson, Kenneth Macgowan, Barrett H. Clark, Helen Arthur, Hatcher Hughes and Frank Gillmore.

Revival of "Iolanthe" Is Triumph

Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Produced by Winthrop Ames—Raquel Meller to to Make Cross-Country Tour to See Hollywood.

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, April 24.

ON perhaps four or five first nights of the several thousand I have attended in one land or another during the past dozen years did the audience seem to be having as good a time as the bubbling and delighted assemblage which filled the Plymouth Theater on Monday night for the first performance of the "Iolanthe" revival which Winthrop Ames has been brewing behind closed doors these many weeks past.

It is incomparably the best performance which has blessed a Gilbert and Sullivan opera in my time. Since "Iolanthe" is one of the Savoy works less frequently heard in this country, the house was full of youngsters to whom its sweet tunes and high nonsense came fresh.

Where Are They Between Times?

BUT the main body of such an audience are the faithful who are seldom seen at the premieres except when the works of Gilbert and Sullivan are sung. I do not know what they do in between times. Sit at home and sulk, most likely. Or perhaps play the scores over on their victrolas. And that is not so easily managed as you might imagine.

For only in England are all the operas made into records, and it takes some kind of shennanigan for an American to get a set for his home over here. The [illegible] to do is to get the address of [illegible] gramaphone company out of [illegible] advertisement in Punch and [illegible] arrange with some passer-b[illegible] and ship the records to you[illegible].

I worked out the syste[illegible] great care two years ago, [illegible] it did not take me a day o[illegible] months to achieve the complete delivery on my remote doorstep. There was nothing then to do but just sit back and bask in the sunny prospect of hearing this enchanting music every night.

Shortly thereafter the equally loyal Savoyards among my neighbors began to drop in and borrow "The Pirates of Penzance," say, or "The Gondoliers"—just for the evening, you know. And now, of all my treasure, not a morsel remains.

ON Monday night all the faithful were there, with Edna Ferber beating her palms and Montague Glass "one vast substantial." Only Robert Benchley was absent, addressing some women's club in St. Louis and hating everyone in his audience, I am sure. Scattered about one could see sundry graybeards keeping jealous tabs on every word—men who, in their salad days when "Iolanthe" was new, had sung it in the amateur opera companies with which this country was infested 40 years ago. I would wager there were at least a dozen there who, had Ernest Lawford faltered at his task, were perfectly prepared to climb right over the footlights and show that audience how the Lord Chancellor should be sung.

For Mr. Lawford, after an eventful year in which he has played Polonius in the plain-clothes "Hamlet" and the role of Christ in a California Passion play, now finds himself frisking about the Plymouth stage in the white whig of a role which De Wolf Hopper sang so magnificently back in 1912. This time it is possible for the Lord Chancellor to sing the first song as Gilbert wrote it. Mr. Hopper, when the role was his, used to feel it injudicious for him to venture on that couplet wherein the Lord Chancellor must unpack his heart thus:

"For I'm not so old, and not so plain,
And I'm quite prepared to marry again."

Truex in "Pomeroy's Past."

THE same night witnessed the first performance hereabouts of "Pomeroy's Past," a gay, irresponsible comedy beaten up by Clare Kummer (with the whites of two eggs, I imagine) and served at the Longacre with Ernest Truex and Laura Hope Crews. The playgoers evinced a considerable curiosity to see what manner of role Mr. Pomeroy might be, for it had been played on the road by two such wildly assorted actors as William Gillette and Roland Young.

A playwright who would think of her comedy as suitable for either of these and then turn it over to the diminutive and delightful Ernest Truex betrays a flexibility in the matter of casting rare among our dramatists. Any day now I expect to hear that Miss Krummer is at work on a new play of which

HARD WORK LIMBERING UP CHORUS FOR OPERAS

Candidates Are Drilled Under Eye of Stage Director Charles Sinclair.

"Come on, girls, snap into it!" Stage Director Charles Sinclair signaled the pianist, five lines of women and two of men stretching across the big auditorium at Jefferson Memorial broke into rapid and rhythmic motion, and a special rehearsal to demonstrate what it takes to make a Municipal Opera chorister was under way.

But not for long. "No, No!" Sinclair was pounding on the piano-top. "Haven't you heard me say it's no good if the line's not straight? Dress up, there. Right dress! And dress by the shoulder."

Again they tried it, while Sinclair walked along the line with the eye and voice of a top sergeant. "Waist high, girls, waist high! And watch that line!"

"Anything They Want to Wear."

There was plenty of variety in those ranks, in face, figure and dress. "Anything they want to wear," as Sinclair explained. Here was a high school girl's gymnasium dress, beside her an abbreviated "Lord Fauntleroy" suit of the sort that frequent "kid party" dances, there a trio of home-made rehearsal dresses, and back in a far corner what appeared to be a bathing suit of considerable brevity.

Heavyweights and skinnies, bow-legs and pigeon-toes, apparently had been eliminated in the selection from 550 applicants of 300 men and women to start the course last January. Still there was lots of room for personal preferences—blonde, and brunette plump and slender, flappers of 16 and women of 30, high school girls, private secretaries, telegraph operators, stenographers and a dozen university graduates or students. But they were all flushed and breathless alike before they got the first dance to suit Sinclair.

Hardly had the lines broken and the 116 women and 46 men flopped down on chairs around the walls or sought the ice water when he was calling. "All right, the pony line. Is this a rehearsal, or are you having a party over there by the drinking fountain?"

He put two lines of girls through dances for the "Chocolate Soldier" and the "Red Mill" again and again until, in the middle of a dance, they flagged and stopped, exhausted. Then he called the men for a jig for "Eileen." Then he got them all together again and reduced the lot to a wreck of panting and perspiration.

Hard Work and Lots of It.

"Hard work? That's what it takes," he said, mopping his brow while the dancers had an intermission, an hour and a half after rehearsal began. "We haven't many stallers left, and getting the lead out of 'em is the hardest job."

It was a harder job with men than with women, he added. "Men haven't any sense of rhythm. I had to start my men walking to music. A step forward, then a step back. Pretty soon they were doing it like this"—— he was putting an extra half-step—— "and then I had them going. All they need is rhythm.

"The girls were different. They were able to begin with a dance, first thing. You see, every girl, at home, in gymnasium, at kindergarten or somewhere, has learned a few body motions—and she's been posing all her life."

Did the Charleston help? "No," emphatically. "That's just an asinine gyration of the legs."

Most of the girls were sitting down, while the chorus men walked around to ease their muscles. Two of them were having an impromptu sparring match. One or two were centers of groups of girls, and one was still practicing on the last dance, off in a corner by himself. The men were wearing stret clothes, stripped down to shirt and trousers.

Raising the Roof.

"All right, let's have the 'Chocolate Soldier' finale," Sinclair shouted. The crowd lined up and Louis Kroll, musical director, opened his score. It is a phrase from that chorus which has been ringing out over the park on recent nights in such volume as even to drown out the frogs of that section, which, whatever the natural advantages of those elsewhere, have at least the benefit of sitting in on excellent raining. Inside and at close quarters it seemed to raise the roof.

Kroll, Sinclair and David Russell, the manager, make final choice of the season's chorus of 96—64 women and 32 men. Last season's chorus was 90 persons, of whom 51 are trying out this year. Candidates are judged on appearance, dancing and singing. Singing is the most important, Russell said.

"——Look at that little girl, third from the end in this row," he broke off. "And notice those steps she's putting in. See, this other one isn't getting them. Four years ago when she started out here that girl was just about as puny a little thing as you ever saw—couldn't do anything. But watch her now. And listen to her."

To Discuss Community Welfare.

A conference to discuss community welfare problems will be conducted by the Washington University and St. Louis Community Councils, May 9, 10 and 11, at the City Club. Representatives from social work organizations, health departments and juvenile courts from seven Middle Western States will attend.

GIRL OF 17 ORIGINAL OF HILDA WANGEL IN "THE MASTER BUILDER"

his memory for opportune use. The oft-drawn picture rises up, by force of association, of the aged dramatist seated with an air of impenetrable reserve and in perpetual silence in his chosen nook at the Grand Cafe in Christiania, his malicious little eyes, armored with gold-rimmed spectacles and masked behind an outspread newssheet, leveled fixedly upon the telltale mirror on the opposite wall."

Ibsen received Miss Bardach's addresses as affably as a pathologist welcomes a guinea pig into his laboratory. In fact, he seems deliberately to have let himself go—for the purpose of subjecting his own emotions to the scalpel. For as the Viennese girl was the prototype of Hilda Wangel, so Halvard Solness is undoubtedly Ibsen—but Ibsen as he would have been had he been as impressionable as the master builder.

"Do Not Write to Me Again."

IN her album he wrote the lines, "High, painful happiness, to struggle for the unattainable;" and across the back of a photograph he scrawled the dedication: "To the May-sun of a September life." After they parted, he wrote her 12 letters, couched in a tone of sentimental regret for the brief, bright days of their friendship. Once he addressed her as "My dear Princess."

But in the ninth letter he wrote: "I feel it a matter of conscience to end, or at any rate to restrict, our correspondence." In a short note, the eleventh, he said: "Please, for the present, do not write to me again." When "The Master Builder" appeared, it does not seem that he took the trouble even to send her a copy. She had served her purpose and ceased, for the dramatist, to exist. On his seventieth birthday she telegraphed congratulations, to which he returned a cordial reply. Thus their relations ended.

What was actually going on inside Ibsen's head during this episode he related afterwards to Dr. Elias. It was in 1891, when the dramatist had gone to Berlin for the first performance of "Hedda Gabler." At luncheon while waiting for the train, he fell to chuckling over his champagne glass.

"Do you know," he said, "my next play is already hovering before me—of course in vague outline. But of one thing I have got firm hold. An experience: a woman's figure. Very interesting, very interesting indeed. Again a spice of deviltry in it."

Luring Other Women's Husbands.

THEN he related that he had met in the Tyrol a Viennese girl of very remarkable character. She had at once made him her confidant. The gist of her confessions was that she did not care a bit about one day marrying a well-brought-up young man—most likely she would never marry. What tempted and charmed and delighted her was to lure other women's husbands away from them. She was a little demoniac wrecker; she often appeared to him like a little bird of prey who would fain have made him, too, her booty. He had studied her very, very closely. For the rest, she had had no great success with him.

"She did not get hold of me," laughed Ibsen, "but I got hold of her—for my play. Then I fancy she consoled herself with someone else. Love seemed to mean for her only a sort of morbid imagination."

Still, the dramatist continued, this was only one side of her character. She had a great deal of heart and of womanly understanding; and, thanks to the spontaneous power she could gain over him, every woman might, if she wished it, guide some man towards the good.

"Thus Ibsen spoke," says Elias "calmly and coolly, gazing as it were into the far distance, like an artist taking an objective view of some experience. He had stolen a soul, and put it to employment."

Mrs. Ibsen as a Wife.

FRU IBSEN understood her husband thoroughly, as has been seen, and never took his philanderings seriously. Their marriage was unusually successful. It had no history—"a sure sign of happiness," Huneker observes. Dr. Heller elaborates upon the theme:

"Ibsen's one lucky stroke at Bergen was his marriage (1858) to Susannah Daae Thoresen, daughter of the rector and rural dean at Bergen. Mrs. Ibsen deserves a front place among the capable and long-suffering wives of men of genius. Simply to have endured for full half a century the company of this exacting and exasperatingly unsocial creature bespeaks the calm endurance of a saint. But not only did she contrive to bear with the bluntnesses and edges of his character, she learned to make him happy and, stranger still, to be happy herself in the security of his captured affections."

LESS THAN $200 IN GIFTS GIVEN TOWARD FRENCH DEBT

Greater Response Expected When M. Peret Names a Propaganda Committee.

PARIS, April 24.—The first list of voluntary gifts to be devoted to liquidating France's floating debt has appeared in the Official Journal. It amounted to 4408.85 francs (under $200), made up of sums varying from 1000 francs sent by an Algerian to 2.10 from an anonymous donor. A Russian refugee sent 100 francs and the president of a club of war-blinded veterans 170. A lady sent the Minister of Finance a heavy gold chain, saying she had no money.

A spinning mill owner has sent to the inland revenue officer of his department a check for 3000 francs, representing an hour's work of his employes. Deputy Father Lemire has forwarded M. Peret 100 francs from an aged Swiss woman, "French at heart."

No doubt 500 francs dramatically handed over to Finance Minister Peret by a deputy on the floor of the Senate will find its way on to this list. The deputy's example found no imitators at the moment, but the opinion is expressed that when M. Peret has constituted his propaganda committee for patriotic gifts, there will be a great response, notwithstanding the fresh burden of taxation just laid on the country.

AMERIKA - FRANKFURT EXHIBIT

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 24.—To commemorate the numerous commercial and cultural connections with the United States over a period of nearly a century, the city of Frankfort-on-Main, May 2, will open an "Amerika - Frankfurt" exhibition with the co-operation of American business men of German descent.

The first American consulate in Germany was established in Frankfort in 1828. During the Civil War large blocks of the Union war loans were floated by Frankfort bankers. The historical documents relating to these and other events have been collected by Prof. Bernhard Mueller and will be exhibited in the Frankfort Museum.

theater, struck the screen, and there was revealed the familiar and popular figure of Annabelle Moore, a serpentine dancer. For the benefit of the younger generation it may be explained that a serpentine dancer was one who pirouetted about, waving endless yards of silk—oh, so properly!

"Why, it's Annabelle herself!" they exclaimed.

There was a flash of the last act of Charley Hoyt's farce, "A Milk White Flag," then popular on Broadway, another dance by Mae Lucas from "The Gaiety Girls," and some bits of scenery. The last picture shown, however, was the knockout of the evening. It depicted some waves rolling in against the rocks at Manhattan Beach. The seat-holders in the first couple of rows actually ducked their heads and prepared to flee from the deluge that seemed to threaten them.

Thus, then, the movies came into being as a public amusement. The next step was the display of them in temporarily-vacated store properties, abandoned shooting galleries and the like. All the early films, such as those shown at Koster & Bial's, were about 40 feet in length, which meant that they ran for a little over half a minute each. Ten or a dozen of them made up a "program" as shown in the stories and shooting-galleries. A nickel was the admission cost. Some houses had no seats. Others rented chairs from the nearby undertaker, and when he had a funeral on hand the vitascope patrons were out of luck and could jolly well stand up.

There were no picture-plays or photodramas, as they later came to be called. It was several years after the vitascope's debut before a daring producer made "The Great Train Robbery," which was 800 feet long, had a real story to it, and ran about 10 minutes.

Today there are in the United States 20,233 theaters in which motion pictures are shown. They have a seating capacity of 18,554,859. One hundred and thirty million persons patronize them each week. Three hundred thousand men and women are regularly employed in the production, distribution and exhibition of the movies; $1,500,000,000 is invested in the industry; it ranks fourth among the nation's great business enterprises.

There are luxurious theaters seating as many as 5000 and bigger ones building. Feature pictures run as long as 12,000 feet and provide a whole evening's entertainment. There will be some 700-odd photodramas, and twice as many "short subjects" made this year. It is estimated that 1,250,000,000 feet of raw film will be manufactured during that same period.

One of that long-ago audience in the Koster & Bial Music Hall was the late Charles Frohman. He made an odd prediction, when interviewed next day: "The vitascope means the end of stage scenery. Some day before long the scenery will be thrown upon the stage with this device and the actors will appear in front of it. The dead things of the stage must go."

Even so astute a showman as Frohman did not foresee drama itself being thrown upon the screen, and this drama becoming the chief amusement—sometimes, indeed the only amusement—of thousands of times the number of persons who patronized his sort of theater. There are few road shows now—but the tiniest hamlets get the movies, and see exactly the same thing that Broadway sees.

REVIVAL OF "IOLANTHE" IS TRIUMPH OF HUMOR AND LAVISH SETTINGS

the leading part will be played either by Lenore Ulric or John Drew.

This production of "Pomeroy's Past" has its own history. Mr. Truex, in the first flush of his success in "The Fall Guy" last year, entered majestically the producing firm now appearing on a lot of elegant stationery and office doors as Boothe, Gleason & Truex. The firm was already prosperous as the producers of "Is Zat So?" which is now the reigning hit of London, but since Mr. Truex entered into the partnership after that had been launched, its success availed him nothing except, I suppose, a pleasant glow at such an association and a Christian gladness that his partners were doing so well.

Youth Will Be Served.

ANOTHER production, put on while he was on tour and in which he was affably permitted to share, failed miserably and was quickly forgotten. Mr. Truex grew restless, but he bided his time until Mr. Gleason should have sailed the seas to play "Is Zat So?" in London and until Mr. Boothe should have wandered off to Paris to see the sights.

Then he bought "Pomeroy's Past," engaged a theater, signed a lot of contracts with a neat, firm hand and finally notified his faraway partners to what he had committed them. Anguished cables were the response. To these Mr. Truex replied (by wireless and with simple dignity): "Give the kid a chance." Then grudging assent from the worried absentees and, now, at the Longacre, matinees Wednesday and Saturday, "Pomeroy's Past."

At this writing it seems highly likely that Raquel Meller will add to her New York engagement a swift, nimble cross-country tour. Despite the quite natural grumbling at the price asked by her management and despite the inevitable protests of the chronic dissenters who simply cannot hear a hullabaloo of admiration for any artist without saying, automatically: "Oh, she's not so much," great crowds are flocking to hear her and she is enjoying a reclame in New York such as she has never known before. It is, I suppose, our way.

Meller is a Catalan woman who, like Trilby, used to sing on the street corners; hers is the art of the jongleurs of old. She acts her songs and it is as an actress that she builds her following in each land to which she directs her vagrant steps.

Grumbling at $25 Tickets.

IT was the acquisitive gesture of her manager, E. Ray Goetz, in asking $25 a seat for the opening performance, which provoked the great rumbles in editorials and letters to the editor. We, who have heard Meller and rejoiced at her, are asked, with a nice mixture of rhetoric and passion, if she were really worth more than three times the price for a seat at the Metropolitan? Such questions always baffle me, for I cannot say whether the entertainment value of "The Cocoanuts," for instance, is accurately measured by the circumstance that the seats cost five times as much as those to the latest Chaplin picture.

Indeed, such questions undermine my carefree existence, and I find myself wondering whether I would not do better to cancel my sailing on the Leviathan for next month and devote the money thus saved to buying 3250 frosted chocolates—at decent intervals, of course.

The Meller tour, which will be limited to two performances in the biggest cities, is at present vaguely mapped out to include Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Chicago, Kansas City, San Francisco and Los Angeles. This should bring her to the Coast by June, and the whole undertaking can be traced to the fact that this Spanish woman, who has had such success in moving pictures at home, came to this country with only one secret curiosity. She wanted to see Hollywood.

And following naturally the pattern of existence by which she and her folks used to migrate with the seasons across Spain and Italy, she is going to Hollywood if she has to sing her way there.

WOMEN CHARGE HIGH INTEREST

English Usurers Exact 1200 to 9575 Per Cent a Year.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24.—Interest rates of from 1300 to 9575 per cent a year have been deemed too much for women money lenders who practice a peculiar form of petty usury on poor women in nearly every mill and industrial city in England. In Liverpool alone there are more than 10,000 of these women registered with the authorities. In a northern town, Hull, a woman has been fined heavily for charging interest rates of from 1300 to 9575 per cent on amounts under $5. Usually the victims are the wives of workmen, who, having borrowed small sums to tide over financial difficulties, pay high interest for months rather than let their husbands know of their predicament.

English Usurers Exact 1200 to 9575 Per Cent a Year.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24.—Interest rates of from 1300 to 9575 per cent a year have been deemed too much for women money lenders who practice a peculiar form of petty usury on poor women in nearly every mill and industrial city in England. In Liverpool alone there are more than 10,000 of these women registered with the authorities. In a northern town, Hull, a woman has been fined heavily for charging interest rates of from 1300 to 9575 per cent on amounts under $5. Usually the victims are the wives of workmen, who, having borrowed small sums to tide their financial difficulties, pay high interest for months rather than let their husbands know of their predicament.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY TO RECEIVE BUST

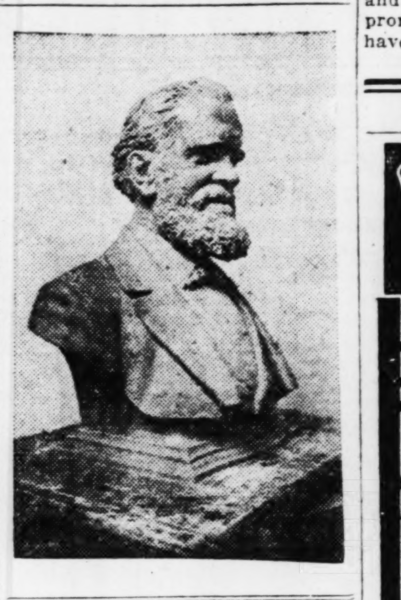
Likeness of Former Probate Judge Woerner Will Be Presented at Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Missouri Historical Society will be held at the Jefferson Memorial next Friday evening. It will be the first annual meeting of the society since the affiliation with the Louisiana Purchase Historical Society, which took place last November. Judge J. Hugo Grimm will pay a tribute to the late John H. Gundlach, former second vice president of the Historical Society. Others who will speak include William K. Bixby, Thomas M. Marshall, Breckinridge Jones, Dr. H. M. Whelpley, Stratford Lee Morton and Collins Thompson.

A bust by Victor S. Holm of the late Judge J. Gabriel Woerner, Missouri jurist, will be presented with an address by Charle W. Bates to the Missouri Historical Society, at the meeting. It is given by William F. Woerner and Mrs. Gabrielle W. Gildehaus, son and daughter of Judge Woerner.

The bust will be unveiled and informally presented to the society next Wednesday at a private meeting, this date being the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Judge Woerner, who died in 1900. The bust bears the inscription: "J. Gabriel Woerner, jurist, author, man, Judge of Probate 1870-1894."

BUST OF JUDGE J. GABRIEL WOERNER



Judge Woerner, who was born in Germany in 1826, came to the United States with his family at the age of seven, and in 1837 the family came to St. Louis. In his youth he entered the printer's trade. In 1851 he purchased the Tribune, which he made the stanch supporter of Senator Thomas H. Benton.

While clerk of the Recorder's Court, he studied law, and in 1855 was admitted to the bar. As a practicing lawyer, he became well known for his devotion to the cause of the poor and mistreated, and for his civic spirit. In 1870 he was elected Probate Judge and re-elected five times, holding this office until 1894.

Many of Judge Woerner's legal writings are coinsidered authorities by jurists in all parts of the world, two of the best known being "The American Law of Administration" and "The American Law of Guardianship."

Gowns Greek or Hungarian.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24. — Really smart spring gowns must have a dash of Greek or Hungarian in them, exclusive modistes of the West End declare. Margaret Bannerman, and many other smart actresses, who have appeared in recent new producitions in London, have set the pace for other women, and almost without exception prominent and attractive actresses have worn gowns which showed either the Greek or Hungarian influence in their trimmings. Touches of embroidery from Greek models and imitations of Hungarian peasant needlework with its many bright colors have been very generally adapted to late models.

IRREGULAR EATING CAUSED INDIGESTION

"My experience in the World War left me with an awfully bad case of nervous indigestion," says Mr. William M. Sanders, who lives on Cherokee Avenue Extension, Gaffney, S. C.

"I was treated for this for several months but could get no relief. I tried many things but nothing helped me. I suffered with bad spells of vomiting and at times had severe gas pains in my stomach. I grew worse and worse. I was thin and poor. I was extremely nervous. I could not bear for any one to speak to me. Pains would dart through my body. I was in a generally bad condition. I thought this was caused from irregular eating during the war.

"One day I decided to try Thedford's Black-Draught, because what I read of it sounded reliable. I got a package of the medicine and began to take it regularly. It was not long before I began to notice decided improvement. The bad gas pains soon ceased, the vomiting stopped, and I was decidedly less nervous. I kept the medicine up because I was so pleased with my improvement.

"We have not been without Black-Draught in our house for over three years. It has a regular place in our medicine cabinet. I weigh now more than I have ever weighed in my life and am in good health. When I have a little spell of indigestion or constipation now, I take a small dose of Thedford's Black-Draught before and after breakfast and in less than no time I'm all right. I would not be without it in my home for anything.

"My wife thinks as much of Black-Draught as I do. It has done her worlds of good."

YOUTHFUL SAINT LOUISAN FINDS HELP

Through the Use of Nature's Own Remedy the Great Herb Extract Preparation Known as Herb Juice.

"I feel very much indebted to your wonderful tonic-laxative Herb Juice for the restoration of my daughter's health, because before taking this great medicine, which has so wonderfully relieved her, she was badly run down, extremely nervous, all worn out in the mornings, had no appetite, etc. But since taking only two bottles of the wonderful remedy, Herb Juice, she acts and looks like a different child," said Mrs. A. T. Spann, who resides at 3455 Indiana avenue, the proud mother of the beautiful girl whose picture appears below, in a recent conversation with the special demonstrator at Walgreen's Drug Store.

condition was rapidly growing worse. I began to search for something to build her up. Of course, I tried numerous remedies and they all seemed to be about the same, as none of them gave her any noticeable relief. Finally, after personally observing the wonderful results obtained by friends, I decided to try Herb Juice for my child. And before she had finished the first bottle she began to act and look a great deal better than she had since she was a mere baby. She has now taken two bottles and does not look like the same girl. Her nerves have quieted down wonderfully well; she eats heartily and never complains any more about

MISS LELIA SPANN

In continuing her statement of the condition of her daughter before she tried the great Herb Extract Remedy, called Herb Juice, Mrs. Spann said: "I was beginning to feel alarmed about Lelia because she was not as active and lively as a child her age should be. She just sat around the house all the time and continually complained of feeling tired, and the least thing seemed to get her nerves on edge. I don't think I have ever seen a child her age quite so nervous as she was at times. In the mornings when she would arise she seemed to be more tired and worn out than when she retired the night before. Her appetite was very poor; she ate very little of anything. I noticed her feeling tired in the mornings. It makes my heart glad to see the way she gets around and how much more energy she seems to have. And I know that Herb Juice is solely responsible for this great improvement in my child, and words cannot express my gratitude toward this great medicine."

This great laxative medicine is an Herb Extract preparation, known as Herb Juice and is outselling any medicine where it has been introduced. Many are calling daily to see the special demonstrator at Walgreen Drug Company, 514 Washington avenue, giving statements for publication, praising this great remedy that their friends may be induced to try it.

SANDLESS GLASS IS MADE AT CORNELL U.

Germanium, Rare and Costly Substitute, Used by Scientists in Laboratory Experiments.

By the Associated Press.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 24.—Sandless glass is being made in the chemistry laboratory at Cornell University.

The substitute for sand in the process of manufacture is the dioxide of germanium, a rare, mysterious and costly element which Prof. L. M. Dennis, head of the Department of Chemistry, is now able to produce in quantity after years of experimentation.

Whether the new glass has properties that will make it of great value for optical purposes is still undetermined, but the results thus far obtained indicate that it has unusual refractive qualities.

Chemists are still puzzled by germanium. They frankly admit that until it was put to work making glass they had not known what to do with it. Even now they are confident it has other and more important uses to which science some day will apply it. At present Prof. Dennis is studying its compounds with a view to determining whether the element has medicinal properties that will make it of inestimable value to mankind.

Germanium is extracted from crude zinc oxide. In crystalline form it is a glossy, flaky substance resembling zinc, hard and extremely brittle. It is worth many dollars a gram, and Cornell exhibits the largest mass of the element ever assembled, a round piece, beautifully crystalline, about the size of a silver dollar and weighing 104 grams.

It has been learned that crude zinc oxide can be heated with strong acid under such conditions that a volatile compound of germanium of high purity distills over. This is decomposed by water so as to produce pure germanium oxide, a white powder. Prof. Dennis further discovered that ingots of the pure metal could be obtained by fusion of the powder under ordinary salt.

Laboratory tests disclosed that a gram of germanium could be extracted from a pound of zinc, and the production has since proceeded on this basis.

DEATH THINS RANKS OF EUROPEAN MOTHER QUEENS

Three Died During the Winter and Now Only Six Are Left.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24.—Death has taken a heavy toll of Dowager Queens in Europe this winter, the death of Queen Louise of Denmark following within a few months that of Queen Alexandra and Queen Margherita of Italy.

There are now only six Queen mothers remaining, those of reigning houses being Queen Cristina of Spain, and Queen Emma of the Netherlands.

The Empress Marie of Russia remains of the great Russian aristocrats, and two Queen mothers of Greece are still alive, in the persons of Olga, widow of King George I, and Sophia, widow of King Constantine. Queen Amelie, widow of King Carlos of Portugal and mother of ex-King Manuel, is also living.

St. Louisans on State Fair Board.

Three St. Louisans have been named as district members of the Missouri State Fair Board, which will make plans for the annual State Fair to be held Aug. 14 to 21 at Sedalia. The St. Louis members are W. E. Leach, 3024 North Taylor avenue, member for the twelfth district and director of the Speed Department; Adolphus Boeckeler, 3550 North Hall street, member for the eleventh district and director of the Horseshoe Tournament and Livestock Parade; and F. W. A. Vesper, member for the tenth district and director of the Dairy Cattle Department.

Son of Princess Sets Fashions.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24.—Although quite unaware of it, Master George Lascelles, elder son of Princess Mary, has begun to set fashions at the tender age of three. At a recent needlework exhibition, Princess Mary admired a dressing gown of pale blue flannel decorated with white kittens, whiskers and all. Appliqued kittens were on the sleeves and front, and a kitten peeped out from each pocket. The princess made a purchase of one of these gowns, with slippers to match, and now all small boys of the smart set—or at least all mothers of small boys in the smart set—want to have dressing gowns "like Princess Mary's little eGorgie."

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Fol

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It gripes, sickens, or upsets the Besides it is absolutely harml pleasant to take.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUT TROOPS

SCOUT TROOPS GIVE BURLESQUE CIRCUS

Both Boys and Girls Take Part in Unique Entertainment at Lutheran Church.

The "accordion-necked gook, which lives in Cuba among the cube roots, and is with difficulty extracted from them," was exhibited for the first time in St. Louis April 14 and 15 at a burlesque circus given jointly by Boy Scout Troop 130, of the Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church, and an unregistered Girl Scout troop of the same church. This exotic beast, with its goat face, pig's body, and collapsible neck, was the stellar attraction of the circus menagerie, which also included Isadore, the Irish elephant; two ponies, a giraffe, a wampus cat, two monkeys, a lion, a bear and an ostrich. The parts were all taken by boys.

Thirty-two boys and 15 girls participated in the two performances, which were witnessed by over 600 persons. There were 24 acts, starting with a grand parade, and ending with a "chariot race" by six kiddie-kars. The program included a clown band, an equestrian act, tight-rope walking by Dorothy Ottman and Dolores Wentz, and a prizefight. Clown events were numerous, the boys being led by Harold Tibbles and Edward Dueing, and the girls, who gave a clown dance, by Ruth Wieland. Miss Wieland also led an Indian dance. Individual acts consisted of stunts by the animals, snake charming by Thelma Hoffman, and a "strong man" demonstration by Richard Kinderman, the smallest Scout in the troop.

Side shows were not forgotten, there being eight scattered about the room. The most popular were the monkey cage, containing a mirror, and the "rare hairless dog," which was a frankfurter.

The show was under the direction of Ringmaster Edward Henkey, patrol leader of the Wolf Patrol. He received special applause for his performance.

The part of Isadore, the Irish elephant, was taken by Ralph Robertson and Stanley Nelson, and those of the other animals as follows: Giraffe, Fred Zeltman and Ray Zimmer; ostrich, Glenn Stieg; wampus cat, Richard Kinderman and Ray Duson; ponies, Seymour and Stanley Nelson; lion, Alban Baltzer; bear, Charles Werner; monkeys, Harry Ottman and Ray Duson; gook, George Tibbles Jr. and Harold Butch. William Ginther was the animal trainer.

The troops cleared nearly $200 on the two performances.

Headquarters.

The first annual Fathers and Sons' week-end camp will be held May 14-16, according to an announcement from local Scout headquarters. Every father whose son is a Scout is invited to spend the week-end at the Irondale reservation with his son. Reservations for the camp are being taken now.

The Campers' Saving Club closed yesterday with a last-minute rush of new signers which brought the total number of members to nearly 1000. Reservations for the camp from now on will be taken on a "first come, first served" basis. Scouts desiring to secure a place at camp may do so by depositing a dollar, and paying the remainder of the camp fee before the opening of camp.

The Social Service Workers of St. Louis have reserved Camp Irondale for their annual week-end camp May 1 and 2.

North District.

The reregistrations of the following troops will be due May 1: Troop 3, Grace Hill Holy Cross Church; Troop 84, Salvador Evangelical Lutheran Church; Troop 88, Salem Evangelical Church; Troop 133, Epworth M. E. Church: Troop 88, Salem Evangelical Church: Troop 133, Epworth M. E. Church: Troop 147, Lillian Avenue Christian Church; Troop 148, Hyde Park Congregational Church; Troop 149, St. Paul's M. E. Church, and Troop 235, Pilgrim Evangelical Lutheran Church.

The charters of the following troops will expire May 1, and the troops will no longer exist officially unless reregistrations are in at headquarters by that time: Troop 108, Holy Rosary Catholic Church; Troop 142, Elleardsville Y. M. C. A.; Troop 190, Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints; Troop 191, St. Stephen's Evangelical Church; Troop 233, St. Teresa's Catholic Church, and Troop 2, Ferguson Presbyterian Church.

In the absence of Scoutmaster A. W. Bierman of Troop 1, Troop Committeeman F. A. Wendt has taken charge of the troop for the last few meetings.

The Troop Committee of Troop 3 selected Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Monroe Phillips to attend the patrol leaders' training camp this week-end as the representative of the troop. At the troop meeting last Tuesday, Monroe Phillips and Eugene Libermann tied for first place in a signalling contest. Roy Goheen and Eltonn Stone passed their cycling merit badge last Sunday. Goheen, Stone, Liberman and Phillips recived a total of nine merit badges Monday night.

Senior Patrol Leader Kennedy of Troop 29 took the troop on an overnight hike to Cliff Cave last Saturday and Sunday. This troop is forming a cycle club, two members of which plan to make a trip to Chicago. The troop has also started making bird houses.

Five-mile hike from Washington and Clay avenues, Kirkwood, along Sugar Creek to the Meramec Highlands car loop. There are woods along most of the route.

The scouts of Troop 40, Third Baptist Church, held a farewell meeting Friday evening for their scoutmaster, Arnold R. Tucker, who is moving to Chicago. His successor has not yet been selected.

Troop 47, of the Kingshighway Christian Church has changed its meeting night from Friday to Wednesday.

Troop 72, of the Neighborhood Association, sent three members to the Patrol Leaders' camp this week-end, paying part of their expenses. Scoutmaster Hancock has invited the parents of the scouts to attend the meetings to see the work of the boys. The Beaver Patrol has been elected to put up bird houses on the next hike.

The scouts of Troop 92 were guests of Scoutmaster Custer at the police circus a week ago yesterday afternoon.

Troop 103 of the Elmbank M. E. Church, took their first hike of the season last Sunday, taking a train to Valley Park, and hiking five miles from there to the Ranken cave, on the Antire road. Camp was made at the cave, which was thoroughly explored. Flashlight pictures of the scouts in the cave were taken, the troop claiming that this is the first time a scout troop has done this. After lunch Scoutmaster Miller laid a trail, which the scouts used to pass tracking tests. He also gave a talk on conservation of insect and animal life. The afternoon was spent playing games, and hunting for arrow-heads and ant colonies. The troop hiked back to Valley Park.

Veteran Scout George Gerken has been commissioned as assistant scoutmaster of Troop 133, of the Epworth M. E. Church.

Scouts of Troop 156 are taking a leading part in an entertainment being given by St. Casimir's Church this afternoon and evening. They will dance several of the Indian dances given at the last scout circus last February. The dances were taught to the troop by Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Louis Knapp of Troop 20.

Troop 173, which is being organized at the Walbridge school, will hold its next meeting Friday evening. Assistant Field Executive William Fanning, who has charge of the formation, has secured permission to use the school as a permanent headquarters, and all of the boys in the vicinity have been invited to attend.

Troop 184, of the Divoll school, reorganized and reregistered last Wednesday night, with a membership of 15. Eagle Scout Louis Landry, formerly of Troop 11, has been commissioned as assistant scoutmaster.

Jessie McMahon was taken into Troop 206 at the last meeting. He was presented by Scribe Isadore Miller. Jewett Lewis, formerly of Troop 3, has transferred to this troop. The troop now has a total of 28 merit badges, Scout Lewis having 10.

West District.

The Parent-Teachers' Association of the Washington School, 1131 North Euclid avenue, has appointed a committee to undertake the organization of a scout troop. E. Osborn has been asked to become scoutmaster.

Fifteen junior officers and five adult leaders of Troop 5, West Presbyterian Church, are attending the Patrol Leaders' training camp at Irondale this week-end. This is the largest representation from one troop in the camp. They left Friday, driving to camp by automobile. This troop has also the largest number of Scouts signed up for the summer camp in the West District, 14 boys being in the Campers' Saving Club. Troop 7 has the next largest number, with 13. All but 15 troops in the district have one or more boys signed for the camp.

Troop 30 held a three-mile tracking hike along the Meramec River last Sunday, trailing the Senior Patrol Leader, who was wearing irons, leaving a track resembling that of a deer. The trail ended near a spring, where camp was made, and the Scouts received instruction in nature study, and passed tests in fire-building, cooking and tracking. After eating, the troop returned to Meramec Highlands by a different route, collecting nature specimens for their troop museum. A contest was held to see how many trees the Scouts could name. The hike ended with a "stalk the deer" game at the Meramec quarry.

The regular meeting of Troop 46, Immanuel Baptist Church, was held as a series of hikes, each patrol being given sealed instructions to be opened at a designated place at 4:30 o'clock that afternoon. The instructions included observations to be made, good turns to be performed, cooking to be done, and a route to follow to a meeting place of all the patrols in a woods along the River des Peres outside the city limits. A council fire was made here, around which the patrols reported, and were awarded prizes. First prize was won by the Stags, second by the Foxes, and third by the Tigers. Songs, a story by the scoutmaster, and a marshmallow toast concluded the evening.

The next day the troop hiked to the hills along the Meramec. The day was spent in fire-building and cooking tests, instruction in judging, and games. Tuesday a patrol leaders' meeting was held at the home of Senior Patrol Leader Bud Carter.

Emery Nieman won first prize in a bird-house contest staged by Troop 90, of the Temple Shaare Emeth, last week. Harold Goodman won second prize, and Sydney Levy and Charles Miller tied for third.

The parents of scouts of Troop 150 attended an exhibition given by the troop at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church a week ago Friday. The Hawk patrol showed a collection of arrow heads, leaves, fungi, shells, pictures of birds, a star map, and some pelts tanned by Patrol Leader Ronald Smith. Leighton Taylor's patrol gave a demonstration of first aid, using all of the bandages required for first and second-class first aid tests. Another group under Acting Patrol Leader W. Edward Heyman set up a model camp, and gave a stunt called "A Rookie Patrol on an Overnight Hike." Besides the exhibits, the troop went through a model scout meeting, and Field Executive S. C. Reaves spoke on next summer's camp. The meeting closed with the Scout Oath and taps.

South District.

Twenty scoutmasters and assistant scoutmasters attended the South District overnight camp on the Lemp estate near Fenton, Mo., last week end. The group arrived in camp at 4 o'clock Saturday, pitched tents and cooked their meals. In the evening a council fire was held. The feature of Sunday's program was a hunter's stew served at noon after church services.

Alfred Reber and Edward Kendall are tied for first place in an achievement contest being conducted by Troop 63, of the Oak Hill Presbyterian Church. Both have 400 points. The contest will terminate Tuesday, and the winner will receive as a reward a trip to Camp Irondale at the troop's expense. Five of the six patrol leaders are attending the patrol leaders' camp at Irondale this week-end.

Patrol Leader Al Wilson's patrol is leading in an interpatrol contest being conducted by Troop 77, of the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church. The contest will close May 20, at whichtime the Mothers' Club cup will be presented to the winning patrol. This cup is given annually. The first patrol has had two hikes within the last two weeks, and the third patrol, under Patrol Leader Hollis George, had one. The fourth patrol gave the scout laws in pantomime at the last troop meeting. The new troop committee has planned a mothers' and sons' banquet for next Thursday night.

Twenty-seven scouts of Troop 86 went on a hike last Saturday to the troop camp site near Dupo, Ill. As this was the first hike of the year to the camp most of the time was spent cleaning up and repairing the cabin, but several short hikes were taken to places of interest in the neighborhood. The troop cabin was built for the scout circus last year, and transported to the camp site. At the last meeting of the troop Weston McElheny was elected troop bugler, and Ned Stein was elected scribe. Next week the patrol powwow methods will be officially adopted by the troop. A parents' night and investiture ceremony are planned for May 4. The patrols will put on stunts.

The Silver Foxes, with 190 points, are leading an interpatrol contest of Troop 141 of the Franz Sigel School. The Crows are next with 185 and the Wolves third with 170. Because the scoutmasters' training course is being held Monday evenings, the troop has changed its meeting night from Monday to Tuesday, so that the scoutmaster and assistant scoutmaster may attend. The junior assistant scoutmaster and senior patrol leader conducted the last meeting, introducing new games learned in the training course.

Four recruits were initiated into Troop 160 at an outdoor meeting in Forest Park last Monday night. The Panthers are leading an interpatrol contest with 33 points, the Eagles being second with 31. Howard Robinson was presented with a junior assistant scoutmaster badge last Monday by Deputy Commissioner W. S. Walter. He is attending the patrol leaders' camp at Irondale this week-end.

Twenty scouts, the scoutmaster, assistant scoutmaster and three troop committeemen of Troop 180 hiked to Wohler's farm near Wicks, Mo., last Sunday. Each scout was required to make a fire by flint and steel before cooking dinner. A clay oven was built, in which the boys baked biscuits. In the afternoon a treasure hunt was held, the prize being a box of marshmallows.

Suburban District.

Patrol Leader Yourtee and his Flying Eagle patrol defeated Kinchloe's Buffaloes in a knot tying contest conducted by Troop 85 at their last meeting. Scouts Pingle of the Eagles and Beard of the Buffaloes did the best work for their respective patrols. At the next meeting the Black Bear patrol will compete with the Tigers, tying the same knots as the other two patrols.

Troop 186 left Friday afternoon in trucks for Lebanon, Ill., where they camped overnight. Saturday morning the troop visited Scott Field.

Three patrols, the Wolf, Fox and Beaver, were formed by Troop 1, Manchester, last Tuesday night. Patrol leaders were elected, and a knot-tying contest held.

The inter-patrol contest of Troop 3, Webster, closes Thursday. The Eagle patrol, under George Harris, is leading with 439 points, Earl Peter's Panthers being second with 387. Patrol Leader Harris is leading in the individual contest, with 138 points, Scout Lacey being second with 127. A first-aid contest is scheduled for Thursday.

Troop 6, Webster, is still leading the Suburban District in the number of boys registered to attend Camp Irondale this summer.

The patrol leaders' pow wow of Troop 8, Webster, last Sunday, discussed a code of standards, to develop a high class of requirements for the different ranks of scouting in that troop. Seven patrol leaders and the newly-elected junior assistant scoutmaster and senior patrol leader attended. The boys also discussed the various problems they have met in their patrols, and aided each other in their solution. Troop 8 has worked out a system whereby a verbal message from the scoutmaster may reach every one of the 55 boys in the troop within 15 minutes in case of an emergency. At the last troop meeting, the Rev. Jones, of the Emanuel Episcopal Church, visited the troop.

Troop 11, Webster, gave a banquet to their fathers a week ago Friday evening at the Tuexdo Christian Church. About 20 boys and their fathers were present. Girl Scouts of Troop 2, Webster, served as waitresses. The event of the evening was the formation by the fathers of an "Old Scouts" organization, the only requirement of which is that the member be a "good scout." The fathers will thus be enabled to keep in closer touch with the troop. The evening's program consisted of songs, talks and stunts, demonstrations of first aid, signalling and knot tying. Field Executive Red Leavitt spoke to the fathers on how they could help the troop.

Last Sunday Troop 15, Webster, attended 7:30 mass in a group with the entire Webster Groves Council, Knights of Columbus. After church the boys were guests of the council at a breakfast held at the council clubhouse on Big Bend road and Lockwood avenue. Father Cochran acted as toastmaster. Senior Patrol Leader Tom Tierney made a short talk, and was followed by Field Executive M. N. Leavitt. The boys sang a song of their own composition, called "Let Me Call You Red Head."

AIRPLANE CUTS FREIGHT RATE ON FOOD IN TYROLESE ALPS

Collect 3 Cents a Pound as Against Mule Train Charge of 12 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 24.—Tourists at hundreds of mountain inns of the Bavarian and Tyrolese Alps this summer will be fed by a fleet of airplanes from Munich and Innsbruck, dodging among the snow-capped peaks and dropping cargoes up to 200 pounds by means of parachutes.

More than 1,000,000 tourists visited these parts of the Alps last year. The problem of transporting large quantities of supplies has been getting more difficult each year. It cost about 12 cents a pound to carry freight by rail and pack mule from Innsbruck, for example, to the Brandenburg Inn, 10,000 feet up in the Oetztaler Alps. The South German Aero-Lloyd Co. has contracted to carry the supplies by air for 3 cents a pound.

NOTED ARTIST ALMOST BLIND

Oblivion of Late Years of Jean Boldini Explained.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 24.—The oblivion of late years which has fallen on an artist, who once was among the most prominent in every salon, was explained this week when it was learned that he has become almost entirely blind.

Jean Boldini, who once commanded his own price for portraits, many of which adorn American homes, was seen at the exhibition of Jean Gabriel Domergue's paintings, being led by a young girl. The young guide told the octogenarian painter of the various canvases, on one occasion assuring him: "Here is a very fine portrait, Master, much like you used to paint."

Drunkard
Sunshine vs. Moonshine

(Written by a woman who saved her husband from the drinking evil)

man is very good to me.
So loyal, kind and true.
never comes home really drunk.
As other husbands do,
sometimes, when he's "got too much."
I wish that I were dead:
For there's no sunshine in my heart,
When moonshine's in his head.

me folks can laugh at such a plight
Of some poor drunken fool, me there's naught but aching heart
And pity for Satan's tool.
when he's had just "one too many,"
I fear that we must part;
when there's moonshine in his head
There's no sunshine in my heart.

Within the garden of my life,
Love bloomed in every thought.
But now I fear 'tis wilting fast
And love must come to naught.
pray before it is too late,
He'll think how oft I've said,
There's no sunshine in my heart, dear,
When there's moonshine in your head."

Our hearts have sunshine there.

The act you cannot rue.

PROGRESS REPORTED BY ST. LOUIS ART LEAGUE

Organization in Better Position Than Ever to Carry On Its Program.

A report of progress issued yesterday by the St. Louis Art League states that the organization is in a better positon now than ever before to carry on its program of exhibitions and competitions, awards and educational scholarships, and the encouragement of designers, painters, sculptors and other producers of works incorporating art.

The annual survey of progress in architecture, a suspended activity of the league, will be resumed shortly with awards to owners for the best achievements completed from time to time, it was announced. Competitions for improvement of public places by art, such as mural paintings, sculpture and landscape design, are also under consideration.

Progress is reported in the establishment of neighborhood art centers, seven exhibitions now being under way in various parts of the city.

Plans for the coming year include the annual "Thumb-box Exhibition," a traveling exhibit for the State Fair at Sedalia, a portrait show contemplated as an art-social feature, a retrospective exhibition of art associated with St. Louis, and an all-arts festival. The annual "Scenic Charm of Missouri" pictorial display by Missouri arts is now open at the Public Library with 150 pictures by Missouri painters.

Three St. Louis painters are holding a joint exhibition at the Shortridge Galleries, 4418 Washington boulevard, continuing until May 4. Katharine Payne Starr is exhibiting a group of miniatures, Olive Holbert Gibson, 18 landscapes, and Valentine Vogel, 35 still life paintigs.

AMERICAN WOMEN DRESS BEST SAYS SIR JOHN LAVERY, ARTIST

It Is the Climate He Discovered on Visit, That Makes Americans Hustle So.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24.—The American woman is the best groomed woman in the world, in the opinion of Sir John Lavery of the Royal Academy of Art, who has just returned from the United States, where he painted many portraits.

Sir John, who was accompanied by Lady Lavery, said he had it on the authority of his wife that the American women "spend nearly all of their time on dress."

Many of the women, he said, although wealthy, do not have maids, "because they prefer to look after their own clothing."

Sir John is a great admirer of New York City. He maintains that the beauty of the American metropolis is considerably enhanced when it is veiled in clouds of smoke, as was often the case when he was there during the hard coal strike.

"I can do more work in America in four months than I can do in England in eight," declared Sir John. "And if we had the trans-Atlantic climate here in England we would all become hustlers like the Americans in an incredibly short time."

PRINCESS MARY STILL RETAINS ALL HER LOCKS

Daughter of British King Corrects Impression Created by Her Latest Published Portrait.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24.—Princess Mary has not bobbed or shingled her hair and is very eager that the English public be notified of this fact.

Reports that the Princess had had her locks clipped arose from the latest published portraits. These showed a full-face view of the King's daughter, and from the appearance of the hair it was quite generally taken for granted throughout the country that Princess Mary at last had succumbed to the fashion of the bob. But she has not, and the Princess has requested her intimate friends to let it be known in society and everywhere that such is not the case.

The bob appearance in the photographs was due to the way the hair had been arranged and this conveyed a false impression.

There were sighs of regret and of relief, too, among the English women when it was made known positively that Princess Mary still retained all her locks.

SPECIAL TRAINS FOR BERRIES,

Missouri Pacific Expects to Handle 1000 Cars This Year.

Special trains will be provided by the Missouri Pacific railroad to handle movement of strawberry shipments on its lines this season to assure strawberry growers in the railroad's territory of rapid service to the markets. While strawberries are already moving from a few Missouri Pacific points by express it is not expected that sufficient quantities to permit special train movements will be available until about the second week in May.

The outlook for a large crop of strawberries this year is excellent, the railroad's agricultural agents report. There are about 8000 acres of berries on the road which are expected to produce approximately 1000 cars of berries this year. The special trains will be operated between Little Rock and St. Louis, and Van Buren, Ark., and Kansas City.

SPRING CIRCUS SEASON WILL OPEN HERE MAY 5

Several Russian ExGenerals and Nobles With 101 Ranch Shows This Year.

The spring circus season for St. Louis will open May 5, when the 101 Ranch Real Wild West and Great Far East Shows begin a four-day engagement under canvas at Market street and Compton avenue. A street parade will be held Thursday morning.

The 101 Ranch show opened its season in Kansas City this year and comes here from Springfield. The feature of the show this year is announced as the Imperial Russian Cossack circus from the London Olympia, an organization said to be made up of veteran cavalrymen of the late Czar's Cossack guard. A band of 32 Russian musicians, a choir and several former Generals and members of the Russian nobility are in the troup.

There will be several hundred cowboys, cowgirls, Indians and vaqueros, 500 elephants, camels, horses and other animals, besides a number of circus acts, according to advance notices. Stage coach rides, Indian attacks, and the burning of a wagon train will be reproduced.

Performances will be at 2 and 8 p. m. daily except on the first day there will be no afternoon show.

Liquor to Replace Convict Cargo.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 24.—"La Martiniere," the convict ship which sailed from the Island of Re recently with 340 lifers and long-term men aboard, will dismantle the iron cages which now constitute its hold as soon as its human cargo is landed and proceed to Jamaica to take aboard 16,000 kegs of rum for Havre. "Sailing west with the effects and returning east with the cause," said a prohibition advocate when he heard of the ship's charter for the return trip.

SAYS LAW REGULATION IS MENTAL DISEASE

Former Senator Beveridge Tells Attorneys of South Ballot Is Only Remedy.

By the Associated Press.

TEXARKANA, Tex., April 24.—Regulation by law has developed into a mental disease in America, Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, former United States Senator, declared here today in an address before the attorneys of Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana in convention.

The country is suffering from "the czarism of minorities" and gone virtually crazy with law-making and stands in need of a new type of lawmaker, said Beveridge. The former Senator from Indiana, who is the author of the only extended biography of John Marshall, first Chief Justice of the United States, presented Marshall's theory of the American Government—the national and state governments working in their own spheres and in case of conflict an independent judiciary to decide—as the best system for America.

The only cure for what he termed "the present undemocratic state of things" is to be found in the people themselves, and nowhere else, he said. "From absolutely no other source whatever can relief from venal and stupid legislation come," he said.

Beveridge paid his respects to "members of legislative bodies who care more for their temporary success at the polls than for the permanent good of the country" to blocs which urge laws for their selfish ends rather than the good of the whole and to "the social and economic martinets who try to make everybody else do as they want them to do."

Duty of Courts.

He denied that the present evidences of law-breaking were due to the after effects of the war, but said they were caused partly by the numberless statutes, ordinances and regulations forced upon the people.

"Courts must strike down legislative acts which vitiate the Constitution—their power and duty to do so is America's last bulwark of freedom and safety," he said.

Few things, in fact, can be regulated by statute, he said, and as an example he presented the Ten Commandments, many of which have been properly enacted into laws, "but no human law can compel the individual to love God, honor parents or purify the heart of covetousness."

"Everybody is so interfered with by impracticable legislation that a public psychology of antagonism to all law has been created," he continued. "Many of these enactments not only are unworkable, but beyond the domain of law altogether. Most so-called laws that honest Judges are called upon to declare unconstitutional, ought never to have been passed. Legislators vote for them to escape the attacks or win the support of the unthinking and emotional, rather than to stand by the Constitution and appeal to the sensible mass of the people.

"So many exactions are laid on commerce and finance that honest business men have a hard time to be sure that they are not lawbreakers and a certain censorship of press, drama and literature much worse than that of the ancient Star Chamber is seriously urged.

"It actually is proposed to handcuff the mind of man and make ignorance and prejudice the jailers of the intellect and knowledge of the nation.

Ballot Only Remedy.

"It is a curious fact that 1 nthe second quarter of the twentieth century, American citizens are by law forbidden to do more things and by law compelled to do more things than were the subjects of the Czar or Sultan in the eighteenth century.

"All this requires a prodigious number of Government officials, agents and employes. Including all subdivisions of Government, there are about 3,500,000 persons now in public service at a cost of nearly $4,000,000,000.

"One out of every 11 workers in America is supported by the other 10. Most of these public officials and employes are necessary, but hundreds of thousands are superfluous.

"This is not a result of our modern democracy and complex civilization. The same mal-development of government—the same craze for overregulation—took place in France under the autocracy of Louis XVI.

"Interference with the economic and social affairs of the people was then carried so far that there were Government inspectors of sucking pigs.

"The only remedy for foolish and hurtful legislation is to choose our lawmakers with greater care and judgment. It all comes down to that in the end.

"If we continue to elect professional politicians whose chief concern is re-election, we shall continue to have bad laws and stupid laws and an increasing number of them."

James J. McLaughlin in Business.

Formation of the McLaughlin Investigating Co. with offices in the Louderman Building, at Eleventh and Locust streets, was announced yesterday by James J McLaughlin, who resigned three months ago as chief of the local bureau of the Department of Justice. McLaughlin had been in Government service for 15 years.

"I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and within a week I could see an improvement. I continued the treatment and in about a month I was healed." (Signed) Mrs. H. L. Bood, 543 18th Ave. A, Moline, Ill., Sept. 11, 1925.

'OLDEST OLD MAID' BOBS HAIR

Mlle. Touzet, 103, Recalls Being Given Up by Doctors 80 Years Ago.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24.—Mademoiselle Restitude Touzet, born Jan. 6, 1823, and proud aspirant to the title of "the oldest maid in France," has just had her hair bobbed.

"Surely," she says, "one must keep up with one's time." She eats and drinks what she pleases and is particularly fond of an omelette with bacon, a specialty of the countryside. Her recreations are singing and playing cards and she does all her own housework.

Says Mademoiselle Touzet: "When I was a young girl I was thin and sickly. 'She's a bird fit for cat's meat,' the old folks used to say. Eighty years ago the doctor gave me up for lost."

PLANS BELATED HONOR FOR GEN. A. S. JOHNSTON

U. D. of C. to Raise Fund to Buy Civil War Hero's Birthplace in Kentucky.

By the Associated Press.

PADUCAH, Ky., April 24.—The Kentucky division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy means to reclaim for the State Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston, one of its most distinguished sons.

Mrs. L. G. Maltby of Washington, Ky., president of the division, is making this message to the First District chapters of the U. D. C., at Paducah and Mayfield. She said Gen. Johnston had been the first and unanimous choice of the committee appointed by Gov. Fields to select five Confederate soldiers of Kentucky to be immortalized on the Stone Mountain Memorial at Atlanta.

The plan of the Kentucky division is to raise funds with which to purchase the birthplace of Gen. Johnston, which still stands in Washington Village in a good state of preservation, despite its 140 years. The Kentucky U. D. C. hopes to convert the old homestead into a memorial to Gen. Johnston and a shrine of the Confederacy.

Met Death at Shiloh.

"Kentucky seems to have forgotten that she cradled so great a man," Mrs. Maltby said. "No Confederate General exemplified a nobler character, whose service to the South ended when he offered his body as a living sacrifice at Shiloh."

She deplored the fact that Kentucky had so long permitted Texas, his adopted State, to claim the beloved Commander in Chief of the Confederate armies at Shiloh, who died from a wound in the thigh while spurring his troops to victroy over the shattered armies of Grant and Sherman.

At the time of his death, April 6, 1862, Gen. Johnston was the ranking officer of the Confederacy in the field, being subordinate only to Gen. S. Cooper, Adjutant and Inspector-General of the armies of the South.

Known as "Lost Napoleon."

President Jefferson Davis, another famous Kentuckian, in his message to the Confederate Congress announcing Johnston's death, said, "Our loss is irreparable." This and lamentation throughout Dixie caused Johnston to become known as "The Lost Napoleon of the South."

Johnston was born at Washington, Ky., Feb. 3, 1803, son of Dr. John Johnston, who had come to the Kentucky territory from Connecticut in 1785. He was educated in the village schools at Washington, at Transylvania College, Lexington, and later at West Point.

Gen. Johnston's tomb is at Austin, Tex., which State claimed his body at the conclusion of hostilities between the states.

In 1857 he won national distinction as commander of the United States expedition against the Mormons, when he marched to the relief of a force of 2500 United States soldiers in danger of destruction from the approaching snows of winter, starvation and hostile arms of the Mormons. For his success in this expedition he was breveted a Brigadier-General.

Resigned From U. S. Army.

At outbreak of hostilities between the states, Gen. Johnston was commander of the Department of the Pacific with rank of Brigadier-General and enjoyed military fame and wide prestige in the United States army.

After Texas had seceded, and before his resignation from the army reached Washington, he had been commissioned a Major-General by President Lincoln and the commission started West to his post in San Francisco. He had also received unofficial word from official sources that he might expect a distinguished command in the Federal armies. It was his hope upon resigning to remain in retirement in California, taking no part in the impending struggle.

Takes Command in South.

But when he was put under military surveillance by the Federal Government he escaped to the South, making his way 1500 miles across the Southwestern desert. On reaching Richmond he was commissioned a General and placed in command of the Confederate forces from the Cumberland Gap to the Mississippi, in charge of the defense of the whole Western country.

He sought vainly to arouse the Western South to necessity of raising a great army. Reverses at Forts Henry and Donaldson came. The retreat from Bowling Green, and evacuation of Nashville followed. The culmination was the juncture of Johnston's and Beauregard's armies at Corinth, Miss., when Johnston at last had a force sufficient to oppose the invaders. This resulted in the signal triumph of the Confederate armies in the first day of the battle of Shiloh.

NINE U. S. BALLOONS ENTER BELGIUM RACE

Capt. Honeywell Missing From List Because His Entry Was Too Late.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 24.—With Capt. H. E. Honeywell, dean of American aeronauts, missing from the entry list of the national balloon races for the first time in several years, nine free balloons will start from the Little Rock airport on April 29 to decide the participants in the Gordon Bennett Cup race to be held in Belgium.

The United States Army has four entries, the other five being guided by civilians. Capt. Honeywell will not be in the race because his entry was received too late.

The race originally was limited to eight balloons of 35,000 cubic feet gas capacity. A place was found for a ninth entrant, however, in order that the United States Army team of four balloons might all start.

Besides the army entries, there are two balloons from Michigan, two from Ohio and one from California.

State Auditor J. Carroll Cone, who has been handling the airplane feature of the Little Rock Air Meet Association, says he expects more than 100 airplanes here for the event.

The balloon race entries, pilots and aids, follow:

Walter A. Ham, Los Angeles, piloted by Walter A. Ham; aid, Robert P. Lehr.

Akron Chapter, National Aeronautic Association, piloted by John A. Boettner; aid, Herbert W. Maxson.

S. U. A. Rasmussen, Detroit, piloted by Svend A. U. Rasmussen; aid, Edward J. Hill.

Detroit Flying Club of Detroit Aviation Society, piloted by Herbert V. Thaden; aid, Charles David Williams Jr.

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, piloted by Ward T. Van Orman; aid, Walter W. Morton.

U. S. Army, Phillips Field, Md., piloted by Lieut. James F. Powell; aid, Lieut. James F. Early.

U. S. Army, Langley Field, Va., piloted by Lieut. William A. Gray; aid, Lieut. Roland Kieburtz.

U. S. Army, Scott Field, Ill., piloted by Capt. Hawthorne C. Gray; aid, Lieut. Douglas Johnston.

U. S. Army, McCook Field, Dayton, O., piloted by Capt. Lawrence F. Stone; aid, Capt. Guy R. Oatman.

NAPS ON THE BENCH ABOLISHED

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 24.—Criminal court judges in Germany no longer will be allowed to snooze in their comfortable arm chairs while court is in session. The supreme judicial tribunal has cut out the century-old paragraph in the criminal code which held that a judge's mere physical presence in the courtroom was sufficient evidence of a fair trial.

Complaints by the bar association that jurists were taking advantage of the vague terminology of the code and making up for lost sleep when proceedings lagged, induced the tribunal to take action.

The new order gives either the state of the defense the right to a new trial if the judge slept at any time during the case. But, the order continues, the judge must have been so sound asleep that he obviously missed portions of the evidence or argument. Merely dozing off for a few minutes or even snoring audibly a few times, the tribunal ruled, cannot be regarded as evidence of actual slumber.

NEW DEBT OFFER OF FRANCE ABOUT $7,000,000,000

Would Include the Principal of $4,000,000,000 and Interest Payments for 62 Years.

U. S. COMMISSION TAKES UP PROPOSAL

Terms Better Than Those of Caillaux Mission but Some Revision Is Considered Likely.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—France's new proposal for settling her $4,000,000,000 war debt to the United States was given formal and official scrutiny today by the American Debt Commission with indications that changes would be necessary to assure its approval.

Taking up the offer as the possible basis for an agreement, the commission discussed it for an hour and a half and then decided to meet again Monday. While some members believed revision undoubtedly would be necessary, the fact that Ambassador Berenger exceeded the best offer made by the unsuccessful mission of Joseph Caillaux last year reacted well with commissioners who are hopeful of a quick and satisfactory conclusion of the negotiations.

Opponents Again in Action.

Immediately on conclusion of the commission's session today, Senator Smoot of Utah, one of its members, went back to the Capitol and called up the Belgian Debt agreement, and by doing so brought into action Senator Reed (Dem.) of Missouri, who renewed his attack on both the Debt Commission and the administration; Senator Borah (Rep.) Idaho, and others who opposed the terms they said the commission had allowed at the expense of the American taxpayers.

It was generally understood that the total of the French offer was in the proximity of $7,000,000,000, including interest payments over the 62-year period. This is almost $1,000,000,000 higher than the Caillaux proposal. Some doubt existed in the commission, however, on the advisability of accepting an initial payment of only $25,000,000 as against the $40,000,000 annual first payments at one time offered by Caillaux.

The French argument is understood to be that the depreciation in the exchange value of the franc makes it more severe for France to meet its first payments now than would have been the case last year. One reflection of the American attitude is that France's internal debt is correspondingly lowered.

One of the Problems.

One of the problems worrying the negotiators is believed to be an inclination of the French to insert some kind of a clause which would come to the aid of France in case the Germans defaulted on reparations.

There has been no inclination on the part of the American commissioners to even consider such a proviso, which is held to be flatly against the policy of this Government.

Some of the time of today's meeting was taken up with a comparison of the offers of Caillaux and that now before the commission.

Belgian Settlement Recalled.

In explaining the Belgian debt to the Senate, Senator Smoot said the Americans had foregone the interest on the post-war debt because of a provision in the Versailles treaty, signed by President Wilson, but not ratified by the Senate. This provison would have had Germany reimburse Belgian debtors in bonds.

"We took the moral obligation into consideration," he said, "but I want to say that Belgium is going to have difficulty in meeting the payments she has obligated herself to make."

Leaving the moral question aside, he said, the settlement was about the best that could have been obtained. It returned about [illegible] per cent of the principal, he contended, and about 47 per cent of the principal if interest be charged at the rate of 5 per cent up to the date the settlement was reached.

Objections of Borah.

Senator Borah objected to the provision in the Paris agreement.

WASHINGTON, April 24. — France's new proposal for settling her $4,000,000,000 war debt to the United States was given formal and official scrutiny today by the American Debt Commission with indications that changes would be necessary to assure its approval.

Taking up the offer as the possible basis for an agreement, the commission discussed it for an hour and a half and then decided to meet again Monday. While some members believed revision undoubtedly would be necessary, the fact that Ambassador Berenger exceeded the best offer made by the unsuccessful mission of Joseph Caillaux last year reacted well with commissioners who are hopeful of a quick and satisfactory conclusion of the negotiations.

Immediately on conclusion of the commission's session today, Senator Smoot of Utah, one of its members, went back to the Capitol and called up the Belgian Debt agreement, and by doing so brought into action Senator Reed (Dem.) of Missouri, who renewed his attack on both the Debt Commission and the administration; Senator Borah (Rep.) Idaho, and others who opposed the terms they said the commission had allowed at the expense of the American taxpayers.

It was generally understood that the total of the French offer was in the proximity of $7,000,000,000, including interest payments over the 62-year period. This is almost $1,000,000,000 higher than the Caillaux proposal. Some doubt existed in the commission, however, on the advisability of accepting an initial payment of only $25,000,000 as against the $40,000,000 annual first payments at one time offered by Caillaux.

The French argument is understood to be that the depreciation in the exchange value of the franc makes it more severe for France to meet its first payments now than would have been the case last year. One reflection of the American attitude is that France's internal debt is correspondingly lowered.

One of the Problems.

One of the problems worrying the negotiators is believed to be an inclination of the French to insert some kind of a clause which would come to the aid of France in case the Germans defaulted on reparations.

There has been no inclination on the part of the American commissioners to even consider such a proviso, which is held to be flatly against the policy of this Government.

Some of the time of today's meeting was taken up with a comparison of the offers of Caillaux and that now before the commission.

Belgian Settlement Recalled.

In explaining the Belgian debt to the Senate, Senator Smoot said the Americans had foregone the interest on the post-war debt because of a provision in the Versailles treaty, signed by President Wilson, but not ratified by the Senate. This provison would have had Germany reimburse Belgian debtors in bonds.

"We took the moral obligation into consideration," he said, "but I want to say that Belgium is going to have difficulty in meeting the payments she has obligated herself to make."

Leaving the moral question aside, he said, the settlement was about the best that could have been obtained. It returned about 55 per cent of the principal, he contended, and about 47 per cent of the principal if interest be charged at the rate of 5 per cent up to the date the settlement was reached.

Objections of Borah.

Senator Borah objected to the reversion to the Paris agreement, declaring he could not understand why that document was now brought in when it had been stated over and over again that the Belgian debt was settled on the ability of that country to pay.

The allusion to the Wilson agreement aroused Senator Reed, who, sweeping the almost empty chamber with his arm, declared "the strangest spectacle of all is the Senator from Utah wrapping the shroud of Woodrow Wilson about him to give sanctity to this settlement."

"Men frequently steal the livery of Heaven to perform the offices of the devil," he shouted. "I protest in the name of the dust that sleeps in the silent palaces of death against this outrage perpetrated upon the departed."

Although the Belgian agreement, he said, is more commendable than the Italian settlement, he declared that he "would prefer cancellation to these settlements."

How to Play Informative Double in Bridge Whist

Most Recent Advance in Game and Powerful Weapon Is Explained Here By Milton C. Work

The informative double, which he called the most recent advance in the conventions and most powerful weapon of auction bridge whist, was described yesterday to an audience, which, for the second time in two days, filled the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney auditorium, by Milton C. Work, one of the game's authorities.

Work is an advocate of the use of the informative double to a greater extent than some other authorities. He got considerable amusement by setting up imaginative hands and asking his audience to make their choice of three or four answering bids which he mentioned. The answers were nearly always wrong.

"The modern informative double, scientifically used," he said, "is the most powerful weapon of bridge, but, unknowingly used, becomes the most frightful boomerang. Given a partner who thoroughly understands it, a player not only gets the best in his hand, but usually makes children of opponents who do not understand it.

Two Cardinal Principals.

"There are two cardinal principles which must not be ignored. The first is that a double is informative only when the partner has not bid; otherwise, it is a business double.

"The informative double must never be used unless the doubler has five high cards that reasonably can be expected to take tricks in no-trump. In other words, if you are conservative with the informative double, your partner can be optimistic in answering you, and that gets the highest possible score."

Work then set up an illustration with the following fourth hand:

Two small spades.

Three small hearts.

King, queen, ten of diamonds and one other.

King, queen, Jack of clubs and one other.

In the opening of the rubber he cited a dealer's bid of one no-trump. Second had doubles, third hand passes and it is up to the fourth hand as cited, to answer its partner's informative double.

"How many would bid two clubs?" he inquired. There was a chorus of yesses.

"How many would bid two diamonds?" "Yes," came back in about the same volume as on clubs.

"Two no-trump?". A few scattering would have been two no-trump.

"Pass."

Right to Pass; Work Explains.

The very few who agreed to that were greeted with laughter, but "That's right," Work commented. "The bid was pass."

Then he explained. "Two clubs was wrong because an opponent's bid in a major would have shut you out. Two diamonds was wrong because it said merely, under proper conventions, 'I have four diamonds.' It did not say four large diamonds; in fact, your partner could conclude the diamonds were small.

"Two no-trump was all right.

"Remember, partner must have had five high cards to double originally. Thus, you likely would go game with two no-trump and I should bid that if the rubber was at stake. But I said this was the opening game of the rubber, hence the bid is 'pass.' It says to your partner: 'I have two strong suites, possibly three, hence I choose to convert your informative double into a business double.'"

Work also commented upon the adversary's double of a one-suite bid.

"If you have only two cards—say jack, ten—of the suite doubled, it is your duty to tell your partner that he may run into four trumps in one opponent's hand. The old rule of never going to a minor from partner's original major suite is discarded. It is your duty to inform your partner that you lack normal support in his suite.

Bid Your Five-Card Minor.

"So go to the five-card minor, if it is topped by the ace and either kinf or queen. If you have two suites and only two cards of each major, go to no-trump, ecen with only an ace and a king in your hand."

"Suppose my partner doubles a one-bid for information and I have a bust?" came the query.

"Bid your four-card major if it is only five-spot high," came the answer, emphatically. "Remember, the greater your weakness the more essential your take-out. Pass only with great strength. The greatest crime in bridge is to pass your partner's informative double with weakness."

Work concluded a two-day stay in the city last night at the Racquet Club. Besides his two public lectures he appeared before a private bridge class at Hotel Chase and before the Woman's Club.

MONUMENT TO WAR DEAD TO BE UNVEILED MAY 23

American Legion Also Arranges to Decorate Soldiers' Graves on Memorial Day.

Relatives of deceased service men are requested to supply the name of the soldier and the location of the grave to S. L. Fisher, chairman of the Legion Mortuary Committee, 417 Merchants' Exchange Building, in order that no grave may be overlooked Memorial day.

The unveiling of the monument, which is being erected on the American Legion plot in Memorial Park Cemetery, will be in charge of a committee headed by Eugene Fitzgerald of Walter Runge Post.

E. H. GARY'S GRANDDAUGHTER BRIDE OF CHICAGO BANKER

Miss Elizabeth Campbell Married to Edward Sutherland Clark in Evanston.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 24.—Before 700 friends and relatives, including her grandfather, Elbert H. Gary, Miss Elizabeth Campbell, tonight was married to Edward Sutherland Clark, young Chicago banker. The ceremony, at the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Evanston, was in charge of the Rev. Ernest Fremont Tittle, pastor.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark were feted afterward at a reception at the Evanston Country Club, prior to their departure for an undisclosed destination on a honeymoon. Mrs. Clark, only granddaughter of the steel magnate, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Willis Campbell of Evanston. Campbell is an attorney and chairman of the Northwestern University Board of Trustees. The groom is vice president of the Chicago Trust Co., the son of Mrs. Lewis Carleton Pettis of Paris and a grandson of the late Walter R. Sutherland of Ashland, Wis.

A white satin gown with rose point lace worn by her mother at her wedding was worn at tonight's ceremony by the bride. A court train of the same material and a coronet of rose point lace completed the costume.

The bride was attended by Miss Katherine Howk of Rochester, N. Y., and Miss Annette Davis of St. Joseph, Mo., the former as maid of honor and the latter as a bridesmaid.

The newlyweds will be at home on Sheridan road in Evanston.

CHICAGO MEN HERE ON RIVER INSPECTION TRIP

Former Mayor Thompson Head of Delegation Numbering 108 Persons.

William Hale Thompson, former Mayor of Chicago, blew in with his crowd last night on the steamer Cape Girardeau, to continue southward at 6 a. m. on his inspection trip as chairman of the Illinois Lakes to the Gulf Waterway Commission.

"Blew in" was literally true. In fact, the breeze riling the muddy surface of the Mississippi into whitecaps yesterday afternoon was so strong that the waterways boosters from the Windy City feared they would have to tie up for the night at Alton, where a St. Louis reception committee, including representatives of the Standard Unit Navigation Co., which plans to inaugurate a St. Louis barge service, went aboard.

About 6 p. m., however, the wind, which had been coming down hard on shore where the steamer was moored, veered offshore long enough for Capt. Leyhe to swing her stern downstream and run back up the river to get a good aim at the narrow draw of the railroad bridge at Alton. In three hours the Cape Girardeau had tied up at the Eagle packet docks here.

Thompson's Crowd Aboard.

Again, that they are Thompson's crowd is no figure of speech. Glancing down the list of 108 passengers one finds frequent repetition of "Rep. nominee for—." There are four judges, four State Representatives, three trade union representatives, three political editors and three men identified as ward "leaders." Rumor is rife on every deck that Thompson will be the next Mayor of Chicago. Members of the waterway commission on board are Thompson, Richard W. Wolfe, secretary, and Fred D. Nellis, vice chairman. Another member, and Thompson's particular friend, U. R. "Sport" Herrmann, left the boat at Quincy, but is expected to rejoin it.

Another on the list is William Lorimer, former United States Senator, who opened the first meeting of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterways Association in 1906 at the Odeon.

The Cape Girardeau set out from Peoria last Tuesday, reached Keokuk Friday and now is en route to Cairo. The trip is to end at Peoria next Thursday. Those on board are to be guests Tuesday at a luncheon given by committees of the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' Exchange. W. K. Kavanaugh, who presided at the 1906 convention here, will open the meeting, which will be held in the same room at the Hotel Jefferson where a dinner was given in connection with that convention.

Naturally—We Led!

Now that the figures are in it is not improbable that we not only sold the largest number of used cars during the Used Car Week Sale, but that our sales exceeded the combined totals of a number of used car dealers.

That is a foregone conclusion. The intelligent buyer readily admitted that inasmuch as Weber's was the best place to buy a used car 51 weeks in the year, the law of averages makes it still the best place during the fifty-second week—whatever you call that week.

Thus, the value of a reputation proved itself again. There can be no better cars than

TWO REAL ESTATE D
INVOLVING ABOUT FEATURE OF WEEK'S

Vacant Tract Opposite Wa
Station and Lot on Washi
West of Grand Boulevard

By Berry Moore.

Acquisitions of important West End and up the northeast corner of Delmar boulevard and H a 50 by 240 foot plot on the south side of Wash west of Grand boulevard, are features in th dealings.

A tract, including the northeast corner of Delmar boulevard and Hodiamont avenues, was purchased by the Bullock Realty & Investment Co., composed of R. A. and G. B. Bullock, through Barngrove & Specht, for a consideration reported to be $100,000.

The site, which has a frontage on Delmar of 172 feet by a depth of 180 feet on Hodiamont was owned by Hugo Koehler, president of the Independent Breweries Co., who was represented by Proetz & Schnell. The site is directly opposite the Wabash Railway Station.

With the elevation of tracks of the Wabash Railway over Delmar boulevard at this point, now in contemplation, the future of this corner will be enhanced as a business location appreciably.

A Glimpse Into the Future.

The Wabash Railway Co., doubtless, will eventually erect at this intersection a modern and commodious station which will also be a factor in the development of this section, especially after the completion of Des Peres avenue, through which the River Des Peres will be converted into an underground sewer.

As available for a hotel-apartment on a large scale, the site is of commanding interest. It is unimproved. While the purchasers have acquired it as a speculation, they have ample resources for its improvement on a commensurate scale.

The owners of the southwest corner of this intersection recently made public plans for a 15-story hotel, which, it was announced, would be erected with the completion of Des Peres avenue.

According to Barngrove & Specht, this sale is one of the most recent illustrations of increased activity and increased values brought about directly by civic improvements.

Washington Avenue Sale.

The Washington avenue lot previously mentioned was purchased by Marion S. Fuqua and others for about $143,000, through J. H. Farish & Co. It is occupied by a garage erected by Everett Hunkins, who purchased the site from Richard A. Boyle and James E.

CARONDELET PARK TERRACE TO BE PUT ON MARKET TODAY

Carondelet Park Terrace, in Loughborough avenue at the west end of Carondelet Park, will be placed on the market today, according to the Christian Brinkop Real Estate Co.

There are approximately 70 lots, fronting on Loughborough avenue, Quincy and Blow streets and Park drive, each 35 by 125 feet. All the lots front north or south, making them desirable for prospective home builders.

The highest type of improvements will be installed, including streets, sewers and sidewalks and water, gas and electric mains. The lots will be sold on terms of $300 cash and $25 a month. The Loughborough-Morganford bus, operated by the United Railways, passes the property. This bus transfers to the Cherokee, Bellefontaine, Broadway and Tower Grove car lines. The lots will be offered at a reasonable price to attract workingmen to build.

J. C. MORFIT OFFERS 50 LOTS IN WEBSTER GROVES

James C. Morfit announces the advance offering of 50 residence lots in Webster Groves, fronting on both sides of Olive and Locust courts. These courts run east from Crofton avenue, which is now being made a concrete thoroughfare from Lockwood avenue to Glendale road. While Crofton avenue is under construction this property is reached temporarily via Sherwood drive and Sheffield avenue in Sherwood Forest. The property occupies a high elevation and is surrounded on two sides by Sherwood Forest. The lots range in depth from 150 to 190 feet and have a frontage of from 50 to 75 feet. Concrete streets, curbs, sidewalks, water and sewers have been put in and the lots are now ready for the construction of homes. The district is restricted to residences.

A tract, including the northeast corner of Delmar boulevard and Hodiamont avenues, was purchased by the Bullock Realty & Investment Co., composed of R. A. and G. B. Bullock, through Barngrove & Specht, for a consideration reported to be $100,000.

The site, which has a frontage on Delmar of 172 feet by a depth of 180 feet on Hodiamont was owned by Hugo Koehler, president of the Independent Breweries Co., who was represented by Proetz & Schnell. The site is directly opposite the Wabash Railway Station.

With the elevation of tracks of the Wabash Railway over Delmar boulevard at this point, now in contemplation, the future of this corner will be enhanced as a business location appreciably.

A Glimpse Into the Future.

The Wabash Railway Co., doubtless, will eventually erect at this intersection a modern and commodious station which will also be a factor in the development of this section, especially after the completion of Des Peres avenue, through which the River Des Peres will be converted into an underground sewer.

As available for a hotel-apartment on a large scale, the site is of commanding interest. It is unimproved. While the purchasers have acquired it as a speculation, they have ample resources for its improvement on a commensurate scale.

The owners of the southwest corner of this intersection recently made public plans for a 15-story hotel, which, it was announced, would be erected with the completion of Des Peres avenue.

According to Barngrove & Specht, this sale is one of the most recent illustrations of increased activity and increased values brought about directly by civic improvements.

Washington Avenue Sale.

The Washington avenue lot, previously mentioned was purchased by Marion S. Fuqua and others for about $143,000, through J. H. Farish & Co. It is occupied by a garage erected by Everett Hunkins, who purchased the site from Richard A. Boyle and James E. Fogg, several years ago for $500 a front foot, at the instance of Elmore Cave & Co. The lot is west of and adjoining the property recently purchased by the Fox Film Co. from Marion S. Fuqua and Bernard F. and Otto J. Dickman, J. Dickman, and Joseph Darst Jr., and Joseph Darst Jr., as a site for a theater and hotel or office building, to cost $5,000,000. Realty men are speculating as to whether the purchase from Hunkins is connected with the Fox Film project, in view of its proximity to the Grand and Washington property.

The Walgreen company which recently acquired the Judge & Dolph group of drug stores, has obtained a lease of the southwest corner of Grand and Delmar boulevards for ten years at an annual rental of $25,000. The site, 100 by 150 feet, is occupied by a one-story building which will be remodeled for a durg store. The Charles H. Turner estate represented by Hunt Turner, secretary of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., is the lessor.

Several large deals are in negotiation in both the downtown and uptown sections. These include negotiations for long time leases and large purchases. Announcements in these connections will be forthcoming within the next two or three weeks.

CARONDELET PARK TERRACE TO BE PUT ON MARKET TODAY

Carondelet Park Terrace, in Loughborough avenue at the west end of Carondelet Park, will be placed on the market today, according to the Christian Brinkop Real Estate Co.

There are approximately 70 lots, fronting on Loughborough avenue, Quincy and Blow streets and Park drive, each 35 by 125 feet. All the lots front north or south, making them desirable for prospective home builders.

The highest type of improvements will be installed, including streets, sewers and sidewalks and water, gas and electric mains. The lots will be sold on terms of $300 cash and $25 a month. The Loughborough-Morganford bus, operated by the United Railways, passes the property. This bus transfers to the Cherokee, Bellefontaine, Broadway and Tower Grove car lines. The lots will be offered at a reasonable price to attract workingmen to build.

J. C. MORFIT OFFERS 50 LOTS IN WEBSTER GROVES

James C. Morfit announces the advance offering of 50 residence lots in Webster Groves, fronting on both sides of Olive and Locust courts. These courts run east from Crofton avenue, which is now being made a concrete thoroughfare from Lockwood avenue to Glendale road. While Crofton avenue is under construction this property is reached temporarily via Sherwood drive and Sheffield avenue in Sherwood Forest. The property occupies a high elevation and is surrounded on two sides by Sherwood Forest. The lots range in depth from 150 to 190 feet and have a frontage of from 50 to 75 feet. Concrete streets, curbs, sidewalks, water and sewers have been put in and the lots are now ready for the construction of homes. The district is restricted to residences.

David P. Leahy, representing Stedelin Brothers, wealthy poultry dealers, is placing on sale what is known as the Weber, Meister and Valsen tract on Gravois road, located eight blocks west of the city limits, on which they place a value of $200,000. The tract, which has a frontage of 2000 feet on Gravois road, will be divided into lots of 50 by 150 feet to 225 feet deep, as well as in one and two acre tracts, and will be improved with macadam streets, granitoid sidewalks and water and electric light mains. The lots are to be sold on terms of $50 cash, with the balance at the rate of $10 a month. George Diehl represented the sellers, and David P. Leahy the buyers in the purchase of this tract, which formerly comprised a part of the Weber Nursery. The property is especially desirable for medium-priced homes, for which it is being offered, with business sites on Gravois avenue.

A number of houses are under construction in the addition, with plans completed for others. It is being handled by the Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co.

LATE W. J. LEMP'S COUNTRY ESTATE SOLD FOR $90,000

Two Previous Sales of Property Had Been Set Aside—$20,000 in Fees Allowed.

Sale of the county residence and 192-acre estate of the late William J. Lemp, on Kennerly road, in St. Louis County, to the Mercantile Trust Co. for $90,000, was approved yesterday by Circuit Judge Wurdeman at Clayton.

The court allowed State Senator Michael J. Kinney $5000 for his work as special commissioner in disposing of the property and Clarence Wolf and John Goodman $15,000 as attorney's fees.

The property was sold twice before in the liquidation of the $1,000,000 estate left by Lemp, president of the William J. Lemp Brewery Co., who killed himself in 1922. Both previous sales were set aside by the court.

A suit is now pending against David Murphy, president of the D. D. Murphy Amusement Co., who purchased the ground and residence in 1925, but who, it is alleged, failed to complete his contract. The suit is for $19,000, the difference between the price it is alleged Murphy agreed to pay and the amount received from the Mercantile Trust Co.

The Gotham, representing an investment of approximately $475,000, which contains 66 apartments. The building is equipped with elevators, electric refrigeration, incinerators and oil burning boiler. Garage service is provided in the basement.

The building was designed by David R. Harrison and erected by Harrison-Kopman Construction Co. for the Joynor Realty Co., owners. It was financed by Waldheim-Platt & Co.

7-STORY APARTMENT TO BE ERECTED ON WEST PINE

The Henry R. Weisels Co. reports the sale of the property at 3658 West Pine boulevard, for the Selmadele Realty and Investment Co., through Joseph Grand, attorney, to the Missouri Realty and Construction Co. The purchaser intends to erect immediately a seven-story fire-proof kitchenette apartment building, to contain 108 apartments, each consisting of living room, dining alcove and kitchenette. It will cover an area of approximately 60 by 180 feet and represents a total investment of $550,000.

MERCANTILE TRUST HANDLES EVANS & HOWARD PROPERTY

The Mercantile Trust Co. has been appointed agent for the surplus real estate of the Evens & Howard Fire Brick Co., including all the property owned by the company in its new industrial district at Manchester and Macklind avenues, as well as its city property, which is not on tracks, and county acreage.

The property on Manchester avenue embraces about 50 acres served by the Missouri Pacific Railroad. The other city property consists of about 50 acres of land located east of Tamm avenue and near Manchester avenue. The brick company also has county acreage available for subdivision.

The Schurk Iron Co. bought 2.5 acres in this industrial district, which it has improved with modern building. This concern is the first to purchase ground north of Manchester avenue with railroad facilities.

OWNER EXPLAINS $500,000 SALES IN OSAGE HILLS

Not a Boom "but a Demand for Something That Actually Exists," Says Ralph F. Bixby.

The announcement of more than $500,000 in sales at Osage Hills closely following formal opening has created wide interest among home-seekers, investors and even real estate men who are unmoved usually by the plans and efforts of others in the business.

That the interest is an indication of future buying in this newest St. Louis residential location has been proved by sales during the past week, according to Ralph F. Bixby, president of Bixby-Smith, Inc., owner and developer of the property.

"The unique plan of development including the finest of improvements, the superb location in the hills overlooking the Meramec River, and the fact that Osage Country Club is in the midst of the residential section, has attracted numbers of buyers of home locations from among persons of prominence, which in turn adds assurance to the type of men and women who will live in Osage Hills," Bixby explained.

"There is a good reason back of the wide interest in Osage Hills residential property. Some of the questions being asked us on every side, especially by persons interested in suburban developments, are: 'What is it happening at Osage Hills?' 'Is it a boom movement?' and 'What is back of it all?' It is not a boom, either forced or spontaneous, but a natural interest in and demand for something that actually exists in unusual value. Instead of trying to force a situation, we have undertold the story of Osage Hills. One must visit the place and get a vision of what is to be accomplished, the completeness and uniqueness of it all, before one can know the whole story."

Every home location sold in Osage Hills, Bixby said, carries with it the recreational and social features of the Osage Country Club, and an ideal and unusual home atmosphere, not to be found in the ordinary subdivision. Those who can look ahead and see what will take place in Osage Hills within the next year or two—a beautiful community of ideal homes, high in the hills, picturesque, yet harmonious, immediately realize the future value of such property, Bixby declared.

Permanent, economical, beautiful, are homes of fireproof, Brick.

The Best Investment for Home and Profit

Not our statement....but the evident opinion of the hundreds of reputable St. Louisans who have purchased in Osage Hills, St. Louis' finest residential suburb.

Over a half million dollars in sales....and this only a few days following the formal opening....is a record far beyond any other.

As an investment, Osage Hills is a two-for-one value....for every foot of ground set aside for homes, an equal amount and more of footage is given to parkways and recreational areas.

The whole city is talking Osage Hills. There is a reason back of this wholesale interest. Read the news story in this section and the reasons back of the wide interest in the advertisement section, Part 2, Page 88 of this edition.

The Cavern Under the Sea

CAP'N BILL scrambled up quickly enough and glanced over the side of the boat. Then he looked at Trot, who sat quite still, with a serious, far-away look in her sweet eyes. The boat was now speeding swiftly of its own accord, following the line of the circular basin round and round, and gradually drawing nearer to the great hole in the center. Any further effort to escape the whirlpool was useless, and, realizing this fact, Cap'n Bill turned toward Trot and put an arm around her, as if to shield her from the awful fate before them. He did not try to speak, because the roar of the waters would have drowned the sound of his voice.

These two faithful comrades had faced dangers before, but nothing to equal that which now faced them. Yet Cap'n Bill, noting the look in Trot's eyes and remembering how often she had been protected by unseen powers, did not quite give way to despair.

The great hole in the dark water—now growing nearer and nearer—looked very terrifying; but they were both brave enough to face it and await the result of the adventure.

The circles were so much smaller at the bottom of the basin, and the boat moved so much more swiftly, that Trot was beginning to get dizzy with the motion, when suddenly the boat made a leap and dived headlong into the murky depths of the hole. Whirling like tops, but still clinging together, the sailor and the girl were separated from their boat and plunged down—down—down—into the farthermost recesses of the great ocean.

At first their fall was swift as an arrow, but presently they seemed to be going more moderately, and Trot was almost sure that unseen arms were about her, supporting her and protecting her. She could see nothing, because the water filled her eyes and blurred her vision, but she clung fast to Cap'n Bill's sou'wester, while other arms clung fast to her, and they gradually sank down and down, until a full stop was made, when they began to ascend again.

But it seemed to Trot that they were not rising straight to the surface from where they had [illegible] The water was no longer whirling them and they seemed to be drawn in a slanting direction [illegible] still, cool ocean depths. And then—in [illegible] quicker time than I have told it—up they popped to the surface and were cast at full length upon a sandy beach, where they lay choking and gasping for breath and wondering what had happened to them.

Trot was the first to recover. Disengaging herself from Cap'n Bill's wet embrace and sitting up, she rubbed the water from her eyes and then looked around her. A soft, bluish-green glow lighted the place, which seemed to be a sort of cavern, for above and on either side of them were rugged rocks. They had been cast upon a beach of clear sand, which slanted upward from a pool of water at their feet—a pool which doubtless led into the big ocean that fed it. Above the reach of the waves of the pool were many rocks, rising more and more, into the dim windings [illegible] of which the glowing light from the [illegible] penetrate.

The place looked grim and lonely, but Trot was thankful that she was still alive and had suffered no severe injury during her trying adventure under water. At her side Cap'n Bill was sputtering and coughing, trying to get rid of the water he had swallowed. Both of them were soaked through, yet the cavern was warm and comfortable and a wetting did not dismay the little girl in the least.

She crawled up the slant of sand and gathered in her hand a bunch of dried seaweed, with which she mopped the face of Cap'n Bill and cleared the water from his eyes and ears. Presently the old man sat up and stared at her intently. Then he nodded his bald head three times and said in a gurgling voice:

"Mighty good, Trot; mighty good! We didn't reach Davy Jones' locker that time, did we? Though why we didn't, an' why we're living, is more'n I kin make out."

"Take it easy, Cap'n," she replied. "We're safe enough, I guess, at least for the time being."

He squeezed the water out of the bottoms of his loose trousers and felt of his wooden leg and arms and head, and, finding he had brought all of his person with him, he gathered courage to examine closely their surroundings.

"Where d'ye think we are, Trot?" he presently asked.

"Can't say, Cap'n. P'r'aps in one of [illegible]"

He shook his head. "No," he said, "I don't think that, at all. The distance we came up [illegible] half as far as the distance we went down, [illegible] you'll notice there ain't any outside entrance to this cavern whatever. It's a reg'lar dome [illegible] pool o' water, and unless there's some passage at the back, up yonder, we're fast prisoners."

Trot looked thoughtfully over her shoulder.

"When we're rested," she said, "we'll climb up there and see if there's a way to get out."

Cap'n Bill reached in the pocket of his [illegible] coat and took out his pipe. It was still dry, for he kept it in an oilskin pouch with his tobacco. His matches were in a tight tin box, so in a few moments the old sailor was smoking contentedly. Trot knew it helped him to think when he was in any difficulty. Also, the pipe did much to restore the old sailor's composure after his long dive and his terrible fright—a fright that was more on Trot's account than his own.

The sand was dry where they sat, and soaked up the water that dripped from their clothing. When Trot had squeezed the wet out of her hair she began to feel much like her old self again. By and by they got upon their feet and crept up the incline to the scattered boulders above. Some of these were of huge size, but by passing between some and around others, they were able to reach the extreme rear of the cavern.

"Yes," said Trot, with interest, "here's a hole."

"And it's black as night inside it," remarked Cap'n Bill.

"Just the same," answered the girl, "we ought to explore it, and see where it goes, 'cause it's the only poss'ble way we can get out of this place."

Cap'n Bill eyed the hole doubtfully.

"It may be a way out o' here, Trot," he said, "but it may be a way into a far worse place than this. I'm not sure but our best plan is to stay right here."

Trot wasn't sure, either, when she thought of it in that light. After awhile she made her way back to the sands again, and Cap'n Bill followed her. As they sat down, the child looked thoughtfully at the sailor's bulging pockets.

"How much food have we got, Cap'n?" she asked.

The Trick of the Fraidy Cats

By FRANK A. SECORD

"HO, HUM!" yawned Evelyn Brown, as she disjointed her fish pole and removed the catch from the line. "I've enough for one day. Jennie and I will go over to Tie Siding for the night, if you boys don't care. We would like to get a good night's rest in an honest-to-goodness bed once."

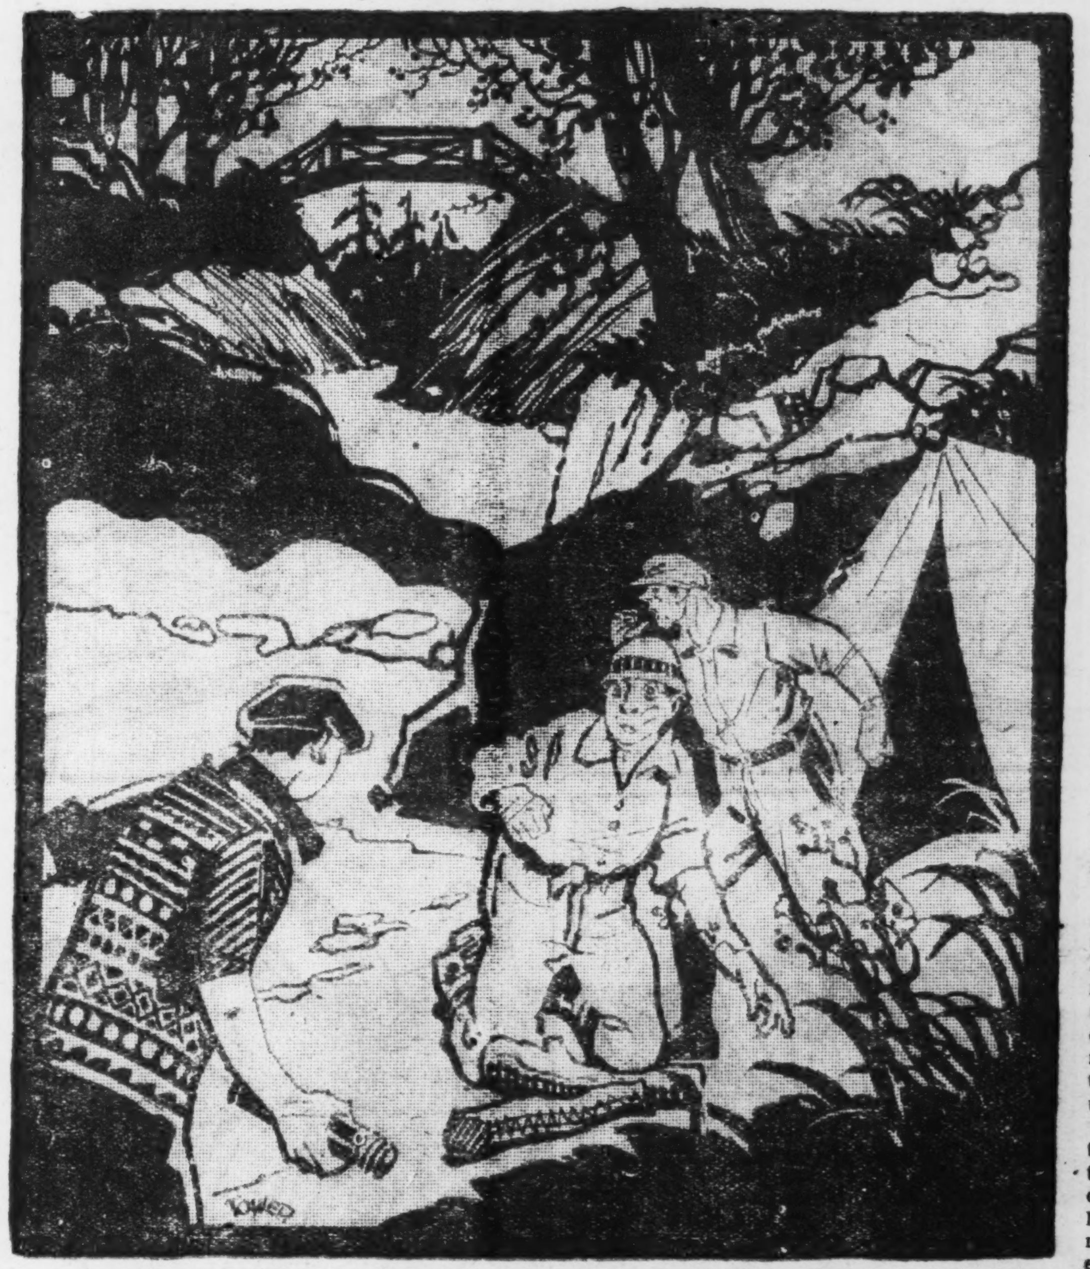
"That's what we get for allowing girls to come with us!" sneered Rolly Brown, Evelyn's brother. "They're pikers and don't know how to rough it."

Evelyn said nothing in answer to this remark, but, looking at the sun and beckoning to Jennie Lee, picked up a bundle of belongings and the two set out. Just as they passed out of sight behind a big boulder in the canyon, Evelyn called back, "See you fellows tomorrow. We'll think of you while eating a good dinner at Mrs. Stout's tonight. Hope you'll not be afraid without us."

"Bah!" howled Jerry Bliss, miffed at the taunt of being afraid.

"We'd sure be safe with you two here!" sneered Rolly. "If we get a scare we'll send for you."

When the two girls approached the pumper's shanty under the high bridge spanning Dale Creek, they paused a moment. Said Evelyn, "Now if we play it right we'll give those lads the scare of their young lives and at the same time have a good laugh to bottle up and take back home with us. Some boys have the idea that all girls are 'fraidy cats, as we've been accused here, and unable to stand the outdoors. Remember last night, Jen, when we heard a hoot owl and brother Rolly made a slighting remark about our nervousness?"



"At 10 o'clock I shall once more—and for the 13th time—hurl myself off Dale Creek bridge."

"I remember perfectly well!" Jennie exclaimed, her lips curling. I'd stand up all night in the open to throw a good scare into those boys."

The girls found old Jeb Pearson busy at his pumps, which hoisted water from the creek at the bottom of the canyon to a tank high up at the west end of the bridge, where engines of passing trains replenished their supply for the up-grade pull over the Great Divide.

"Well, Mr. Pearson," Evelyn called cheerfully, "here we are. We told the boys that we are going to Tie Siding to spend the night with Mrs. Stout. That's the truth, all right, but we didn't mention staying here until you go in, along about 10."

Jeb laughed. Walking over to a corner, he pointed to some objects there and snickered. "All ready, girls!" the old man chuckled.

For an evening meal an hour later, Evelyn Brown and Jennie Lee had coffee and bacon and eggs with Jeb. When the night was well along towards 10 and the occasional hoarse cry of an owl and the far-away yelp of a coyote disturbed the otherwise noiseless surroundings, Jeb Pearson rose, nodded to the girls and walked out of the shanty.

At camp, Rolly Brown, Jerry Bliss and Ed White sat around a grease-wood fire, which spluttered a little and flickered a lot, casting queer shadows. Of a sudden all three hopped to their feet, blanched and began trembling. From the air, apparently, sounded a hollow voice:

"Rollin Brown, Jerome Bliss, Edward White! The dreadful hour is at hand. There are three of you and when three people tarry in the canyon after sundown on the 10th of the month, I have to do it all over again—my terrible act. Why are you but three in camp? Woe, woe, woe!"

"Migosh!" Rolly gasped. "What's the meaning of that stuff?"

"If the girls were here we'd be five!" muttered Ed White.

After a moment's parley, during which no more was heard from the strange voice, Rolly nudged Jerry and whispered, "Say something to him, Jerry!" Therefore, Jerry Bliss raised his voice and shouted. "What's the rip, old scout? What's on your chest?"

Jerry tried to appear brave and careless. His words struck terror to his companions' hearts, however, both of whom were awed at the boldness of Jerry's challenge.

Again came the hollow voice from the air:

"At 10 o'clock I shall once more—and for the 13th time—hurl myself off Dale Creek Bridge. You are conjured to pick up my torn body from the rocks below."

None of the boys had enough breath at his command just then to make any answer. Rolly began to hastily kick out the camp fire; Ed White bit at his finger nails and Jerry Bliss walked back of the tent, as if trying to hide from the gaze of some spook in the gloom. Evidently the strange owner of the eerie voice waited for some word from the lads, for he was not heard again until, finally, Rolly Brown shouted in as steady a voice as he could command:

"Hey, whoever-you-are, what's the big idea? Where are you?"

"On the bridge—but not at midnight—and near the fatal hour of 10!" answered the awful voice again. "Look at your watches, the two of you who have such articles!"

This was a poser, for Rolly and Jerry owned watches and Ed didn't. Bending low and over a still glowing ember of the scattered camp fire, Jerry examined the dial of his timepiece. Muttered he, "Kids, it lacks but two minutes of 10!"

"All right, let the show start!" hollowly cried Ed. He tried to appear cheerful in speaking the words, but his voice wasn't that of a happy youth.

"See the time?" the voice called from above again.

The three boys strained their eyes in a vain attempt to scan the top of the dizzy bridge whence the voice evidently came, according to the advice shouted. They could not, however, in the gloom make out anything but the dark outline of the structure against the stingy light of the stars.

Crowded close together, the three almost breathless lads were next startled by an almost unearthly scream that echoed and re-echoed up and down the rock-bound canyon. Possibly three seconds elapsed and then came to them the sound of a dull thud—as of a heavy object striking upon the rocks.

"Jumping black cats!" gasped Jerry Bliss, his teeth chattering audibly.

"A trick, I say!" snarled Rolly Brown. "I'm not going to stand for this kind of a dose. Come on! We'll find the 'body' and settle this business. I say there's no real body under the bridge!"

"Golly!" gasped Ed.

Some moments later the three lads, each carrying a searchlight, gained the gap under Dale Creek's high bridge. Sweeping their lamps in horizontal half-circles they soon made out, to their utter surprise and great fear, a body lying at the side of a big rock. It was crumpled and the boys noted that a hat lay by its side, evidently jarred off the head when the canyon's bottom was struck.

Well, three almost paralyzed boys stared a moment and then stumbled, fell, half-walked, half-ran from the spot, none of them having sufficient nerve left to examine the body.

"Come on—to the pump-house!" Rolly Brown cried, when himself and friends were some rods away from the discovery. And then, scaling some dizzy heights in order to reach their agreed destination without passing the awful spot, the frightened campers set out for Jeb Pearson's shanty. There they arrived some 15 minutes after 10 and found the door locked, lights out and no one around. Jeb closed at 10 nightly, and the pump-house never seemed so lonesome as at the moment the boys reached it and found the place uninhabited.

"What'll we do?" Jerry inquired, sticking his flashlight into a pocket.

"On to Tie Siding—that's all we can do, I guess!" grimly spoke Rolly.

"Good heavens! Let the girls know we are scared out?" Ed gasped.

The boys talked the matter over a moment and decided to rout out Jeb Pearson from his room at Tie Siding; to tell him of the strange experience; to ask him to return to the bridge with them and there help pick up the body."

And so it came to pass that, after inquiring at the depot of the little desert town, the campers located Jeb. The old man was in bed, sure enough, and strangely, he didn't seem to be in the least disturbed about the terrible experience of the lads. "Why," the old fellow informed his callers, "that happens every once in a while. If three people camp in the canyon and near Dale Creek Bridge, a fellow who once jumped off it, so it is said, does his stunt—or pretends to do it—in spook form. There's no body under the structure."

"What say?" Jerry growled. "No body there! I say there is. We—all three of us—walked up to it and plainly saw the body lying under the bridge and all crushed upon the rocks."

"Nope," laughed Jeb, "you didn't see any."

"Any what?" Jerry sneered.

"Body."

The upshot of the matter was that Jeb Pearson dressed, accompanied the lads back to the spot and, to the astonishment of the latter, nothing unusual was found. Not a sign of any body was seen.

"We saw it, I tell you!" Rolly cried.

"Yes; and what about the guy who hollered at us from the bridge?" Ed White asked.

"That's part of his game," the old man answered. "I've heard him."

The pumper essayed to leave for town again, a distance of half a mile, but the boys clung to him. "What about us?" they queried.

"If you get someone to stay with you, making more than three in camp, nothing will bother you again," Jeb laughed; and then it was decided to waken the girls, for Jeb refused to camp out for the night.

"We'll not mention why we want them to come back." Rolly told his chums. "We'll just say we have a new fishing place for tomorrow, early, and that all of us must start out at 4 a. m."

"Good shot!" cried Ed. "That will work all right."

And so it happened that Evelyn Brown and Jennie Lee, her cousin, were routed out at Mrs. Stout's, where they were found playing and singing at the time, and given the "stall" agreed upon.

Strangely enough both girls offered to go back to camp without any objection at all. Apparently they believed all that was told them, and later the party numbered five, all seated around a camp phonograph.

"What did you come after us for?" Evelyn suddenly asked of her brother.

"Well, we told you," bluntly answered Rolly.

"Oh, that's so. I forgot. Just happened to occur to me that perhaps you little 'fraidy cats got frightened at a wild animal or wild man; or, perhaps, a dead—"

"Dead what?" roughly and quickly growled Rolly.

"Nothing."

The three boys cuddled close together on the ground in their end of the tent, and the girls occupied their own cots in the other end. When the curtain was drawn between, Evelyn stuck a thumb into Jennie's ribs and giggled softly.

Next morning, when Rolly bestirred himself, making a fire and getting ready for breakfast, he suddenly stumbled over an object that brought from him a yell of terror. Dashing into the tent, he shouted desperately, "Dead man!"

It took no more to throw a full-grown scare into Ed and Jerry; but when Evelyn and Jennie calmly walked forth, boldly grabbed the "dead man," and gave him a vigorous shaking, the boys almost fainted. They began to see it all.

Jeb Pearson and a megaphone on the bridge did the hollow talking, and a straw-stuffed dummy, which Jeb cast off the bridge at the "fatal" minute, carried out the joke of Evelyn and Jennie. When all were asleep, Jeb brought the dummy back and left it near camp. It was also Jeb who picked up the straw-stuffed object after the lads found it the first time, for the old man stayed in hiding in the canyon long enough to carry out the last part of the joke.

There were three pretty tame boys in that camp during the balance of the stay in Dale Creek canyon.

MRS. KATHRYNE FRICKS, wife number two in the case. Almost divorced—she got $10,000 and a profound faith in matrimony.

By JULIUS KLEIMANN
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

WATERLOO, Iowa.—"This case," an attorney told me, "has torn the town wide open for the last year and a half. Thank goodness, this case is over now!"

And the gentleman, a good-looking barrister with a shock of white hair, swung his gold spectacles between his thumb and forefinger, sighed sadly, learned back in his chair, and seemed mightily relieved.

There doesn't seem to be much doubt about the truth of the gentleman's statement. The speaker didn't appear to be given to exaggeration; furthermore, as one of the lawyers in the case, he was just a little bit more than willing that as few of the facts about it should get out as possible. He was only delivering himself of an observation. And just about every other citizen of the city of Waterloo, that one spoke to, said the same thing.

The Matilda Caward-Kathryne Fricks-Walter Caward-C. W. Fricks line of litigations, allegations, counter allegations, counter litigations and court procedure and gossip and comment has been the article of supreme social-legal interest in Waterloo, which has 37,000 people and rears itself up prosperously on both sides of the Cedar River, for, oh, these many moons past. That Walter Caward, one of the richest men in town, and his wife were parties in the suits, didn't dampen anyone's enthusiasm. The business was a first-class piece of gossip.

AND it all started because Mr. Fricks and Mrs. Caward are said to have liked each other pretty well. Mrs. Fricks says it was more than liked each other. She informed the writer that "Matilda Caward was just crazy about my good-looking husband." But, for some reason or other, married women don't like to see other women caring about their husbands, and for some peculiar reason husbands don't like to think their wives are interested in any other men.

Before long Caward was suing Matilda Caward for divorce; Fricks, the erring husband, decided he'd sue Kathryne Fricks for divorce; and Kathryne Fricks told the court she was convinced Matilda Caward had alienated her husband's affection to about $25,000 worth.

Well, who are the Cawards and who are the Fricks? If one lived here one wouldn't ask.

Less than twenty years ago, Walter Caward was living with his father in a small northern Iowa town. The elder Caward got into the oil business, and he moved to Waterloo, bringing his family with him. And the oil business prospered and the Cawards prospered with it. Last February the father died. And Walter Caward, aged 34, is president of the Hawk Eye Oil Company, with filling stations pretty well around this State. Some say he is worth a million, some say half a million, but anyhow it seems to be a comfortably definite fact that Walter Caward isn't going around the streets of Waterloo asking alms.

Now Mrs. Caward hails from Cedar Falls, which is a few miles north of Waterloo and a town of a few thousand. Mrs. Caward tells me she is 31 — Mrs. Fricks told me Mrs. Caward was 36 — but there doesn't seem to be any reason to doubt Mrs. Caward's idea of her age. When Mrs. Caward was in her teens she came over to Waterloo and got work as a stenographer. For a time she was employed by Caward's oil company. And then she worked some place else in Waterloo. And then she married Caward. That was nine years ago. She and Caward have a pretty little girl; her name is Mary Jean and she is 6 years old. She doesn't know what this law and court business is all about, but if a stranger comes into the house and she hears him talking about Mr. Caward and Mrs. Caward and divorce suits and alienation of affection cases, she peeks around the door-frame and appears dreadfully disappointed when one sees her and stops talking, and a maid comes along and entices her away on some pretext or other.

WHICH brings us to Kathryne Fricks and her husband. I have Mrs. Fricks' word for it that she is 33 and that her husband's age is the same. Mrs. Fricks is from Tennessee, and she has been married 13 years. She says that her marriage was a true love joining of hands if there ever was, and offers as substantiation of her statement the information that her husband proposed to her just 24 hours after she came into his ken.

Now, after they were married the Frickses left Tennessee, the husband's business taking him away. He was with a cash register company, and for quite a time they lived in Chicago. And in the year 1923 this C. W. Fricks, by an edict of the organization by which he was employed, was put in charge of the Waterloo, Iowa, district. It is said Fricks' new charge was a lucrative one. Mrs. Fricks informed the writer that her husband made $30,000 a year out of it. She also said he was an excellent man at selling cash registers, and further informed the writer that he was a very, very good business man. Mrs. Fricks, as was quite natural, followed her husband over to Waterloo; then they set up an apartment, and thus settled down in the city. At least, Mrs. Fricks thought they were settled down and she is under the impression her husband felt the same way about it.

And in such an innocent way as a cash register company sending one of its men to take charge of the Waterloo, Iowa, district began that which later progressed to the filing, on April 24, 1925, by one Kathryne Fricks, lawfully wedded wife of C. W. Fricks, a petition which stated that "the plaintiff (Kathryne Fricks) lived happily with her said husband (C. W. Fricks) and was given his affection, society, love and support" until the "defendant (Mrs. Matilda Caward) flattered him and by arts and devices, the details of which are unknown to the plaintiff (Kathryne Fricks), succeeded in alienating" Mr. C. W. Fricks' affections from the aforesaid Kathryne Fricks, the legally wedded wife of his, whom he is alleged to have proposed marriage to but 24 hours after he met her.

The petition further stated that Mrs. Caward's actions — evidently her flattery of that gentleman by arts and devices, the details of which are unknown to Mrs. Fricks—caused Mrs. Fricks to have brain fever. And so Mrs. Fricks felt she was perfectly justified in praying for the court to give her judgment against Mrs. Caward to the amount of $20,000 for actual damages and $5000 for exemplary damages. Mrs. Fricks also said she thought she ought to have 6 per cent interest on those amounts from the first day of September, 1924.

WALTER CAWARD, the man who paid.

But Kathryne Fricks' prayer to the court of Iowa to give her $25,000 for losing the affections of the cracker-jack cash register salesman was not the first official introduction of the Caward-Fricks legal merry-go-round into the courts of the Sovereign State of Iowa. Ah, no. Mr. Walter Caward himself, on the day of March 6, 1925, more than a month before Kathryne Fricks filed her suit, petitioned the courts of the same State to undo the matrimonial bonds established some eight years before between himself and Matilda, or "Tillie," as I am told she is known here among her intimates.

In his petition he said such things about Matilda as might not be deemed entirely complimentary. He also said things about one C. W. Fricks. He said things connecting Matilda and the aforementioned C. W. Fricks.

Well, things were getting on nicely. Kathryne Fricks had sued Matilda Caward and Walter Caward had sued the same lady. Everybody was suing or being sued except C. W. Fricks. The unthinking may say that C. W. Fricks, therefore, was a slacker, that he was too busy selling cash registers to get into the merry battle, that he didn't seem to have the proper respect for the courts of Iowa. But not so.

For along came C. W. Fricks, himself, and taking time out from his cash registering, he walked into a Sioux City court and said he would like to have a divorce, too. He didn't charge Kathryne with being untrue or anything like that, he merely felt he ought to have a divorce.

ONE of Kathryne Fricks' attorneys told me why he thought Fricks did it. He hinted Fricks might have done it on some other barrister's legal advice. For, said this attorney, by getting a divorce from Kathryne, Fricks would ruin her alienation suit, for how could Matilda Caward, asked the attorney, alienate the affections of Kathryne Fricks' husband when Kathryne Fricks no longer had a husband? Naturally the correspondent didn't know, but then nobody else did either.

Now on May 11 of last year, which the strong of memory will recollect was 1925, Walter Caward was granted a divorce from Matilda. Before that date Caward had changed his divorce petition, substituting for all the uncomplimentary things he had said about Matilda the allegation that her treatment of him had been cruel and inhuman. Of course, to say that one is cruel and inhuman isn't so nice either, but the writer's word can be taken for it that "cruel and inhuman" was a bit softer and easier than that which had gone before.

In the deal Matilda was given $30,000. And she signed the stipulation which gave it to her.

So now Matilda wasn't Walter's wife and Kathryne wasn't Fricks' wife. Matilda wasn't because Walter said she had been cruel and inhuman; Kathryne wasn't Fricks' because he felt it would be better if they no longer were twain. Although the attorney said there was another reason, i. e., to block the alienation suit. But that we don't know; it wouldn't be fair to say it about Mr. Fricks; for all I know he might never have had anything like that in mind.

But what is a divorce if it can't be set aside? And one day Matilda walked into court and asked that just that be done. She said that when she had signed that stipulation giving her $30,000 she was not in her proper mind and had no idea of the real contents of aforesaid stipulation. A Judge cogitated over the business. And then he pushed Mr. Caward's decree aside. Mr. Caward immediately appealed the case to the Supreme Court. This little divorce case wasn't going to get out of the courts that easy.

IT SEEMS perfectly proper and just that if one woman can have a divorce set aside, another of her sex should enjoy the same privilege. Kathryne Fricks thought so, too. So she hopped over to Sioux City and asked how about having her divorce put out of commission. So another Judge cogitated on the Fricks versus Fricks divorce and how it was got and why it was got, and pretty soon the Frickses were not divorced at all. For the jurist in question set it aside.

And now all this time the day of the alienation suit hearing was growing nearer and nearer. It promised to be the big social-legal affair of the Waterloo season. Society was getting all ready to be in attendance. From what I learned it was going to be as hard to get a seat to the Fricks-Caward alienation suit as it would be to get a 50-cent seat in the first row at the opening night of the "Follies."

But before the main event, came a couple of preliminary bouts. Perhaps the interested parties felt that the courts ought to have a little practice. Anyhow, Mrs. Fricks got out an attachment, using it to attach $15,000 belonging to Mrs. Caward and Mrs. Caward's Cadillac sedan. But Mrs. Caward came right back and filed a counter claim. Mrs. Caward contended that she had a claim of $5000 against Mrs. Fricks as Mrs. Caward felt Mrs. Fricks was guilty of wrongful and malicious swearing out of writs of attachment.

There doesn't seem to have been any other legal controversy to have entered into. Mr. Caward couldn't have sued Mr. Fricks for divorce, for obviously they weren't married, and Mrs. Fricks couldn't very well have sued Mrs. Caward for violating the Sherman antitrust act or for the sale and manufacture of whisky, for Mrs. Caward hadn't done any of these things; there was nothing else for Fricks to sue about, nor was there anything at all Mrs. Caward could sue for. So they had to content themselves with an alienation of affections case.

Came the date of the trial. It is necessary in such proceedings to pick a jury. The jury was duly picked. That was on a Friday. The case was continued until the next week. Everybody was getting ready to hear what promised to be just about the most interesting little bit of testimony that had emanated from a Waterloo witness chair for many a fair day.

And then! Ah, then! Somebody thought of a settlement. It doesn't seem right to have aroused all that interest and then suddenly begin talking about a settlement. But upon the other hand, if persons in a litigation feel like settling it out of court, certainly those persons most concerned should have a right to do as they see fit.

Now just who first breathed the disappointing word, "settlement," I don't know. But once breathed, everybody gave heed. And the Monday after the Friday on which the jury was selected, began a conference, a pow-wow, an attempted getting together. The treaty talk lasted out the day. It lasted out the evening. It lasted into the night.

Mrs. Caward's attorneys have offices on the west side of the river, and Caward's attorneys have offices just across the street. Mrs. Caward was in her attorneys' offices, Caward was in his attorneys' offices. As Mrs. Fricks' attorneys have offices on the other side of the river, making it a bit inconvenient, Mrs. Fricks took to her room at her hotel, not far from the Caward-Mrs. Caward attorney districts, and her attorneys fluctuated around.

One camp would issue an ultimatum, then they'd take it to another camp. About this time the other camp would think of something it wanted and it would dash off to the third camp. Meanwhile the third camp would think up a pretty good idea, and the third camp would go about to one of the other camps all ready to expound it. A barrister in the Mrs. Fricks-Caward-Mrs. Caward case didn't need only to know all about the law; he had to have excellent wind.

FINALLY, about one o'clock in the morning, everybody had seen everybody else, everybody had told everybody what everybody else wanted, didn't want, needed and thought, and probably to the intense amazement of everybody concerned, everything was settled up. So was peace arrived at and so was peace declared.

The next day, as according to agreement, Walter Caward walked over to the Courthouse—or perhaps he rode—and got a divorce from Matilda, or "Tillie" as she is known by her more intimate friends. The Judge put the little Mary Jean Caward in his own jurisdiction, and said she would spend part of the time with her mother and part of the time with her father.

To Matilda was given the $30,000 agreed upon in the first divorce suit. It was unnecessary to give Matilda the $30,000 as she already had it, but it was given to her again just to make sure. She was also given her Cadillac sedan. She already had that, too. She was also given the furniture in her bedroom, including bedding for twin beds, all silverware, dishes and linen, rug, nested tables, (three in a group), family pictures and Martha Washington sewing cabinet. And a gentleman who ought to know told me she was to get the interest from $20,000 as long as she didn't marry or have anything to do with C. W. Fricks.

And the same fellow told me Caward paid Mrs. Fricks $10,000, thus settling the alienation suit.

And I went to see Mrs. Fricks and asked her what about it. And she told about the happy days before Waterloo. And of her version of why there was an alienation suit. Said Mrs. Fricks:

"Never, never before he (Fricks, the husband) met her did he have anything to do with any other women. I am the only woman he ever really loved. He told me so himself. Often.

"And I knew about it. I knew about it as soon as I got here in 1924. It was Christmas, 1924, that I was going back to Memphis to visit my mother. He went with me as far as Dubuque. When he left me he began to cry. He said he'd never loved anybody like he loved me. He said everything was all right now. He said, 'Darling, stand in the door and watch till I get into the elevator.' I knew something was wrong. So instead of going to Memphis, I went back to Waterloo. I went into our apartment. I hid in a closet. My husband came in. Then she came in. I stayed there all night, hiding behind two fur coats. I forgot the next day was Sunday and my husband might not leave till late in the day. But luckily he got out of the apartment early.

"IT WAS just a couple of months after that I decided to commit suicide. I had a lovely coverlet and I drenched the top of it with chloroform. Then I drank some of the choloroform. But they found me. I was unconscious for hours.

"And a couple of months after that I had brain fever. Do you know that that time I was unconscious for 22 days. I got brain fever, of course, from all this trouble. Oh, I have all sorts of evidence. Letters. Notes. A Christmas card with poetry printed on it. I know all sort of things. Oh, the testimony I could have given.

"But I'm not going to get a divorce from him. That woman, Matilda—it was all her fault. His company discharged him after they heard about all these doings. But I'm going to make him come back to me. I don't believe in divorce."

"Does he still care anything about her?" she was asked.

"Well, I wouldn't say so, if I thought so," was her answer. "But perhaps he does. A little bit. But he loves me. He told me so just the other night. Oh, have you seen Mrs. Caward? How was she dressed? Oh, that black dress. She's been wearing that a long time."

What has Mrs. Caward to say about it?

"Those stories of hers are not true," she told me. "That woman hasn't anything else to do but worry about her husband. That closet story is ridiculous. Sometimes I think I should have fought her case. And his divorce. But you can't tell about juries. I might not have got as good a settlement. And I'd have had all the annoyance of the trials. She still snoops around here in taxicabs, looking for her husband. I don't know where he is. He's nothing to me."

AND one Lena Booth, colored, maid at the apartment where the Frickses resided, the apartment where Mrs. Fricks says she hid in a closet and saw Mrs. Caward come to visit her husband, says this: "They're both Caucasian ladies and I'm an ebony baby. Mrs. Caward's nice lady. Mrs. Fricks' nice lady. But I never saw Mrs. Caward here. And I don't think Mrs. Fricks could have stayed in that closet all night, unless she didn't have to breathe."

The writer faintly remembers once having heard it said that the woman always pays. But after a profound perusal of the facts in this particular instance, it appears that the person who did the paying was Mr. Walter Caward.

AUSTIN BAILEY, engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, acting as operator at the exchange where American telephone stations are plugged in on London.

Talking AROUND THE WORLD Is Now Predicted

A Description of the Recent America-to-England Wireless Telephone Conversations Together With Certain Prophecies for the Future.

TWO-WAY telephone conversations between San Francisco, California, and Geneva, Switzerland, more than a quarter of the way around the earth, are not only conceivable but the land telephone and radio links necessary for such a connection are already in existence, and it will doubtless be only a matter of time before the achievement is a reality.

For many years telephone conversations between New York and San Francisco have been an every-day occurrence. So have conversations between London and Paris and Geneva. And, with the recent success of two-way transatlantic telephony, an official of the telephone company in Boston, seated at the ordinary telephone in his home, was able to talk and listen to a friend in his London home, who was also using the ordinary instrument!

So far transatlantic telephony has not been made available for every-day use, but it has nearly passed the experimental stage. Every week-end now New York experts of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, using radio equipment that throws dots and dashes across the Atlantic for the Radio Corporation of America on week days, ring up London and intensively experiment with the ethereal telephone line that they have established. Soon it is probable that an ordinary subscriber in New York will be able to call up a London friend, nearly as easily as he now talks to Brooklyn. Provided, of course, he has the price.

AND then, some day, perhaps a high official of the Nippon Empire, hurrying to the world capital, Geneva, will land at San Francisco and desire to talk to his Ambassador seated at the League of Nations council table. The long-distance operator in San Francisco will connect him with New York, the Manhattan exchange will plug him in via radio to London, and London will relay the call to Geneva. If it were early morning, the time of night clubs and milkmen, on the Pacific coast, the diplomats at Geneva would be just beginning their sessions. Separated by some 6000 miles, San Francisco and Geneva are also eight hours apart in time at the same instant—2 a. m. in San Francisco is 10 a. m. in Geneva.

All this is a far cry from a day in the spring of 1876 in Boston. The speaker was the late Alexander Graham Bell. "Come here, Mr. Watson, I want you," he said. And Mr. Watson, his assistant, who was in a nearby room, heard him over the first telephone and replied that he was coming, thus completing the first telephone conversation in the world's history.

Again it is spring—but 50 years later, the spring of 1926—and though the speakers were separated by the Atlantic Ocean their conversations were just as understandable as if the parties were a short distance away, and they were far more clear than the words with which Bell summoned Watson.

Now, however, there is no connection between the speakers, except that intangible and hypothetical ether, for the conversation with England is accomplished by radio, thus achieving success after years of work. In 1915, engineers of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company succeeded in sending their voices not only to London, but to Paris and the Hawaiian Islands as well, and again in 1923, on the fourteenth of January, for two hours continuously, they spoke to London.

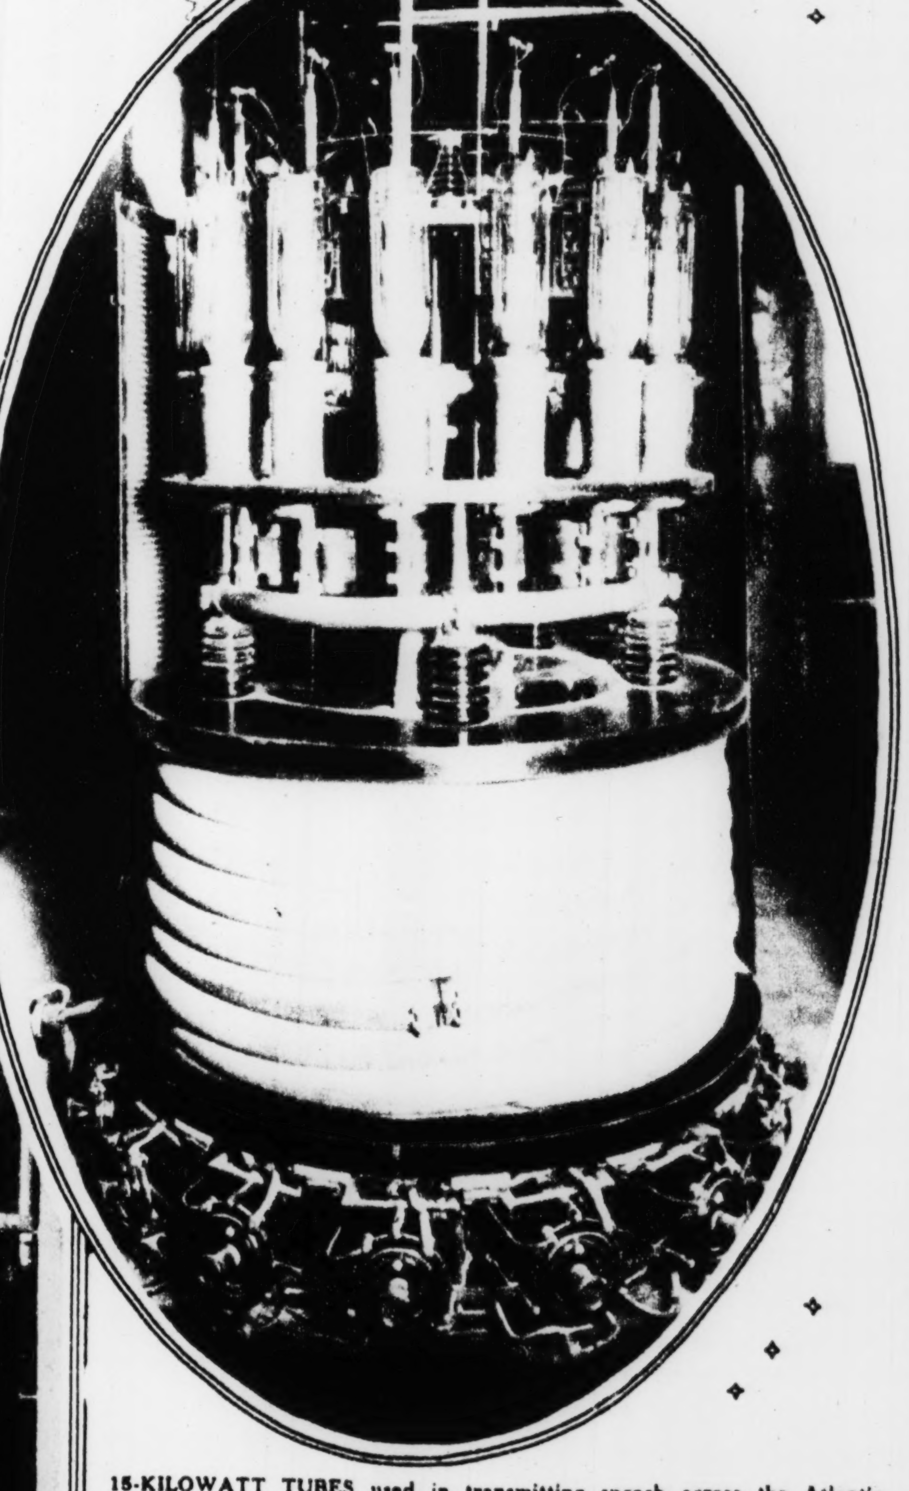
But all these tests were one-way conversations, and the only reply possible was by cable, perhaps a few hours later. Not until within the last few months has it been possible to converse back and forth across the Atlantic. Every Saturday night and Sunday, for many weeks, these tests have been in progress. On the first occasion when outsiders were allowed to take part in them, a group of New York newspaper men talked from their office in New York to the London Central Exchange, where a group of their British colleagues were listening. The Americans and Englishmen heard each other as clearly as if they had been in the same city, and not separated by both time and space, for when it was 11 o'clock in the morning in New York it was 4 o'clock in the afternoon in London.

In later tests the special transmitters used on this occasion were dispensed with, and telephone officials in their homes around New York and Boston were connected with the transatlantic apparatus over their regular lines and through the ordinary exchanges. In London, too, some of the speakers were enjoying their Sunday at home, and talked through their regular instruments.

To accomplish this remarkable feat it was necessary to combine the radio with land telephony. From the long-distance office at 24 Walker street, New York, the voices of the speakers were carried over long-distance lines to Rocky Point, Long Island, where the powerful radio station of the Radio Corporation of America was employed to turn the voice into radio waves on a 5260 meter wave length, far more than that used in the ordinary broadcasting.

After crossing the Atlantic, a distance of 3300 miles, the voice was picked up at the receiving station of the British General Postoffice, which has charge of the telephone lines, at Wroughton, England, and carried over telephone wires again to London, 70 miles away. The path of the other end of the conversation was equally complicated, for, after traversing 70 miles of telephone line to the transmitting station at Rugby, England, then by radio, this time on a wave length of 5770 meters, across 2900 miles to the American receiving station at Houlton, Maine, and 600 miles of telephone line, passing through Boston and other New England cities, the reply reached the Walker street office.

TRANSMITTING STATION used in transatlantic tests, showing apparatus which amplifies and modulates the speech after it is received from the speaker's telephone.



15-KILOWATT TUBES used in transmitting speech across the Atlantic Ocean. These tubes, which are water cooled, are among the most powerful ever constructed. A bank of 15 of them is used at once.

Everyone who has ever listened to a broadcast program knows that night is the best time to get distant stations, but if commercial radio-telephony is to become practicable it must be available during the business hours of the day. These tests have shown that it can be accomplished, but there is still one insuperable difficulty, and that is the sunset wall. When it is night in London, and still daylight in America, satisfactory communication is impossible, and as it takes five hours for sunset to travel from London to New York, and the same thing is true for sunrise, a large slice of the day is thus rendered unavailable. On account of the greater amount of static, communication is also much more difficult in summer than in winter. These differences in transmission are so great that at one time 10,000 times as much power may be required as at other more favorable times, to give an intelligible signal.

However, the success of the present tests, compared with the earlier attempts, is such as to justify the hope that these difficulties, too, may shortly be solved. Indeed, a large part of the success may be attributed to two recent inventions. One is the high-power transmitting tubes which furnished the power to carry the voices across the Atlantic. In the tests made in 1915, 25-watt tubes, similar in principle to the smaller tubes used in home receiving sets, provided the power, 300 of them being employed. But now a bank of 15-kilowatt tubes, each 600 times as powerful as those used in 1915, provides the rapidly alternating currents needed.

The operation of any such vacuum tube involves the liberation of heat, for even the small one in the receiving set gets warm. With tubes as powerful as 15 kilowatts, special precautions must be taken to keep them from overheating, and this is done by water cooling, as in the ordinary automobile engine. The anode of the tube forms part of the outside wall, and this is kept immersed in a water bath. As this anode must be of copper a difficulty was in the way in which this could be sealed to glass. Glass and copper both change in size with alterations in temperature, but to a varying degree, and so if they were sealed together at a high temperature, they would crack apart when the tube cooled.

An invention of William G. Housekeeper, however, solved the problem. His copper and glass seal does not depend on equality of expansion of the metal and glass, but on the proper proportioning of the size of the metal and glass so that breakage does not result from temperature changes.

THE second important item in these tests was the use of a new system of transmitting which gives much greater efficiency than by the old methods. In ordinary broadcasting above five-sixths of the radiated power is wasted, for the waves are spread out into a wider band of frequencies than can be utilized by the receiving set. In the system used now, however, the entire 100 kilowatts of power is concentrated into the single band which ordinarily utilizes only about one-sixth of this power. This makes a 100-kilowatt station now equivalent to one of 600 kilowatts before, so far as its range is concerned.

Some idea of the power used in these and other radio transmitting sets is contained in recent figures compiled by Dr. George C. Southworth of New York, comparing them with waves of light. The radio waves differ from those of light only in length, for those of the latter are from one-thirty-thousandth to one-sixty-five-thousandth of an inch, instead of the hundreds of meters of the radio waves. Therefore, the intensity of either may be expressed as electrical units, in terms of the strength of the electrical field.

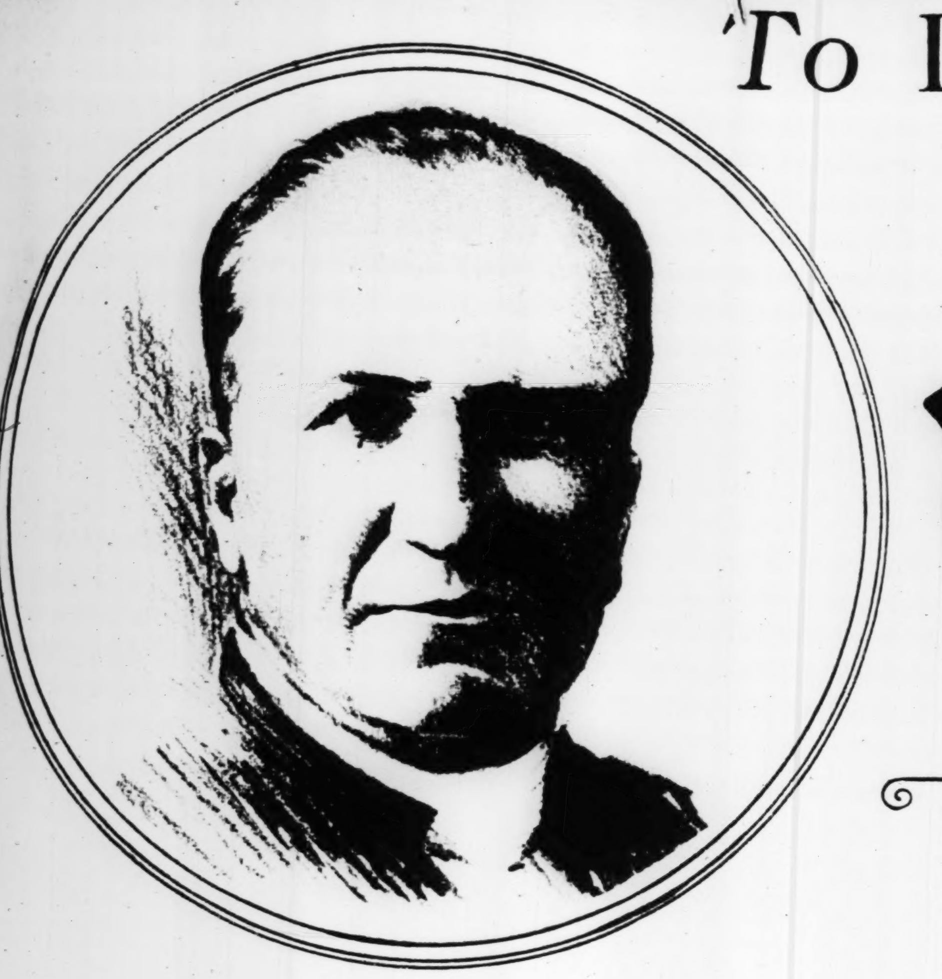
In the ordinary electric lights used in our homes, about 25 watts of power are used, but this is enormous if compared with the power which reaches us from a broadcasting station at a moderate distance, so that the signals are fairly loud. If we imagine a plane surface of one square meter (about a square yard) in area at right angles to the direction of the station, it can be calculated that one-quarter of a microwatt, or about one four-millionth of a watt, is flowing through it. To furnish enough power to light an ordinary incandescent lamp, then, from the power of an ordinary broadcasting station, all the power that could be received on an area of 100,000,000 square meters would be required!

SCIENTISTS have proven that light exerts pressure, a fact which can be shown by a very delicate instrument which is slightly deflected when a powerful beam of light falls upon it. Radio waves, too, exert a pressure, and each broadcasting station, when in operation, tends to knock over the buildings around it. But this force is infinitesimally small, so no alarm need be felt if you are in a tall building while a nearby station is broadcasting. According to Dr. Southworth, a building with a side 300 feet high and 100 feet wide, facing a broadcasting station from which fairly loud signals are being received, has a total force on it tending to overturn it of perhaps a millionth of a millionth of a pound!

The sun may also be considered as a broadcasting station, for it is constantly transmitting ether waves out into space. The most powerful of the terrestrial stations may be inaudible when a few thousand miles from the receiving set, but though the sun is 92,900,000 miles away, the power received by a square meter of surface is not a quarter of a microwatt, but about one and a half kilowatts, or about six billion times as much as from the radio station. "This," says Dr. Southworth, "leaves little question as to who is using super-power in broadcasting!"

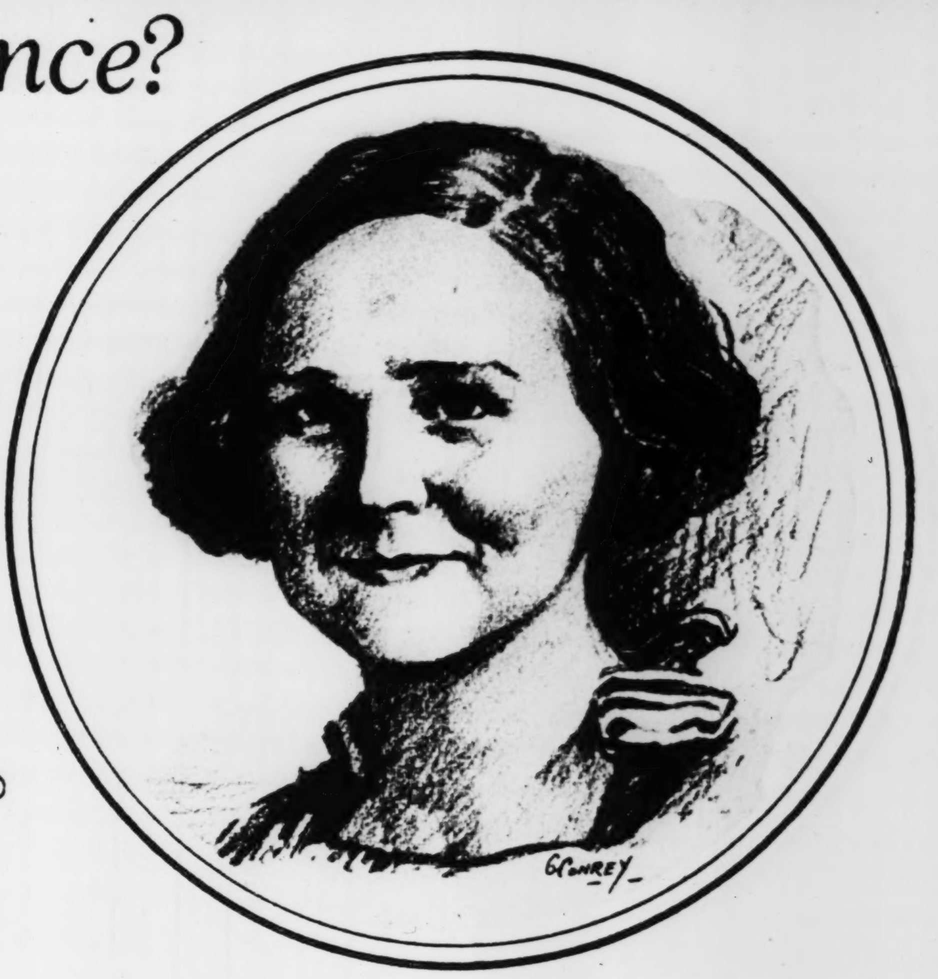
Another interesting comparison is that of sensitivity of the eye compared with a radio receiving set, and it is found that the eye is only about a thousandth as sensitive as a sensitive receiving set. "These facts," says Dr. Southworth, "would indicate that man has been fairly successful in competing with the Creator in the design of receiving apparatus, but man's transmitters cannot even be compared with Old Sol."

To Dance or Not to Dance?



THE REV. J. H. HOLMEN, leader of the anti-dancers.

THAT IS THE QUESTION in Essex, Iowa. Here Is an Account of a Small Town Feud Which Waxed Furious.



BERTHA ENGSTROM, leader of the dancers.

By HARRY R. BURKE

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

ESSEX, Iowa. — Mr. Henry Ford, up in Detroit, had recently announced his consuming desire to see a revival in America of the old-fashioned dances. Mr. Lynn Kinney, a linotype operator, had just purchased the Independent, a newspaper at Essex, where he was born, and had arranged with Tom Shankle, erstwhile Chicago newspaper man, to edit that paper and put some life in the old town. And Miss Bertha Engstrom, office manager for the Ford Motor Company's agency here in Essex, was looking out on Main street in the pale white winter sun. There you have the three corners of the triangle. It is not an equilateral triangle—if you recall your mathematics—for the sides are quite uneven.

But, being triangular, that combination served as a wedge—and it split the good town of Essex wide open, over the subject of dancing.

Leonard Johnson was looking over copies of the Dearborn Independent which showed just how old-fashioned dances were performed. E. W. Jones, who is nicknamed the obvious "Casey," came out of the shop in the Ford garage and into the office.

"When are you folks going to have a dance?" asked Johnson. "I see they're giving one over at the Ford garage in Red Oak."

Thus it started. The boys talked. Miss Engstrom talked. It really seemed like a very good thing. Those folks are all in their twenties. Like other boys and girls in the little town of Essex, they find it difficult to discover amusement. There hadn't been a public dance in Essex in 20 years. There was no picture show at which to spend the evenings. As for entertainment, these young people might have paraphrased the classic answer of the Georgia mountaineer who said, when asked what he did for amusement:

"Wal, we set and think . . . and sometimes we jist set."

It was pretty irksome, they all agreed, to be young and full of life, in Essex.

"If we could only have a dance, now," suggested Johnson.

"I EXPECT if Mr. Ford is sponsoring these old-fashioned dances we'll have one here," said Bertha Engstrom.

And that, the boys understood, settled that.

So they talked it over. At the postoffice. At the depot when the 10:47 train came in. At the Model Cafe across the street, and in the Ford garage.

And they'd tell Bertha Engstrom that: "John Soandso has got a date with Mary Suchandsuch for that dance of yours."

So some of the folks got the idea that this was to be Bertha Engstrom's dance. It really wasn't. Not until O. A. Bonham and W. J. Burkhart and C. C. Iseley, field representatives of the Ford company, came along was the dance more than a possibility. Then it was authorized.

And the word went out that there would be a dance on the night of February 12, in the Ford garage at Essex.

They came from the country-side. They came from the town. They danced waltzes, and two-steps, and one-steps, a schottische, Virginia reels, quadrilles. It was an amusing situation. There were those in town who thought the young folks of Essex were leading the town astray. But Bertha Engstrom, for instance, had never seen a schottische until it was danced on the floor of the Ford garage that night. And only a study of the dance pages of the Dearborn Independent had served to guide her through the mazes of the quadrilles. But the older folks knew. Some of them brought their children. The older folks, in fact, were doing the leading.

BUT, of course, the dance did not occur without a threat of trouble. The Rev. J. H. Holmen, D. D.—pronounced Holmayne—who is pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church, didn't want the dance. He appealed to the City Council to stop it; but N. C. Nelson, the Mayor, didn't object specially to dancing, and the majority of the City Council felt the same. So despite the eloquence of Pastor Holmen the dance was held.

Every car had been moved out of the Ford garage. Cornmeal and floor wax had been scattered carefully over the smooth concrete floor. In one corner was an orchestra—two violins, a saxophone, a piano and a banjo. There were no "decorations," as the society editor of the Essex Independent might have called them otherwise, excepting the party dresses and the pink cheeks of the girls. Deputy Sheriff Reisner of Shenandoah was present to see that there were no infractions of the law.

Fully 300 people attended. For the circle two-step there were 36 couples on the floor. For the quadrilles there were nine sets. S. W. Thompson, a railroad man, and Floyd Porter, a farmer, called the quadrilles.

"Salute your partners, balance all . . ." Above the sawing of the fiddlers, the tooting of the saxophone, the thumping of the piano and the banjo's twang, it sounded. The dance was on. Flushed and happy youth was enjoying itself. A 20-year ban had been broken. And the old folks, too, were not behind in the jollity. "My mother," said a boy who wasn't there, "told me she hadn't had as good a time in years." People congratulated Bertha Engstrom on her party.

Next day there was an indignation meeting in town. The Rev. Dr. Holmen and his friends were out to war upon the devil of the dance.

And then the Essex Independent started in to wake up the town. Editor Tom Shankle couldn't see any harm in dancing. He thought Essex ought to entertain its own young folks, for he knew that when the roads were good and the evenings pleasant they habitually drove to Shenandoah, six miles away, to attend the picture shows and dances. He said so in the Independent. He had little sympathy with the conservatives, who were headed by Dr. Holmen. Indeed, his first blasts were so effective that the town of Essex really got to discussing whether it wouldn't be a good thing to have picture shows and dances under the auspices of the public schools, and if it might not be well, after all, to invite a good clean moving picture man to establish himself in Essex.

It's a little town of almost 700 people—this Essex. There is a Main street, which is lined with modern stores. It has two banks, its own city hall, a hotel that is not kept open, and an opera house erected 32 years ago, in which there hasn't been a play within the memory of the young folks.

"The town is so good," said Miss Engstrom, "that it won't even have a Chautauqua. Most of the Chautauquas now have a dramatic performance and some musical entertainment as well as lectures."

But on the other hand, Essex has wealth. It is situated in the very heart of the Iowa-Nebraska corn belt. The bank deposits of the town are higher per capita than those of any in the county. Essex is rich, conservative and good. Some of the folks are better, of course, than others.

After the indignation meeting Bertha Engstrom found this out to her sorrow. She went home that night for supper, and Mrs. Charles Nelson, with whom she boarded, talked to her about the dance.

"It seems to me," said Mrs. Nelson, according to Miss Engstrom, "if we're going to have more of those terrible dances, someone had better be looking for a new boarding house."

There had been talk, of course, about more dances. It was the talk of the newspaper. It was the talk of the young folks. But the Ford company had no plans for any—nor had Bertha Engstrom.

"Well," said the young boarder, "if that's the way you feel about it, I guess I'd better be going now."

And with the food untouched she left, going across the street to the home of J. W. Nelson, who is brother to Charles Nelson, and there she was taken in and fed. There she has boarded since.

THE OPERA HOUSE, scene of the town's artistic activities. For 20 years no show or dance has graced its stern interior.

For, after all, there is something of the fighting spirit in the girl. Just as there is something of the spirit of Puck. Blonde she is, with blue eyes that are merry and frank, a nose that tilts with just a bit of impudence, and her mouth is usually broadened by a smile. A slim boyish form is hers, and she wears a sweater, a short plaid skirt and goloshes. Very much the type of the small-town "flapper" in appearance on the street. In the office, all business, brisk, efficient.

Anything, then, is Bertha Engstrom but the type of Joan of Arc. But "the Jéanne d'Arc of Essex" is what some of the younger folk called her.

And Tom Shankle and Lynn Kinney, who had come back to Kinney's birthplace to run the newspaper and liven up the town—what of them? Go-getters, these boys. One-hundred-per-centers. Live wires. Full of ideas. They wanted to make Essex a good town to live in. They wanted to make it a good town to do business in. The result was lively and exciting—for them.

Most of the people of Essex and vicinity are of Swedish descent. They are conservative. The dance question had served to solidify the conservatism of the town. The Independent had devised a plan for a "Market Day," to bring farmers into Essex to trade. There would be an auction. There would be a band concert. There would be lunches served by the Ladies' Aid Societies of the churches. Merchants would give prizes away to patrons who visited their stores. All this was to take place on St. Patrick's Day. And in the evening of St. Patrick's Day there would be a dance.

"The town of Essex is beginning to awaken from its long slumber," said Editor Tom, in the issue that announced Market Day plans. "And the fellow who has been content to snore doesn't like it. Getting up at 4 o'clock in the morning does not always mean that a fellow is awake at that hour. Let's go. Where? To a better business era in Essex."

SO FILLED with the go-getter spirit were Tom and Lynn that the former burst into poetry—and great was his inspiration:

"No, friends, the editor's not gone daft.
He's just a-rushin' fore and aft,
To make this one day such a boon
That we'll all get more business soon."

And, of course, he talked "hard sense," too:

"Trade in Essex not only on St. Patrick's but on all the other business days of the year. The merchants are awake as never before to the possibilities of the town. Let the surrounding country also awake and Essex will take its place in the marts of the world."

It was a beautiful dream—that of Essex in her rightful place among the marts of the world. Maybe it was doomed to remain a dream. At any rate, before St. Patrick's Day rolled 'round the fight over dancing had waxed warm in Essex. And there wasn't any St. Patrick's Day dance to wind up Market Day.

For people had taken seriously—very seriously—the proposal that moving pictures and dancing be introduced into the city schools. So seriously that on Sunday, March 7, Rev. Holmen and other ministers made that an issue in the Essex School Board election.

"On Sunday," said Editor Tom in the Essex Independent, "from several of the pulpits in this city there went out instructions to the members and adherents of the congregations to vote for Oscar Johnson and Anton Peterson, because, it was intimated, they stood against dancing and motion pictures in the public schools."

Dr. Glenn A. McMaster led in the election by 40 votes over Peterson, his nearest rival. And the Independent continued: "The result of the election, the sweeping victory of Dr. McMaster, should come to the pulpits of this town as the people's answer to the ministers' stepping down from the pulpit where Christ and Him crucified should be the theme and not politics, to enter into the political arena."

By that time the break was complete. The ultra-conservatives had been defeated. But they rallied their forces for the final struggle—the Essex city election on March 29.

Mayor N. C. Nelson hadn't altogether satisfied the conservatives when he permitted that dance in the Ford garage. They sought a leader to run for Mayor against him. They picked W. D. Gay, who for 20 years has been Mayor Nelson's partner in a real estate and jewelry business. Gay isn't exactly what his name implies. He doesn't approve of dances. He is not even so enthusiastic over movies as is J. S. Nordstrom, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Essex, who remarked that he wouldn't object so much to a good moving picture show in the town if only they would appoint him a censor so as to cut out all objectionable parts of the pictures.

Election day came. Bright and early the voters were out. Gay's supporters polled a total of 181 votes. Nelson's could muster but 61. Almost a victory of three to one!

"AND then it snowed," as the country editors used to say on Wednesday morning after the first Monday in November, when the election had gone against them by a landslide.

And in that snowstorm the writer made his way to Essex on the morning of March 30, this year.

"Better not come up here," Lynn Kinney had said over the telephone. "There's no story for you to get." Publisher Kinney was chastened. The verdict of the ballot box had been overwhelming. Also, some folks had stopped the paper. And some had threatened to take their advertising out.

"The people of Essex don't like this publicity about dancing," he said, "and they blame us for it. You won't get any story. Nobody will talk to you. And if Tom Shankle talks to you he's fired."

So, after its Fordian fling, the city of Essex has returned to the good old ways of its fathers. The Independent no longer led. The town purposed to drive out all idea of such devil's devices as the dance. The opera house will stand as empty as it has stood for 20 years. Probably a Chautauqua will have no opportunity to spread corn-belt enlightenment abroad in Essex this year or next. And there'll be no moving pictures. If folks want things like that and like dances they must go to Shenandoah—six miles away.

"What's six miles," ask the youngsters, "in these days of automobiles?" And Bertha Engstrom smiles as she sees them filling up their gas tanks for the trip.

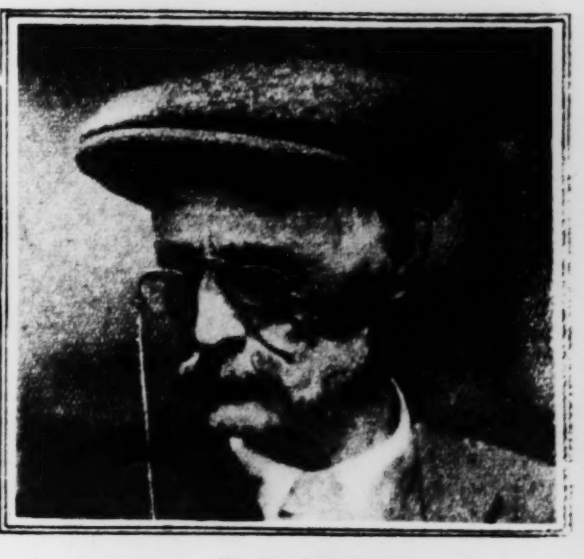
HERE THEY ARE—THE CHIEF CITIZENS OF ESSEX—THE ANTIS AND THE PROS.

J. S. NORDSTROM, President Chamber of Commerce. He wants to be a movie censor.

N. C. NELSON, Mayor of Essex, and a pro-dancer.

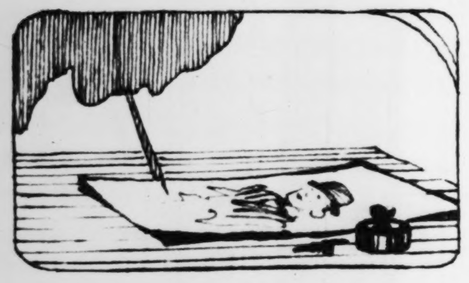
TOM B. SHANKLE, Editor of the Essex Independent. Formerly a pro; now (it would seem) muzzled.

C. LYNN KINNEY, Publisher of the Independent. Once a pro, now silent.



W. D. GAY, Recent successful Mayoralty candidate on the anti-dance platform.

The Boy Who WON'T Give Up



HENRY WEIGMAN Was Born Without Arms. He Has Decided to Become a Painter. With Only His Teeth to Guide the Brush He Is Plugging Away. Henry Doesn't Know the Meaning of the Word "Quit."

By a Post-Dispatch Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO. — President Coolidge said to Henry Weigman in a letter which Henry treasures above all the rest of his possessions: "It is better to be a good boy without arms than to have arms which are always getting one into mischief."

Everyone says cheerful things to Henry, which are meant to be consoling. Schoolmates, nice old ladies, kindly old gentlemen and teachers have told him various reasons why being born without arms is not so bad. Among the reasons which Henry remembers are:

You haven't any hands to wash.

You're not all the time getting into fights.

You can't steal.

You can't tie a tin pail onto dogs or cats.

You can't throw snowballs at derby hats.

You're not apt to smoke cigarettes and stunt your growth.

The devil can't find evil work for you to do.

All these words of comfort Henry has accepted with thanks, and, being optimistic by nature, has added a theory of his own.

"I'm going to make my own way in the world," he said, when the correspondent called on him at his home, 1418 South Sixtieth Court, Cicero, "and when I do, I'll be doing something."

His mother, Mrs. H. H. Weigman, nodded, beaming proudly at the boy.

"Henry can do anything he wants to do," she said. "Henry is smart. You should see the pictures he draws. He is going to be an artist when he grows up."

"I'm grown up now, Ma," put in Henry. "I'm 18. Where do you get that stuff 'when he grows up'? That's the trouble with my mother. She thinks I'm just a kid."

"Just listen at him," continued Mrs. Weigman. "Henry was always that way. He wouldn't let us treat him any different from other boys."

"Well, why should you?" Henry boasted. "I can do anything anybody else can do. I go to school. I work. I paint. I look after myself. I can drive an automobile, too."

"Now, Henry—"

"Well, I can," said Henry. "If you don't believe me, just get me the auto. I'll show you."

"YOU see," said Henry's mother, "he wants to drive an automobile. He sits here and figures how he'll make money enough to buy one. Now, you'd think a boy without arms and with club feet like Henry's wouldn't be figuring on anything like that. But Henry's planning to build a bungalow when he gets rich. He's got the plan all drawn. He says, 'Ma, this'll be your room. This'll be mine. We'll put the parlor here and the sleeping porch here.' I just laugh to listen at him. Show the gentleman some of your drawings, Henry."

Thus bidden, Henry got up from his chair in the living room and hobbled on his twisted legs and misshapen feet across the floor to the dining room. A scroll of papers lay on the sideboard there. Henry leaned over, gripped the scroll between his right shoulder and chin, and came hobbling back.

"I drew 'em at high school," Henry explained. "They're not very good, but I'm getting better every day."

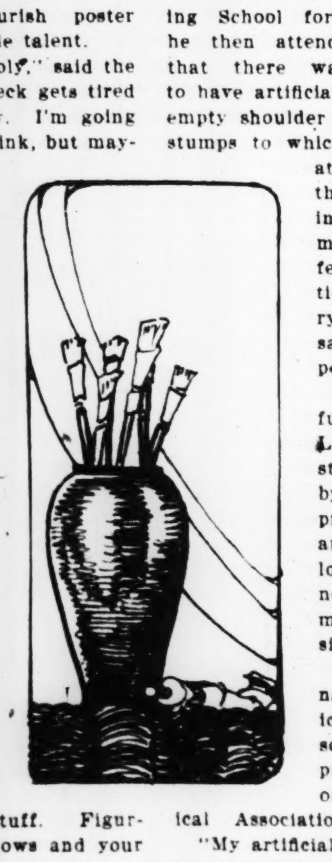
"They are good, Henry," put in his mother. "They're just as good as any of the youngsters in your class draw. Henry does all the work by holding his pencil or brush in his teeth."

The drawings were amateurish poster work, but showed unmistakable talent.

"Some of the lines are wobbly," said the boy, "but that's because my neck gets tired and makes my teeth unsteady. I'm going to be a commercial artist, I think, but maybe I'll be a painter."

Mrs. Weigman explained:

"You see, Henry's a poor boy and he's got to support himself. Mr. Weigman and I are getting old. Henry has four brothers and two sisters, but they can't help him much. I tell him not to be a painter because"——



Henry frowned portentously.

"Ma doesn't appreciate art," he said. "All she thinks about is the money. Of course, maybe I won't be a painter. You don't get any money for painting while you're alive. First, you make a name and then, after you're dead, they pay you big money. That is, they pay your heirs big money. So I guess I'll have to be a commercial artist. But I do like to monkey with oil paints. Gee, that's great stuff. Figuring out your lights and shadows and your colors."

"Show him your ships, Henry. They're just as natural."

HENRY WEIGMAN, Chicago boy with a brave spirit.

Henry got the ships. They were painted on the back of a cardboard box—white ships sailing a blue sea with mountains in the distance and blue sky shot with sunset colors.

"Henry worked hard painting those ships," said his mother. "We think they're real good. Henry has a room all to himself now. He's fixed it up like a studio. He opens the door with his chin and comes in and out. He has a typewriter and he can write by using his artificial arms. Oh—I forgot to tell you about Henry's arms."

SHE related how five years ago a Chicago surgeon, Dr. Harry Mock, learned of Henry through the Spalding School for Crippled Children, which he then attended. Dr. Mock suggested that there was a chance for Henry to have artificial arms. He was born with empty shoulder sockets and there were no stumps to which artificial arms might be attached. It was Dr. Mock's theory that by means of grafting, arm stumps might be made to grow. Dr. Mock offered to perform the operation free of charge, and Henry's parents sacrificed their savings to pay the hospital expenses.

The operation was successful and when Henry left St. Luke's he had two short stumps which he could move by grafted muscles. These protuberances began to grow and will continue to grow as long as Henry does. They are now about five inches long, making artificial arms possible.

Henry's case attracted national attention in medical circles. Articles describing the operation were published in the Journal of the American Medical Association and other periodicals.

"My artificial arms aren't steady enough to paint with, yet," Henry observed. "But they help me in school. I used to have to turn the pages of my books with my chin. I can use them to drive a car when I get it.

"Dr. Mock and the Spalding School did a lot for me. But I got pretty tired of so much notice. You see, all the kids at the Spalding School are crippled—a lot of them worse than I am. Some couldn't walk from hip disease, others couldn't straighten up because they had something wrong with their spines. Compared to them I was lucky. I've always been able to walk. And when you stop to think of the poor kids that can't see or hear or talk—well, I guess I'm not fixed so terrible.

"But at the Spalding School I was the prize exhibit. Everybody who visited the place wanted to see me. Doctors came from England and China and all over. They wanted to look at me. Well, I'd be in class trying to study and the teacher would say, 'Henry Weigman, report to the principal's office.' So I'd have to leave my books and go out to be looked at. Then the teachers sometimes would blame me for not having my lessons"——

"Now, Henry," warned his mother, "you shouldn't talk about your teachers."

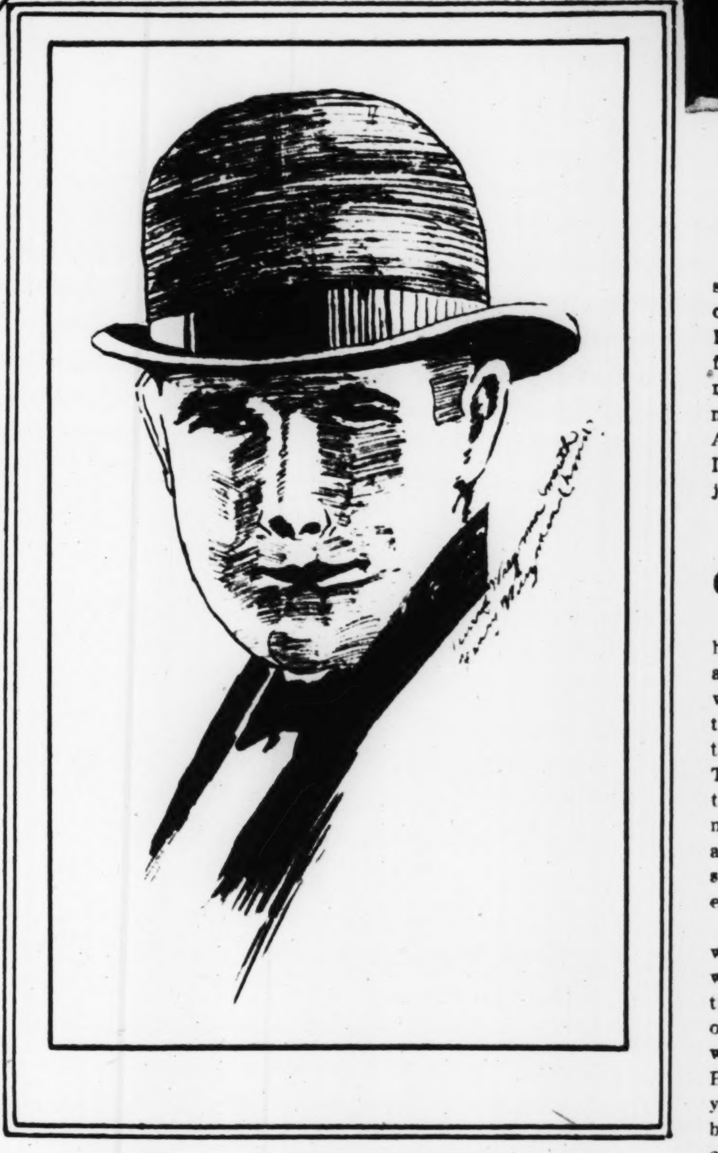
"Well, they would," insisted Henry, "and that's why I didn't get some of my lessons. It didn't hurt my feelings to be looked at but it hurt my feelings when the teachers called me dumb."

Mrs. Weigman nodded.

"Henry's feelings used to be hurt a lot," she said. "That's why we moved, 'way out here in Cicero. We used to live on Monroe street, near Forty-eighth. But you know how people are. We took Henry everywhere and we had to ride on the L or on street cars. And people would stare and talk. You know how they do. They just don't think. The children were the worst. They'd yell out, 'Oh, looky. He ain't got any arms, Ma!' Things like that.

"So my husband and I decided to move out here where Henry could be more to himself. One of Henry's brothers who works in Field's has a Ford, and when we go far now we take Henry in it."

To all this Henry offered an objection.



DRAWING made by Henry with pen held in teeth.

"Aw, Mother, I'm not sensitive about myself. That doesn't cut any ice. I know I'm crippled. It can't be helped, so that's that. But I don't like to be treated differently from other folks. If people would just let me trail along on my own account without noticing what's wrong, I'd like to go out. As far as that's concerned I proved that I wasn't sensitive. You know I did, Ma. I joined that sideshow last summer."

He was asked to tell about it.

"I MADE good money," related Henry. "I got $25 a week. They came for me in a taxi and brought me home in a taxi, too. I was billed as the armless marvel. It was easy work. All I had to do was to sit on the platform. About every twenty minutes the spieler would make a speech about me. Then, when people came in, I'd draw a picture of an Indian, using charcoal. I'd write my name twice, and that was all. The show people had several of my drawings on exhibition.

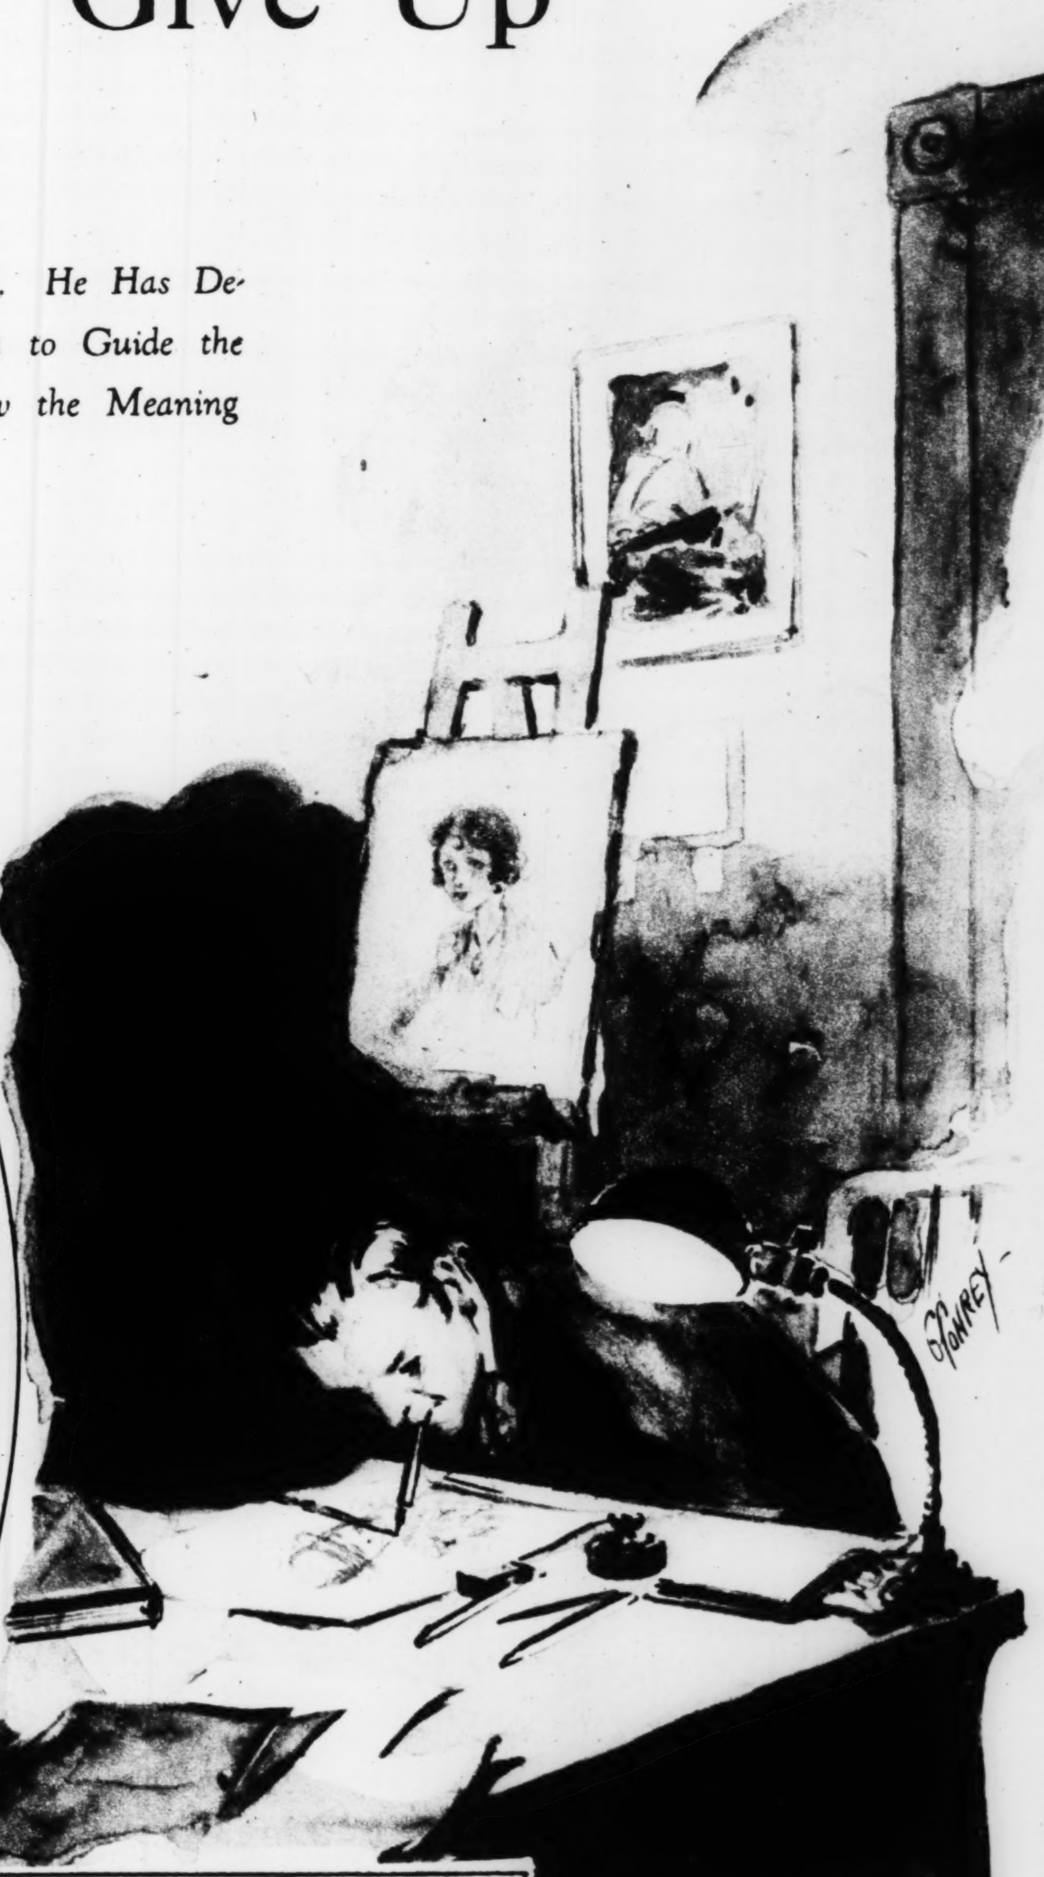
"Of course, it was only a way to make money. I wouldn't want to do it all the time. I've had offers to go on a vaudeville tour, but I want to finish my schooling. Besides, it's sort of cheap, you know. It's almost like begging"—— With a show of heat, "I'm not a beggar. I don't want anybody's charity. I'm going to do something big some day and I don't want people to say: 'Yes, but I remember you when you were a beggar.' I don't want anybody's money."

His mother sighed.

"Still, Henry," she said, "money could do a lot for you. It costs so much to keep you in clothes and shoes. You know, your shoes cost $30 a pair."

But Henry was stoutly independent.

"I'll make money myself. Just wait and see. I'll draw designs for advertisements.



"Patiently, painstakingly he works away."

Some day an advertising agency is going to see some of my work and offer me a job as an apprentice. I'll bet that's the way Coles Phillips and Maxfield Parrish and M. Leon Bracker started. Of course, I haven't done much figure work yet. I"——

"You drew a man, Henry. Show him your man."

So the boy produced a copy of the "Maroon and White," published by the students of the J. Sterling Morton High School, Cicero. On page four was a drawing of a man in a derby hat, signed Henry Weigman. The news story that went with it was headed "Crippled Boy Is Artist."

"The hat is a little lop-sided," Henry criticised, "and I didn't get the left side of the brim quite big enough. It's out of proportion. Gee, there are so many things to remember. And besides, when you're drawing with the pencil held in your mouth and propped up with an artificial arm, it's hard to see in perspective. But my teachers encourage me. They say that with constant practice I'll improve."

Thereupon Mrs. Weigman was moved to say:

"If constant practice will do it Henry will get there. You should see that boy work. Hour after hour he just sits and draws. He's painting a big ship—what's the name of it? Oh, yes, the Constitution—he's painting a picture of the Constitution now. He found some old canvas and I helped him tack it on a piece of cardboard. Just like a regular painter, Henry is, with a canvas and an easel and everything."

One had the picture from her words of Henry at work in his room upstairs, hunched over his makeshift easel—laboriously painting with a brush in his teeth.

"I'VE often told Henry," his mother went on, "that will-power will do wonders. Henry hasn't been like many children would be in his fix. He hasn't started pitying himself and wanting to be taken care of. I can remember when Henry was just a little boy, how he'd hobble out to play with the other children and would try to do everything they did."

"I didn't try," said Henry. "I did it. I can lift anything. I can go out there and shovel the snow off that walk. I can draw and write on a typewriter. I can go downtown by myself. Of course, I can't hop a street car. I have to wait for it to stop. But there's nothing in that hopping street cars anyway. It doesn't pay a fellow."

Henry has his own particular gang. He is in the department for cripples at Morton and has made friends among unfortunates like himself. His particular cronies are Arthur, Harold and Harry. Arthur's parents are wealthy and have a car.

"We're the four musketeers," Henry remarked. "We pal around together. My buddies have arms but I can walk better than they can. We kid each other. If one of us stumbles we yell, 'Hey, you darned cripple, quit blocking traffic.' We kid each other like that. Art drives his dad's car and we go places. We bum around just like anybody else. My friends are all planning to work. Art wants to be an architect. Harold and Harry haven't made up their minds, but they'll probably go to work for their fathers.

"The way I figure it, you don't get anything by mooning around and wishing you were somebody else. I make more than a hundred dollars every Christmas drawing Christmas cards. I design them and have them printed. Then I color them and they sell for 10 cents each. I made a thousand cards last Christmas. Of course, the folks helped me. But I did most of the work myself."

Henry has struck up a friendship with a mysterious New Yorker who calls himself "Uncle Robert." This philanthropist took one of Henry's Christmas cards to President Coolidge in 1924 and it was in acknowledgment of this card that Henry received his precious presidential letter. He has had it framed and the letter occupies a place of honor in the Weigman bungalow.

Through Uncle Robert or someone else Henry hopes to have the opportunity of earning a living as an artist.

"All I need is a chance," said Henry. "I'll show 'em."

Mrs. Weigman beamed.

"It'll come, Henry," she said, and then to the reporter as the interview ended, "I tell Henry that the Lord loves a fighter. If you're brave you'll triumph in the end."

Henry waved good-by with his foot.

"Well, carry on, Henry," said his visitor at parting.

"Sure, sure," said Henry, with a grin.

WHERE Are the Meals of YESTERYEAR?

France Is Building a Monument to Brillat-Savarin, Perhaps the Best Eater Who Ever Lived. This Fact Encourages a Pause in Our Mad Rush to Cafeterias and Lunch Counters and Recalls the Good Old Days When Feasting Was an Art and Each Meal a Serious Artistic Enterprise.

By GUY FORSHEY
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

CONTRASTING sharply with the passing of many of the good restaurants in St. Louis, comes the news that the French, after a hundred years, still find it dutiful and becoming to honor the memory of that prince of fine eaters of the good old days—Anthelme Brillat-Savarin. In his native town of Belley, picturesque little Alpine city not far from the Rhine, a monument is now arising to mark the centenary of his death.

It is doubtful if the rising cafeteria generations of America could appreciate a man like Brillat-Savarin. It is safe to venture the assertion that they would not honor him with a monument after a hundred years. Alas, one even suspects that the inventor of "hot dog" would be a more likely candidate for tombstone tributes than the man who glorified gastronomy as a fine art. But the French— Ah, there is a difference! Although sorely beleaguered by the vile hash houses, the vulgar delicatessen dives of this evil economic age, France is fighting to keep the sacred flame alive. The Frenchman's super-sensitive appetite is dying hard. He still retains in his make-up hereditary memories of dining as it was in the brilliant times of Louis XIV, or of Hugo, Balzac and Brillat-Savarin.

Where could one find now a leg of mutton so palatably roasted that a man could devour it all at one sitting? Balzac was wont to perform that feat with regularity. In what society nowadays would a roast turkey be inadequate for a pair of appetites? Hugo's standing complaint was that although the turkey was the New World's greatest gift to the old, it was nevertheless a most unsatisfactory bird—too big for one and not big enough for two.

In this day, even in gastronomic France, one doesn't find food so appetizing as to keep a man eating from early morning until late at night as Louis XIV habitually did. However prodigious may have been the capacity of Louis, the fabulous quantity of food he stored away certainly constituted a tribute to the cooks of his time. It is a matter of record that for his first meal of the day—about 6 a. m.—he would put out of sight four cutlets, a fat chicken, eggs, ham and a bottle and a half of champagne, after which he would go off hunting and come back with a tremendous appetite. One of his dinners (the records exist) consisted of eight plates of meat, six of poultry, four of fish, several kinds of game, soup and pastry. When he went on a journey the royal traveler would be accompanied by cooks, vintners and a storehouse of food. Eating would begin as soon as he was in the coach, the courtiers and ladies being obliged to keep pace with him or incur his displeasure. This feasting he kept up as long as the journey lasted and it is said he always arrived at his destination hungry.

OF COURSE, good eating now isn't what it was then, as regards quantity at least, but the "artistic" taste is making a last stand against the atrocities of the human filling station and Brillat-Savarin is its patron saint.

It must be understood that Brillat-Savarin was not merely a good eater and nothing more, as some good eaters are, or were. He was a brilliant and honored statesman of his time. But it was not as a legislator that he became celebrated before the world. His fame he owed to the delicate sensibility of his palate and to an extraordinary book which it inspired. Hardly anybody of the present day has ever heard of Brillat-Savarin, the lawyer. Almost everybody has heard of Brillat-Savarin, the epicure, the author of that remarkably entertaining and informative work, "The Physiology of Taste." Widely renowned are its aphorisms; lofty and pungent its words of wisdom.

Not a heavy eater, but a connoisseur of food, was Brillat-Savarin. Who else ever owned a palate so astute that upon tasting a fish it could immediately determine whether that aquatic morsel had been caught above or below a dam? Who else could taste bottle after bottle of wine and tell precisely in what latitude that wine was aged? Who else could partake of a roasted fowl and state upon which leg the bird had roosted heaviest? Mayhap the world will never see again a gourmet like Brillat-Savarin. Only France could have produced one.

American eating now appears to have become almost a lost art. The days when roasts were roasts and dining was an avocation to be practiced reverently are gone. At present the rush is to the cafeteria; the "meal-a-minute" lunch counter where hurrying hordes gulp coffee and sandwich in a race with the clock; the "hot dog" stand, and the roadside barbecue. Speed has triumphed in the match with taste and the pleasure of eating is nearing extinction. What a fall from the age of Brillat-Savarin!

BECAUSE so many restaurants have been named for him, a great many Americans cling to the notion that Brillat-Savarin was a chef. He wasn't. That is, not by profession. But he was thoroughly acquainted with the culinary art in theory, practice and result. Of a family for many generations eminent in politics, he was born in Belley in 1755. He followed in the footsteps of his forefathers, becoming in 1789 a member of the Constituent Assembly, a body composed of all that was most brilliant in the youth of France of that day. Later he was appointed president of the Superior Civil Court of the Department of Ain and subsequently a Justice of the Court of Cassation. His eloquence was described as remarkable. Through all his political career, however, he was attached more in practice to the philosophy of Epicurus than that of Zeno and never permitted judicial labors to interfere with his social life or the composition of his book, which he regarded as the great work of his life. In 1793 he was elected Mayor of Belley and spent there the season of the Reign of Terror. Later he was forced to fly to Switzerland to escape the revolutionists and finally sought in America the repose denied him in his native land. Two years he spent teaching French in Boston, New York and Philadelphia and for a time earned his living as a musician; playing the violin in the orchestra of the Park Theater in the American metropolis. With the fall of Robespierre, however, Brillat-Savarin went back to his native shores and for many years thereafter devoted himself to his court duties and his book, which represented a lifetime effort, being compiled as it was of observations accumulated over half a century. He died in Paris, February 2, 1826, at the age of 71, loved as a pleasant guest and deeply respected for his vast range of general information.

Most probably it was the charm of its composition that brought his text-book for gourmets such tremendous popularity. Through all its wide range of topics discussed there runs a tone of grandiose profundity, a droll mock-seriousness which, coupled with its wealth of anecdote, made of it a work of humor as well as a treatise of science. Far from being a glutton such as were some of his renowned contemporaries, Brillat-Savarin was satisfied by the simplest of meals, but he had one unalterable requirement. This was that his meals be prepared artistically, that the chef should make the most of flavors latent in the foodstuffs. The art of cookery, he maintained, consisted in exciting the taste, from which arose the pleasure of eating. He used to say "to excite a stomach of papier mache and enliven powers almost ready to depart, a cook needs more talent than he who has solved the infinitesimal calculus."

SAID BRILLAT-SAVARIN:

A dessert without cheese is like a beautiful woman who has lost an eye.

The discovery of a new dish confers more happiness on humanity than the discovery of a new star.

The table is the only place where one does not suffer from ennui during the first hour.

The destiny of nations depends on the manner in which they are fed.

Tell me what kind of food you eat and I will tell you what kind of man you are.

The pleasure of the table belongs to all ages, to all conditions, to all countries and to all eras; it mingles with all other pleasures and remains at last to console us for their departure.

A cook may be taught, but a man who can roast is born with the faculty.

Animals fill themselves; man eats. The man of mind alone knows how to eat.

The Creator, when he obliges man to eat, invites him to do so by appetite and rewards him by pleasure.

Good living is an act of our judgment, in obedience to which we grant a preference to things which are agreeable over those which have not that quality.

Those persons who suffer from indigestion or who become drunk are utterly ignorant of the true principles of eating and drinking.

To say that we should not change our drinks is a heresy; the tongue becomes saturated and after the third glass yields but an obtuse sensation.

FROM some of the descriptions of feasting given by Brillat-Savarin and others, it would appear that the stomachs of the French aristocracy needed considerably more than excitement to lure them into such appalling indiscretions. At a dinner given at Lille on January 17, 1452, in honor of Philip the Good, the menu consisted of 192 dishes. The decorations of the hall were changed with each service, so that the feast lasted all day. Some of the dishes were quite as big as the guests (out of one of them a nude woman emerged) and wine merchants kept up a procession around the table with casks of wine from which they filled the goblets. At this period and until centuries later, the glasses or goblets of guests were not placed on the table beside them. They were too large. Diners then were prodigious drinkers just as they were prodigious eaters and the glasses were kept—in safety?—on a sideboard and passed over to the guest by a servant when the diner wished to drink. As a result there had to be about as many servants as guests.

Women in those days were quite as voracious as the men. When a banquet was given to Catherine de Medici by the City of Paris in 1545, it is stated authoritatively, the array of roasts alone, a comparatively small part of the feast, comprised peacocks, pheasants, swans, capons, herons, fowls, pigs, rabbits, deer, hares, geese, quails, bustards, and cranes—and it was the custom in those days to roast animals whole. The Queen, in order to be properly gracious, had to taste everything served, and this she did. At least history says she did. However, a chronicler named l'Estoile adds that she ate so many cocks' combs that she "felt she would burst." Small wonder!

The Chevalier d'Eon, it is related, was reputed to be a "small eater" and satisfied with a mere nothing. Yet one day when he was quite alone he ate for his luncheon a melon, a matelote of eels, a carp, two chickens, a dish made of four pigeons and a rabbit, a tart, some beans and a large array of fruit.

Still other celebrated examples of incredible gorging are to be found, and among them the clergy is well represented. On March 30, 1571, a "Lenten" repast was served up to the Archbishop of Paris consisting of four large fresh salmon, 10 turbot, 12 lobsters, 50 pounds of whale, 200 tripes of cod, a basket of mussels, 9 fresh shad, 18 trout, 17 pike, 62 carp, 18 lampreys, 200 large prawns, 200 white herrings, 200 sour herrings, 80 salted salmon, 18 plaice, 3 baskets of whitebait and 600 frogs!

Presumably his Eminence had some guests, some holy canons or devout monks, to fast with him, but most modern stomachs would probably have been more than satisfied with the tripes of cod and passed the rest—above all, the whale!

Strangely enough, indigestion seems to have been rare even after such gargantuan feasts as these. Bleeding, it is said, sometimes had to be resorted to as a measure against discomfort but this was a simple affair. Occasionally, of course, there were accidents and even fatalities from over-eating. It is recorded that a Parisian named Verdelet, a "newly rich," one day bought 3000 carp and had a monster pie made of their tongues. Of this he ate so immoderately that he died of indigestion and the fatality excited much comment. That was in the fifteenth century.

By the eighteenth century, Brillat-Savarin's time, people had begun to control their appetites, apparently as a result of discovering that they might be just as healthy and vastly more comfortable from eating less. In 1714 a publication called "The New Royal Cook-Book" stated that a dinner should consist of only four services. But this was still fairly generous, as each service for a dinner for 30 people might comprise 43 dishes, or a total of 172 dishes for the meal, not counting appetizers and desserts. In those days, too, the appetizers were meals in themselves—black puddings, sausages, pigs' ears, fat hams and so on.

It must not be inferred that Brillat-Savarin by commending excitation of taste through culinary skill sanctioned such gluttony as that of which some of his fellows were guilty. Like all famous gastronomists, he preached moderation, as he himself practiced. His contention was simply that the pleasure incident to the necessity of eating might be immeasurably increased by intelligent discrimination on the part of the diner.

"GOOD living," he wrote, "is an act of our judgment, in obedience to which we grant a preference to things which are agreeable over those which have not that quality. Those persons who suffer from indigestion, or who become drunk, are utterly ignorant of the true principles of eating and drinking."

Says the illustrious gourmet in his chapter on taste:

"Of all the senses with which we have been endowed by nature, the taste is the one which, all things considered, procures us the most enjoyment.

"1. Because the pleasure of eating is the only one, when moderately enjoyed, not followed by fatigue.

"2. It belongs to all ages, eras and ranks.

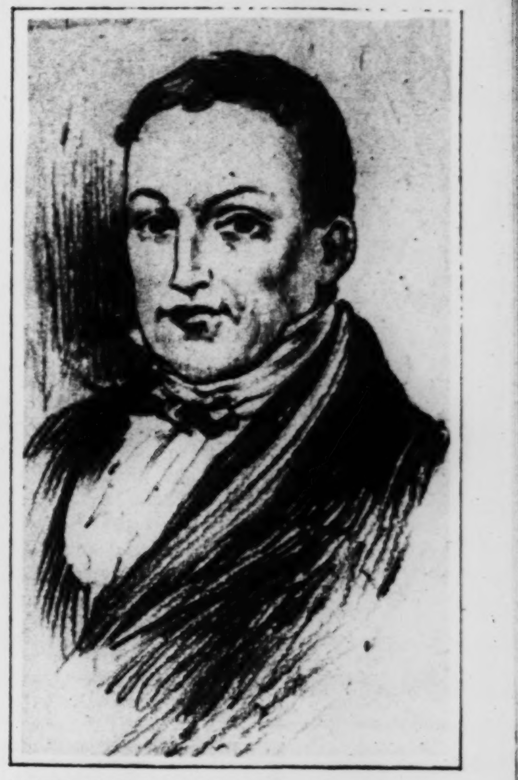
"3. Because it necessarily returns once a day and may without inconvenience be twice or thrice repeated in the same day.

"4. It mingles with all other pleasures and even consoles us for their absence.

"5. Because the impressions it receives are durable and dependent on our will.

"6. Because when we eat we receive a certain indefinable and peculiar impression of happiness originating in instinctive conscience. When we eat, too, we repair our losses and prolong our lives. . . . . .

"The tongue of animals does not exceed their intelligence; in fishes the tongue is but a movable bone; in birds it is usually a membranous cartilage, and in quadrupeds it is often covered with scales and asperities, and has no circumflex motion.



BRILLAT-SAVARIN—Prince of good eaters.

"The tongue of man, on the contrary, from the delicacy of its texture and the different membranes by which it is surrounded and which are near to it, announces the sublimity of the operations to which it is destined.

"Animals are limited in their taste; some live only on vegetables, others on flesh; others feed altogether on grain; none know anything of composite flavors.

"Man is omnivorous. All that is edible is subjected to his vast appetite, a thing which causes gustatory powers proportionate to the use he has to make of them. The apparatus of taste is a rare perfection of man and we have only to see him use it to be satisfied of it."

Brillat-Savarin held to the view that all were not created with equal capacity for tasting and enjoying food any more than with equal capacity for storing it away. In some tongues, he pointed out, there were three times as many sensitive feelers as in others, and this circumstance, he held, explained readily why one of two guests sitting at the same table would give evidence of delight while the other appeared to eat from constraint. The latter simply didn't have a properly equipped tongue. Gastronomically speaking, he was deaf and dumb.

That gourmandising contributed to long life and happiness, and to beauty in women, Brillat-Savarin was convinced. Good cheer, he declared, is far from being injurious and other things being equal, gourmands live longer than other people. One of his favorite boasts was that he could determine at a glance whether or not persons he met were endowed with a superior sense of taste.

"PERSONS predestined to gourmandise," he wrote, "are in general of medium stature. Their faces are either round or square, and small, their noses short and their chins rounded. The women are pretty rather than beautiful and they have a slight tendency to obesity.

"Those who are fondest of friandises have delicate features, smaller, and are distinguished by a peculiar expression of the mouth. Agreeable guests should be sought for among those who have this appearance. They receive all that is offered them, eat slowly and taste advisedly. They do not seek to leave places too quickly where they have been kindly received. They are always in for all the evening, for they know all games and all that is necessary for a gastronomical soiree.

"Those, on the contrary, to whom nature has refused a desire for the gratification of taste, have a long nose and face. Whatever be their statures, the face seems out of order. Their hair is dark and flat and they have no embonpoint. They invented pantaloons.

"Women whom nature has thus afflicted are very angulous, are uncomfortable at the table and live on lenten fare.

"I was sitting one day at a great entertainment and saw opposite to me a very pretty woman with a very sensual face. I leaned towards my neighbor and said that the lady with such features must be a gourmande. 'Bah!' said he, 'she is not more than fifteen; she is not old enough—let us see, though.'

"The beginning was not favorable and I was afraid of being compromised. During the first two courses the young woman ate with a discretion which really amazed me. The dessert came; it was brilliant as it was abundant and gave me some hopes. I was not deceived, for she not only ate what was set before her but sent for dishes which were at the other end of the table. She tasted everything and we were surprised that so small a stomach could contain so much. My diagnostics succeeded and science triumphed. . . . .

"The penchant of the fair sex for gourmandising is not unlike instinct; for gourmandising is favorable to beauty. A series of exact and rigorous examinations has shown that a succulent and delicate person, on careful diet, keeps the appearance of old age long absent. It makes the eyes more brilliant and the color more fresh. It makes the muscles stronger and as the depression of the muscles causes wrinkles, those terrible enemies of beauty, it is true that those who know how to eat are ten years younger than those ignorant of the science."

Miss Rambeau's Very Hard Luck

Just One Difficulty After Another Seems to Be the Lot of Talented Marjorie Rambeau, Sometimes Classed as One of America's Best Actresses

Her Plays Are Not Successes; She Is Named in Divorce Suits; She Loses Fiances—Miss Rambeau Never Gets the Breaks.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

LIFE, to Miss Marjorie Rambeau, is a laborious process of breathing, interrupted now and then by a sigh of disappointment—or an angry wife. Miss Rambeau should be, at present, feeling very low. Next week she may be feeling better, but just now she and Lady Luck are sworn enemies. Whenever Lady Luck goes on a spree she breathes the breath of scandal. And almost every time that has happened in the last 10 years Miss Rambeau was the one to suffer. Miss Rambeau is the unluckiest actress in New York and compared to her the Cherry sisters were fortune's favorites. The number on Miss Rambeau's dressing room door ought to be 13. She is so unlucky that the first time she left the door of her apartment in Hotel Endicott open a married woman's detectives walked in and found the lady's husband. Just as an example of Miss Rambeau's outrageous luck—in six days, recently, she suffered the following series of misfortunes:

Her play, "The Night Duel," flopped after a two-weeks' run.

She was permitted to sob before a jury in a divorce case where she was named co-respondent, but the case was settled out of court without clearing her name.

She lost her fiance because he decided he would prefer to be "Just A Good Friend."

With any luck at all Miss Rambeau would have avoided involvement in the Manton divorce case. She had hired William Kevitt Manton, an actor, to serve as her "cueist." A cueist is a person who reads the last words in lines of a play so the rehearsing actor or actress can practice her part, memorizing just where the speeches come in. For this duty Miss Rambeau paid Manton $50 a week, she testified.

Well, on the night of August 29 last Miss Rambeau decided she would practice her leading role in the play "Antonio," which was shortly to open in New York. She telephoned to Manton at 1:30 a. m. to come to her apartment in the Endicott hotel. They were engaged in practicing the lines when in through the partly open door walked a detective and three women operatives hired by Manton's wife.

THE detective, one Israel Rourke, testified that he found Manton attired in pajamas seated on Miss Rambeau's bed, while under a sheet was Miss Rambeau. He testified that there was nothing between Miss Rambeau and the sheet.

This just goes to show how a coincidence can mix one into a divorce case. If it hadn't been a hot August night, and the door hadn't been open, the detective probably couldn't have walked in, and wouldn't have had the impression that Miss Rambeau was in the altogether and Manton in pajamas.

Miss Rambeau tried to explain it to the jury.

"I had on a nightgown," she testified, "but the shoulderstraps were of flesh-colored crepe de chine, and the detective probabl overlooked them. Mr. Manton was not in pajamas. He had removed his coat and collar and tie because it was so hot. He was wearing a white shirt and light-colored palm beach trousers, which must have led the detective to think Mr. Manton wore pajamas."

"Weren't you embarrassed when Mr. Rourke and the women walked in?" Mrs. Manton's attorney asked her.

"Certainly not," Miss Rambeau replied. "I was glad to talk to anyone who would break the monotony of studying my part. Mr. Rourke came in and spoke to me. I shook hands with him as a friend. I knew him. I didn't see the women at all."

"What did Rourke do?"

"He shook hands and then went out. I asked him not to slam the door. It was all very casual. I went right on studying my part. Mr. Manton read me the lines. He had been sitting on the bed with his back against the footboard. He kept that position and we went on studying the part for three-quarters of an hour after the raid."

Detective Rourke and the women operatives admitted under cross-examination that neither Miss Rambeau nor Manton showed the least embarrassment.

This point of the case seemed safely disposed of when another gust of hard luck hit Miss Rambeau. The plaintiff's counsel introduced in evidence a telegram alleged to have been received by Manton from Miss Rambeau. It read:

"Darling, I love you and nothing can keep us apart but the Harlem. As the old conniver said, don't be carnivorous. Your pal in crime. Marjorie Rambeau."

There was another unlucky break for you. Miss Rambeau promptly admitted sending the telegram, but——

"It was just a joke," she testified.

Her fiance, Albert Edward Anson, described as "a tall slightly bald man of about 50, with noseglasses and graying hair," explained the telegram.

"Miss Rambeau and I cooked that up as a joke and sent it to Manton, who was opening in 'Bachelor Brides,'" Anson testified.

While attorneys for Manton were pleading with the jury to vindicate Miss Rambeau, "a genius with the innocence of a child," the beautiful actress sobbed softly. It looked like a good break at last, but even then cruel fate intervened.

Superior Court Justice Wasservogel, finding the jury was hopelessly deadlocked, effected a reconciliation between Manton and his wife. There was no verdict of "Not guilty."

But this occasion is not the only one in which Miss Rambeau has been plagued by misfortune when mentioned as a co-respondent. In 1924 Blanche Yurka, the Hungarian stage star, accused Miss Rambeau of alienating the affections of her husband, Ian Keith, the movie actor. Miss Yurka said that Marjorie was once her dearest friend, but that she tried to cut her out with Keith as early as 1921, when they met while Miss Yurka and Keith were playing stock in Indianapolis. Later, Miss Rambeau gave Keith the part of Orlando in a revival of "As You Like It," while she played Rosalind. They opened in Washington. At a party given in honor of Ouida Bergert, the screen writer, Miss Rambeau made open love to her husband, Miss Yurka charged.

The affair went on until Keith kept photographs of Miss Rambeau on his dressing table, and until Miss Yurka hurled one of these into a sewer in Cincinnati. Then there was a public explosion and Miss Rambeau, unlucky as always, came out second best.

"Blanche Yurka amuses me," she said. "In her petition she gives her age as 29. I happen to know that she is 39."

Blanche Yurka, however, had the last word.

"At that, I'm younger than Marjorie Rambeau," she said. And later, while Miss Rambeau was elsewhere occupied, Miss Yurka won her divorce suit.

But if the gorgeous Marjorie has been unlucky in divorce suits she has also been unlucky in marriages.

SHE was an unknown stock actress in 1912 when she married Willard Mack, the playwright. Mack's prominence in theatrical circles, his ability to write popular plays and get them produced "made" his new wife as an actress. But she found him better as an "angel" in the theater than as an angel in the house. He was no angel at home, she finally decided, and, following the footsteps of previous wives of Mack's, divorced him in 1917. Two years later she married Hugh Dillman, while she was playing in 'The Fortune Teller" and he had the role of the son. He deserted her in 1924 and she sued for divorce in California, obtaining a decree and $60,000 cash settlement. She had previously charged cruel and inhuman treatment in her petition, but it was amended to the milder charge.

Between these marriages Miss Rambeau had another unfortunate love affair. She met in Paris one Marquis Edouard Rene Rousselot de Castillio, who had a Captain's commission and a title, according to press reports. Their engagement was announced and Miss Rambeau summoned her press agents. A number of poses of the lovers were broadcast, one showing Miss Rambeau with her arm about the shoulders of her fiance. Alas, for the perverted quirks of fortune! Marquis Edouard turned out to be a bogus nobleman. He was, in all truth, a discharged cook of the real Marquis who had appropriated his title and wardrobe. Miss Rambeau promptly broke off the match.

Even in the ordinary humdrum of travel the unlucky star of the unlucky star pursued her. Shortly after the war Miss Rambeau was touring Europe and wished to enter Austria. She was held up at a frontier town named Steinach for lack of proper passports. Enraged at the stupidity of the officials she made what was reported as "a menacing move toward one of the soldiery" and was promptly locked up in jail. Friends effected her release after several hours.

Only once on this trip did Lady Luck smile. That was when Premier Mussolini presented Miss Rambeau to the admiring populace of Venice from the balcony of the Doges' palace. But her good favor changed almost at once. Returning to the United States on the Holland-America Line steamer Noordam she and several traveling companions gave a party. The party became gay and a number of men and women in evening dress sought to draw into the hilarity several stolid Dutch sailors whom they found at work on deck. The sailors were polite. They declined with smiles.

According to the officials who investigated this affair, Miss Rambeau started all the trouble. She made slighting remarks about the sailors and they turned a hose on her, drenching her frock. A general melee ensued.

THE unhappy chance which has ever been Miss Rambeau's lot was spared to her during the first years on the stage. After she had starred auspiciously in several of Willard Mack's plays the critics began to speak of her in the same breath with Jane Cowl and some predicted as great a career as Maude Adams' for her. Miss Rambeau was born in San Francisco and played her first role when 13, taking the part of Camille in the Dumas melodrama. After her marriage to Willard Mack she picked several box-office hits. One was Channing Pollock's "A Sign on the Door." Another was "The Goldfish." She also starred in Zoe Akins' success, "Daddy's Gone A-Hunting." At one time she was in the first rank of American actresses, but then disaster set in.

Her first stroke of awful luck was the attempted revival of "As You Like It," in which she played Rosalind. The critics were against her from the first because they could not take seriously the spectacle of a lady of Miss Rambeau's statuesque proportions wearing tights. After a lukewarm opening in Washington and two weeks in New York the play was sent to the warehouse ticketed as a dismal flop.

Then she tried a play called "The Road Together." This play has the short-run record of all time on Broadway. It lasted just one night in January, 1924. The critics made the following remarks:

"During one of the big moments of the play Miss Rambeau put on her evening wrap upside down and the audience tittered, and when she called her husband by her lover's name, they tittered again."

"Miss Rambeau seemed to have considerable difficulty in pronouncing words of more than one syllable."

"Her performance wabbled, perceptibly."

"Miss Marjorie Rambeau was apparently laboring under some mental strain which made her lines somewhat unruly. It would be impertinent to inquire just what this particular stress of spirits was, but it seemed to draw a veil over her native talent for acting."

Bravely trying to escape the jinx of successive stage failures, Miss Rambeau joined the cast of "Cheerio" as star of the piece, which opened in Chicago. It lasted a week and then the producers closed it. They refused to pay Miss Rambeau her salary, alleging that her acting was responsible for the play's failure. The Actors' Equity Association ruled that Miss Rambeau was entitled to a week's pay, but she did not get the other three weeks' pay she had asked for.

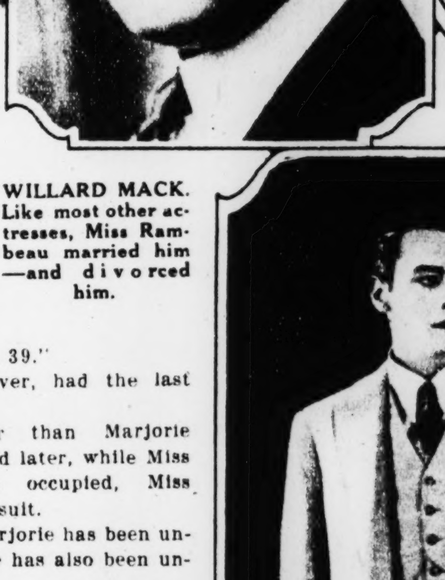
HER next venture was a vaudeville tour, and then she went into the cast of the "Valley of Discontent." This piece closed after a short disheartening stay in New York, and following the debacle she took the leading role in "Antonio," the piece for which she was practicing that night when Mrs. Manton's detective walked in. This piece barely lasted through September, and she tried desperately to break the string of defeats with "The Night Duel." This piece, after a facetious panning by the critics, died under her after two weeks.

Now she has announced her return to stock company acting, which is to the theater what the minor leagues are to baseball.

Unlucky in marriage, unlucky in love, unlucky in divorce cases, unlucky on the stage—it's back to the bushes for Marjorie Rambeau, unless her star changes and fortune smiles.

"FATE juggles Marjorie Rambeau's destiny as she would a set of silver bubbles."

BLANCHE YURKA named Miss Rambeau in her suit for divorce.



WILLARD MACK. Like most other actresses, Miss Rambeau married him—and divorced him.

A. E. ANSON, most recent fiance lost by the unlucky actress.

IAN KEITH, named in the divorce suit before the last.

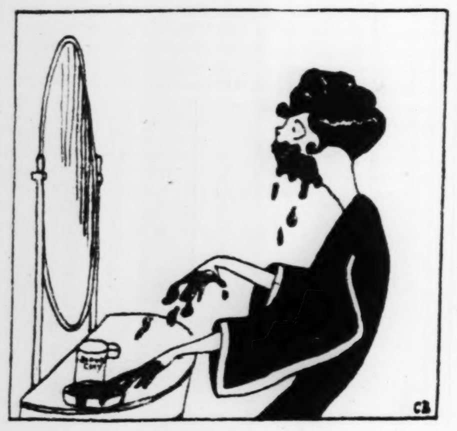
I'VE just been reading the most wonderful personal revelations of a prominent society woman, who explains how beautiful and how popular she is and tells of her success in the movies and politics, of her skill in gardening, high diving and airplane driving, of her luck in raising Airedale puppies and of how she's had three husbands, all of whom have died—and she says she owes it all to Merelymud Beauty Clay, and she wants other women the world over to know what this preparation has done for her.

Of course, after reading that touching story I went right out to get some, because I do want to have a skin you love to touch—not that I want anyone to touch me, but I want them to want to—and so I bought the clay and the druggist touched me for $3.



I'll confess that when I first put it on I didn't look much like a prospective politician or airplane driver. I looked more like the mud the politician is supposed to sling or the dirt heap that the airplane was wrecked on. The stuff hung from my nose and eyebrows and chin like stalagmites and stalag-staig—what do you call 'ems, that hang on the slimy roofs of caves. I was glad Artie wasn't there. Of course, he knows I don't need to use beauty clay, but I didn't want him to think I needed to use it or to think that I thought I needed to use it, or he might think I did need to use it. But I realized that I mustn't think even about that, for the directions on the bottle the clay came in said I must relax absolutely.

AND so I did. I just simply lay on the couch and tried to relax as fast and as hard as I could, but right when I was in the middle of it the doorbell rang. I didn't intend to answer it, but I happened to think that it might be a telegram or a special delivery letter, so I straightened out my nose and lifted my eyebrows and gave my chin a flip and opened the door, and then I remembered, just in time, that the directions had said that I mustn't disturb the clay mask by moving my lips.

So I just parted them gently and murmured: "Who shere? Who shere?"

"Laundryman," said the voice outside—and he started to open the door.

"Glub glub—mushn't do zhat," I said, in a voice rich with clay, "you'll hash a come anosher day."

"I can't," he answered, most inconsiderately. "If I can't have the laundry today I'll have to wait until next week. I'll wait while you fix it."

"I canth fish it," I explained, swallowing enough mud to fertilize a geranium plant. "I canth zhet it ready. I'm all mished up with mud."

"We don't mind mud," he answered cheerfully. "We take anything off of anything."

"You're rith about that," I answered with conviction. "Even butthons and collars and lace. But you'll hash a waith unthil next week," and I slammed the door on him, although I knew that every bit of table linen in the house was soiled and Artie didn't have a single clean shirt.

But I felt that I couldn't let those soiled shirts come between me and a beautiful face, so I flung myself down on the couch again, whispering tensely to myself: "I will relax, I will relax, I will relax," stiffening my whole body in the agony of effort. And then, just as I had gotten all worked up over it, the doorbell rang again.

"Who shere?" I called, without moving.

"Ice man!"

"Shet zhe ish down in zhe hall. I'll come get it asher while," I said.

"It'll melt and run all over everything!" he warned.

"Sho'll my clay."

And then the telephone rang, but I closed my eyes and clenched my teeth and went right on relaxing, for I realized I had to do it fast to make up for lost time.

It rang again, but I clutched the sides

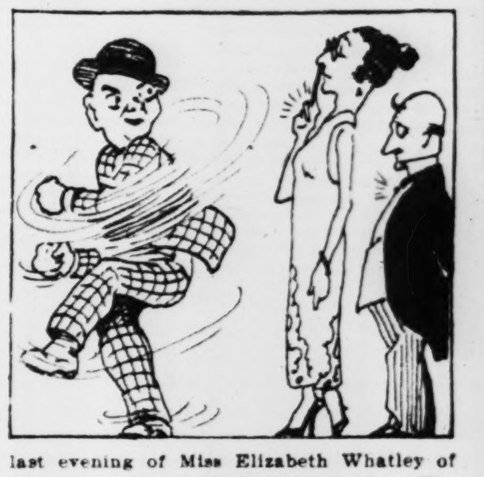
Pugs at Parties

By Elwood D. Ullman Jr.

THE news that two welterweight hopefuls mauled each other to a finish at an exclusive social event last weekend indicates that the best people are inclined to entertain with boxing matches where they formerly staged a two-round violin obligato or some other pastime which put the guests to sleep. As it was, only one guest went to sleep. There have been many fights at parties, but this was one of the first on record to be arranged beforehand.

The newspaper account was written by the sporting editor in collaboration with the editor of the society page. "A smart welterweight bout marked the coming-out party last evening of Miss Elizabeth Whatley of Riverdale Heights," they reported. "The contestants were Messrs. Groggy Solomon of Omaha and Jake (Slippery) Slatz of points east. Miss Whatley came out and Mr. Slatz was knocked out. The two lads will meet in a return engagement next Thursday afternoon at Mrs. Ashington's buffet supper. Forfeits have been posted with local fistic gentlemen. All guests are assured police protection in the event of an uprising."



Above this epitaph was printed a photograph of the debutante, flanked on one side by Mr. Solomon's classic profile, and on the other by Mr. Slatz'—not so classic, as the ear was slightly cauliflowered. It was hard to tell which of the trio was the honoree, but everybody supposed it was Mr. Solomon, as he wore the biggest grin.

UNACCUSTOMED as she was to promoting prizefights, Mrs. Whatley nevertheless managed very well by constructing a ring in the center of her Abyssinian room and arranged her Louis XVI tables around it.

At 7:30 the corridors were jammed by a buzzing mass of humanity, all talking over Mr. Slatz' chances with the Omaha Oilcan, and placing bets on the sly. Mrs. Whatley waltzes into the room in what she thinks will be a blaze of glory, but the guests are so concerned over the coming prizefight that she attracts about as much attention as another static eliminator.

"Shake a leg, Wilberforce," snaps Mrs. Whatley to her husband, who is trailing at a respectable distance, in readiness to obey orders. "Take that silly expression off your pan. You've been in society all your life, and one would think you've never seen a fight. Now, where's that Solomon person?"

"On deck!" sings a husky voice, and Mr. Solomon bounds nimbly into the room, followed by his trainer. Tilting his hat back on his head the Omaha Oilcan indulges in a little shadow boxing, while Mrs. Whatley surveys him through her lorgnette. A smile of approval gradually overspreads her rigid social features.

"Nice footwork, kid," she encourages, "nice footwork. I think I'll soak the family jewels on your beezer." She leisurely agitates her ostrich fan. "By the way, Mr. Solomon, have you met my husband? He's

WARMED UP to WIN

By Hermann B. Deutsch

Holy Joe, the Bookmaker, Welched With a Purpose on the $10 Bet of Little Fleabit, the Jockey. But Fleabit's Employer Knew More Than All the Railbirds. So, He Decided What to Do.

IF YOU would pass among the frequenters of the race track—of any race track—as an initiate, there are four expressions you must not use. Never say that you "bet" on a horse; tell them you "had" the horse. Let no one hear from your lips the words, "I won money," it must always be "I win money," even though you are referring to a successful wager of three seasons ago. Never describe a wager as an "even-money bet"; it must always be "evening mon y." And finally, never speak of a heavily backed horse as a favorite; as you value your standing among the Brethren of the Turf, call that horse the favoright.

Thus you might recognize at once, in Fleabit Corrigan, an initiate, even if he wasn't recognizable as much of anything while he stumbled wearily toward the living quarters of the Charnley barn at the New Orleans Fair Grounds. Fleabit bore all the earmarks of having happened to a holocaust, or something; tooth marks and finger marks, too. Just as he stood, he could have passed for one of those smudged newspaper cuts which bear the caption, "In the Wake of the Cyclone."

But by his speech you would have known him, even though the words that issued from his puffed lips were more than a trifle indistinct.

"I had Rompaway for evening money to place in the sixth, and I win," quoth Fleabit thickly by the way of explanation.

"You had 'im?" eagerly demanded Tad Beasley, thus addressed.

"I hope t' eat, I had 'im. He noses out the favoright for second money, too. And Holy Joe welches on me."

"Yeah? And then what?"

"I'll say an' then what! Then it was him an' me, an' I finished fifth."

"Git out!"

Whereupon Fleabit, who was only fourteen years old despite his renown as a race rider and his uncanny skill in the rating of thoroughbreds from barrier to judges' stand, sat himself down on a conveniently placed bale of prime alfalfa, and wept, finding therein balm for his bodily hurts and for the sting that spent rage had left in him. It was then that E. B. made his own presence in the stable known.

EVEN though you be no initiate among the Brethren of the Turf, you have heard of E. B. and the Keep-a-Hustling Stock Farm, which he owns. For one thing, Elton Beauregard Charnley has this unique distinction: he is the only native Kentuckian who ever achieved renown in the Kingdom of Bangtails without acquiring also the title of Cunnel, Majah or Jedge. He was simply E. B.; and among turfmen that name means much the same as the name of Einstein means in the field of physics.

You must picture a tall figure whose original harsh outlines have been mellowed a bit by the softening hand of time. But no fattiness, mind you, and no stoop. Add a pink countenance, always cleanly shaven, surmounted by a heavy mop of white hair, fine blue eyes, firm lips and a jaw whose square contours are still definite. Season the whole with a general air of kindliness and omit every last "you-all" and the other trappings of the stage Kentuckian. Then you have E. B.

It is quite true that the kindliness was not apparent as the tall man stood in the stable where he surveyed the wreck of his premier jockey.

"Fleabit," he remarked without heat—and without warmth—"would you mind going over that story again, please?"

Fleabit came up for air with a start, and Tad Beasley successfully performed the evolution which among the movie folks is known as a fade-out.

"Sir?" asked Fleabit.

"I said, would you mind going over the whole thing again, son?"

"N-n-nos'r."

"Well, let's have it."

"It wasn't nothing, sir. It was just me'n one of the other boys get in a argument."

"Hm-m-m! He must have been right handy with his fists, this other boy, to mark you up like he did. Big boy, was he?"

"N-n-not so very. I look a lot worse'n I feel, sir. See?" He stood up and limbered himself just to show there was life in him still. "See, I ain't hurt—much." Then he winced as a sudden stab of pain caught him unawares. He couldn't help the little cry that escaped him. Whereupon E. B. sat himself down on the bale of prime alfalfa the boy had quitted, and gathered the little bundle of mis'ry up in his big arms.

"Now, they ain't a mite of use you tryin' to fool the old man, son," he said gently. "Besides which I heard a smart of what you was a-tellin' Tad. You know I don't allow my boys to bet. I've told both you snickumfritzes that every time you had a leg up for me, on one of my horses, I was putting down a modest wager for you, didn't I? An' that I wouldn't stand for outside betting. Now, ain't that so?"

Fleabit nodded, the while he struggled heroically to dam a threatened deluge of tears.

"So now I want the straight of it," continued E. B.

Whereupon Fleabit recounted the sorrowful saga of his venture beyond the pale. Scooter Flynn, rider for Mister Perry Gordon, had approached him that morning, and had sworn by the name of the prophet's steed that Rompaway was a cinch in the sixth. Thus persuaded, Fleabit had commissioned Scooter to bet a couple of finnifs for him, with Holy Joe Trumble, "oral" bookmaker.

Rompaway had lived up to Scooter's advance notices of him, and Fleabit had therefore gone under the grand stand, after the seventh race was over, to collect. Then Holy Joe had deliberately welched on the bet, and Scooter backed up Holy Joe's claim by insisting he forgot to make the bet for Fleabit, offering that outraged youth back his original ten dollars, instead of the twenty to which he was justly entitled.

Fleabit had promptly taxed Holy Joe with his perfidy, adding the seven or seventeen deadly insults he could think of on the spur of the moment. That was all.

E. B. reached down and absently plucked a brown stem from the bale on which he was sitting. This wisp he placed between his teeth.

"I ain't saying exactly that you got what was coming to you, son," he remarked, "because it don't look no ways right to me for a hundred-and-fifty-pound man to go trouncin' on a little kid like you. And I ain't saying exactly I'm glad it happened either, though I won't deny but it kind of looks like the workings of a just Providence. Still, Trumble's a mighty funny implement to find in the hands of Providence, at that."

Fleabit wriggled uncomfortably. "I ain't gonna do it no more, sir," he promised.

"Reckon I'll do my best to help you keep your word, too," added E. B. grimly. Then his voice took on a note of puzzlement. "Still, I don't rightly understand the whole business," he continued. "It don't look like Trumble to stir up all such a rumpus for ten dollars. It don't, for a fact, now. Who'd you say put you up to this bet?"

"Scooter Flynn."

"Rides for Perry Gordon, you said?"

"Yes'r."

"Hm-m-m! Well, yes. That'd be about it. I didn't think that of Perry, for a fact, I didn't. Reckon Holy Joe was at the bottom of it, anyway. Well, sonny, it don't look like you left hardly a bean unspilled."

Fleabit deemed it prudent to preserve a thoroughgoing silence.

"Messy job, picking up beans," E. B. went on. "But it ought to be done. Ought to be done by the party that's responsible for the spill."

He set Fleabit down.

"Stand up and try to stretch yourself, son," he commanded.

Fleabit complied, grimacing painfully as racked and bruised muscles and joints protested vehemently against further ill usage.

"AND by tomorrow morning," commented E. B., "you'll be stiffened up like a board, and sore as the pointer pup that blundered into a beehive. You will so. Mm-m-m! Yes, sir, the light's a-shinin' in the dark places, sure enough. You probably don't understand it yet, do you? Well, I'll tell you. It might help the lesson to bite. Tomorrow afternoon's the Mermentau Handicap, with a two-thousand-dollar purse. There was just two horses had a chance to win that race, and that was my Emulator and Perry Gordon's big Perigord. Ain't that facts, son?"

"Yes'r," whispered Fleabit forlornly. He, too, was beginning to understand.

"And Emulator's that high-strung and sensitive, and at the same time hard-mouthed, that it takes about all you got in you to give him the ride he needs. Meaning to say likewise that none of these other boys hereabouts, that ain't used to him, could ride him like you can, either. So that, with you in the shape you're in, there'll be only one horse that figures to win the Mermentau Handicap, meaning Perigord. And Perry Gordon's jockey is the one that's touted you off to this bet, which is a plant, pure and simple. We-e-ell, maybe not so pure; but awfully simple, son. Holy Joe don't welch for any ten dollars lessen there's something bigger behind it. Now do you see what you've gone and done?"

Fleabit nodded miserably.

"Well, that's all right, then," E. B. said heartily. "You run upstairs to the loft and get Mother to put a couple of chunks of raw steak on your shining evening face where it'll do the most good. Tell her I'll be up d'rectly, to help tuck away some of the same, medium rare, where it'll do me the most good. I don't know but what if this'll learn you some sense I won't owe Holy Joe Trumble a heap over'n' above what I aim to pay him back, anyways."

It was later that evening after the two boys had been carefully tucked into bed, that E. B. discussed the matter more fully with Mother Charnley, who was properly sympathetic.

"You can't blame the little snickumfritzes so much," E. B. defended warmly. "Boys going to be boys, you know. And that man Trumble, now. He's back of all this. There'll be some heavy betting tomorrow on my Emulator, folks figuring him to be the favoright and all. Trumble's going to clean up. And I don't deny I'd like to have had that two-thousand-dollar purse about as well as the next one."

"Why don't you tell the stewards about it?"

"What could they do, Mother? It's all guesswork that I been telling you. And I reckon Fleabit must have told Trumble some things he never learned out of his lessons that you been teaching the boys, so Trumble'd use that for an excuse."

A moment of silence fell on the cozy little room.

"You know what'd be good—a real good cure for all this sort of thing?" E. B. asked wistfully. "I've wished a heap of times we could be fixed so's to build a sort of clubhouse for all the boys at the track. Nothing fancy, Mother. No psalm factory or anything. But lots of books with detective stories, and some pool tables and a gymnasium and games and things. They ain't no getting round it, that'd give the little tads something to do after dark, and the heaven knows they ain't a more desolate place on earth than a race track after supper time. Something like that'd keep the youngsters out of all kinds of mischief."

Mother Charnley agreed comfortably. "Yes, Father, that would be lovely. But it seems to me that no man ought to be allowed to beat a little boy, especially not one of our little boys."

"Oh, about Trumble. Yes, you're right. We'll have to give Trumble his needings. By the way, isn't that about ten o'clock? And don't I have to be out there on the track with the boys at five? Guess we better forget the cares that infest the day. Will you set the alarm clock, Mother?"

THERE were two outstanding features of the next day's racing card to occupy the interest and attention of the "talent," and in both features the name of E. B. figured prominently. The first, of course, was the fact that Perigord nosed out the heavily backed favorite, E. B.'s Emulator, in the Mermentau Handicap.

The second dealt with a big bay claiming plater, Canobean, who, for the fifth time in his career at the fair grounds, failed to unkink himself in time to finish in the money. Canobean, entered by the Delaney Stables in the sixth race, finished fourth over a distance of a mile and five furlongs. What gave the insiders a jolt was that E. B. Charnley, after Canobean had thus quite definitely proved himself worthless on a race track, should claim him for the full claiming price of $1500, when he probably might have bought him outright for less.

"Old Man E. B. must be eatin' it off the back of his hand, or something," remarked Blue Grass Billings.

"It's over my head like a circus tent," agreed Solly Gelbman. "What do you suppose ails Canobean?"

"He's just one of those unkinkable things," replied Blue Grass oracularly. "He's a slow starter, built so that he's got to run a mile or more before he gets warmed good and moving fast. Take today, and the rush he was making the last two eighths. He was moving faster'n any other horse on the field at the finish, but he was so far behind by the time he got started that there wasn't a chance to catch up."

"Maybe E. B. wants to save him for the long features—two miles and that stuff?"

"Nix. They tried him in a two-mile race once, and he died in the stretch. Hain't got two whole good miles in his whole muscle-bound, unkinkable frame. They've given him five starts at different distances now. He's got about six furlougs of real speed in him, and it takes him a mile to get warmed up to it. But at a mile and six furlongs he's too late getting started; at two miles he's done shot his bolt; and at any distance less'n a mile he can't even get started at all."

BLUE GRASS' opinion was pretty generally shared among the wise ones. For once E. B. had evidently been left at the post. Even Holy Joe Trumble could not keep from taking a dig at the old Kentuckian, of whom, as a rule, he stood rather in awe.

"When you going to start Canobean?" Trumble asked one day, smiling.

"Right soon, I reckon," E. B. replied mildly. "He seems to be shapin' well."

"That ain't what the railbirds tell me."

"We-e-ell, Trumble, when you get to be my age, you'll maybe learn that the railbirds didn't write all the books. There's one or two things even some of the railbirds ain't found out yet."

"All right, E. B., let it go at that. What distance are you going to try him at this time?"

"Six furlongs, I was thinking of."

"Six furlongs! Why, that oat hound don't start to run until after a mile. You start him at six furlongs and he'll get mixed up with the finish of the next race."

"So?"

"'Course he will—if he's lucky and gets away to a good start. If he don't do that, he won't be finished by even then."

"We-e-ell, you may be right. I don't aim to have folks think I know it all."

"Ouch! What a dirty crack! Meaning to say I do, eh? Well, I tell you what, E. B. When you do start Canobean at six furlongs, don't patronize the other books. I'll give you some real sure-'nough odds, or let you take an' write your own ticket. So be a good egg and do your betting with me that race, will you?"

It Was a Great Race, After the Big Horse Canobean Bolted a Mile Down the Track and Came Back to the Barrier. And the Judges, Somewhat Dubious, Had a Pleasant Surprise.

"Thank you, Trumble," replied E. B. equably. "Since you put it that way, don't be surprised if I take you at your word."

Trumble laughed uproariously as he retailed the conversation to his intimates later. They, too, appreciated the jest, and, seeking out E. B., asked him to let them in on the melon when it was ripe. E. B. took the baiting in good part; so much so that the bookmakers set their clockers to watching Canobean's exercise sprints. After all, you couldn't tell what E. B. might have up his sleeve. But the reports of the clockers were distinctly reassuring.

"Canobean does the first mile in two weeks and the next six lengths in close to the track record. After that his bolt's done shot and they pretty near have to load him in a van and haul him back to the stable," ran these reports.

THUS, on the day when E. B. entered his unkinkable bay for a six-furlong race, he was besieged by a merry crowd who offered him unthinkable odds. But the big horseman quite calmly singled out Holy Joe Trumble.

"What odds did you say, Trumble?" he inquired mildly.

"Any odds, E. B. Fifty to one if you want it."

"Well, that'll be nice. Not afraid of a big bet, are you?"

"Not on Canobean at six furlongs. Bring on the mint, and anything I can't cover I can get plenty help for."

"Oh, I wasn't thinking of betting more than three hundred dollars. That's a smart of money, though. Calls for fifteen thousand if Canobean wins, at fifty to one."

"Right here," smiled Trumble, "I can get a dozen men who'd pay me a good percentage for the privilege of being allowed to underwrite that bet. Make out your ticket, E. B. Three hundred will be all right, and so will three thousand. Got a blank?"

E. B. had a blank. For be it known that betting has been purified on Louisiana race tracks by solemn state law. In the old days the bookmakers wrote out the tickets and handed them to the bettors. Thus they made book, and making book is now forbidden by the statute. As such things are conducted today, it is the bettor who writes out the ticket, which he hands to the bookmaker. Thus the matter becomes a private transaction between gentlemen, and the bookmaker, instead of making book, is merely "oralizing." The law does not forbid the making of private bets between friends, and the list of any oralizer's friends may be found in the reports of the census takers.

Taking a blank card, E. B. scrawled upon it the words: "Canobean, $15,000-$300 (1) E. B. Charnley," and handed the memorandum, together with three one-hundred-dollar bills, to Holy Joe, who was happily profuse in his thanks to the other party to this strictly oral transaction.

"It's a little late for Santa Claus," he observed, "but much obliged to you, E. B., just the same."

E. B. strode placidly away to the paddock, into which the horses were just being led. As he reached the inclosure, a buzzer shrilled. Jockeye and uniformed track valets appeared from their guarded quarters, the jockeys swaggering a bit in the consciousness of immaculate silks and the critically admiring regard of the multitude, close-packed about the chicken-wire screening that fenced off the crowd. Carefully folded blankets, number cloths, weight pads and finally the light racing saddles were deftly placed, adjusted and fastened.

"YOU know what to do?" E. B. asked casually of little Fleabit, glowing in silks of carmine and white.

Fleabit nodded.

Again the buzzer shrilled a warning.

"Everybody up!" ordered the paddock official.

E. B. stopped and cupped his two big hands. Fleabit rested his left heel lightly in the cup and was almost flung into the saddle. The uniformed valet handed him the braided leather bat and reins, which he knotted carefully. Distantly, from the judges' stand, came the silvery summons of the bugle.

A scarlet-coated parade leader, mounted on a beautifully pied pony, led the procession single file out of the paddock and to the track where they would be reviewed by the judges, according to ancient custom, before being led to the barrier for the start. It was an old story to the "talent," but none the less they crowded forward into two solid walls to watch the parade from paddock to track gate. Between these living walls the horses minced nervously or ambled sedately according to their divers dispositions. Nobody knew exactly how it happened. Somewhere someone suddenly opened a folded newspaper as the horses filed by. One of them shied violently. The crowd suddenly swerved away, thus adding to the confusion. Jockeys, using the full power of their muscular wrists, gentled the horses down—all but one.

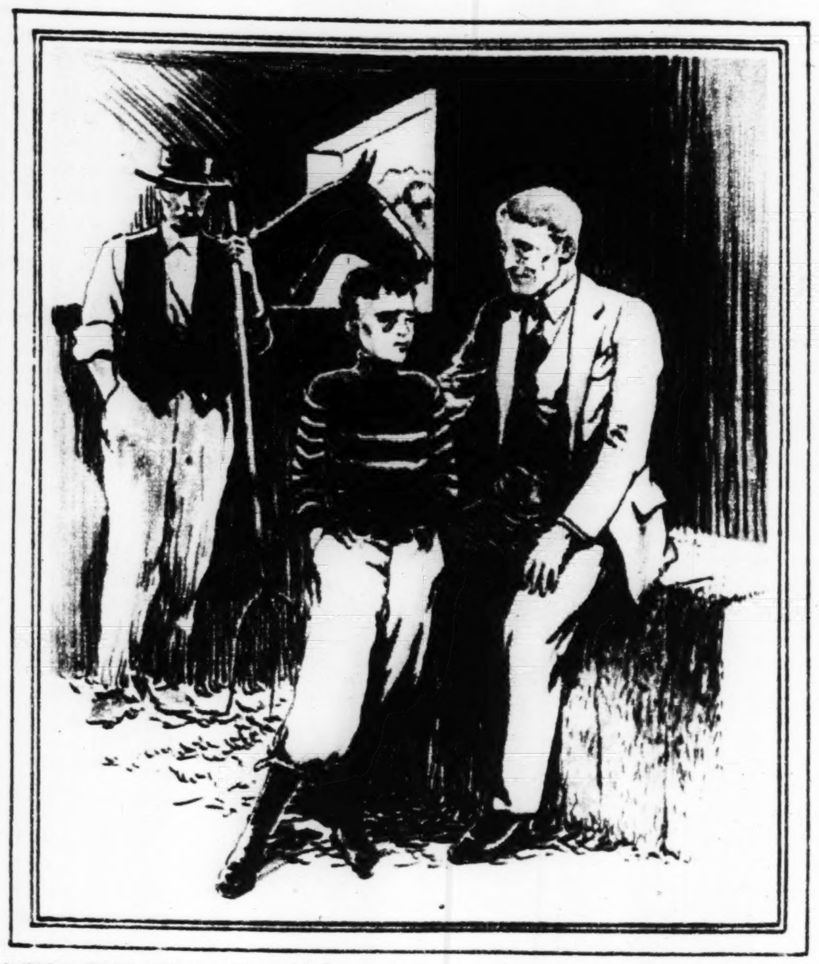
THAT one was Canobean. Shying, rocketing from side to side, ears laid back flat, he suddenly bolted down the track away from the rest, and dashed off on a wild gallop of his own. Standing in the stirrups, Jockey Corrigan could be seen sawing the bit in what was evidently a desperate attempt to halt the runaway. But Canobean would not be gainsaid. A full mile he ran, bringing up only when he reached the barrier, where the other entries in the race were waiting for the start.

"E. B. better let you run his sewing machine instead of his horses, Corrigan, if that's the best you can do," remarked the official starter with emphasis. "Bring 'em up now—slow. Jerry, turn that big gray the right way. Come in, Flynn, bring your—say, d'ye want me to set you down? Bring that . . ."

With a taut "Whang!" powerful springs shot the barrier up, and the jockeys, gathering their respective mounts into their laps, flung them forward and away.



"'YOU RUN UPSTAIRS to the loft and get mother to put a couple of chunks of raw meat on your shining evening face where it'll do the most good.'"

The far-off grand stand crowds voiced the roar with which the start of every race is greeted, but the roar came muffled across the wide green infield to the riders. And, anyway, the real drama was enacted under the grand stand in the Palm Garden, where Holy Joe Trumble, in color a delicate green, splotched here and there with yellow, was counting out fifteen thousand dollars. For Canobean, thoroughly unkinked, off to a magnificent start, had kicked clotted dirt from the soft track back at the other horses with every drive of his powerful legs, and was never headed. For the six furlongs of that race he was the fastest-moving horse on the track!

There was a frosty tinge to E. B.'s eyes as he came around to collect.

"Lots of witnesses, Trumble," he said in tones so low that only the oralizer heard. "Plenty of people around to make sure that you didn't watch on this like you did on that ten-dollar bet with little Fleabit. Oh, yes, I knew what it was all about. Mighty few things about a race track an old fellow like me don't get to hear sooner or later, if he keeps his ears open and his mouth shut. Even learns how to unkink an unkinkable horse. And what he don't hear or see he can sometimes figure out. Er—yes—thank you, Trumble. This here'll do right nicely."

"IF IT was anybody but old E. B.," said the presiding judge, "I'd say investigate. But that old fellow's as straight as they make 'em. Yes, sir! And you heard what Chats Mason said when we talked to him just now. Every horse in the race shied as they were being led out of the paddock because some fool opened a newspaper, and little Corrigan evidently wasn't strong enough to hold that big Canobean. That's a powerful horse, you know."

"Still, Charnley won a lot of money on the race, didn't he?" worried one of the two associate judges. "They tell me he got fifty to one from Trumble for three hundred dollars. That makes fifteen thousand he cleans up. I honestly think it's our duty to look into—"

A commotion at the door of the little glass-sided kiosk interrupted the conversation. The superintendent of the grounds broke in, careless of rule and defiant of all custom. He was waving a sheaf of bills of large denomination.

"Say, judges, wha'd you think of this?" he gasped, out of breath. "Hadn't we ought to make some kind of public announcement? Old E. B. Charnley just comes up to me and donates fifteen thousand dollars to build a free clubhouse and gymnasium for the boys and jockeys at the fair grounds."

the desolate-looking gentleman with the monocle."

"No, I ain't," replies the Oilcan, "but I've met Battling O'Dowd and Mike Shannon. Cleaned 'em both. I'll be glad to meet your husband, or any other guy who can make 145 pounds." The Oilcan approaches Mr. Whatley, gives him a professional scrutiny and feels his biceps. Observing the monocle, Mr. Solomon remarks that Mr. Whatley has lost one-half of his windshield and suggests a visit to an optimist.

"Shall we promenade, Mr. Oilcan?" asks the hostess, offering her arm. They negotiate the conservatory, with the trainer following like the next installment.

"What's the trick?" demands the Oilcan in a hoarse whisper.

"They always take an excursion before they don the feedbag," explains the trainer. "Tow her around the hall a couple of laps."

"What's the game—to coax up an appetite?"

"Naw, you sap—road work."

AT THIS juncture, Mrs. Ashington, the social leader, sails into the room on the arm of Slippery Slatz, the Brooklyn Badger. Observing each other, the pugilists turn to their companions and beg to be excused, as they would like to sock each other on the jaw. However, the exhibition contest is thwarted by the appearance of the butler.

This gentleman waddles to the center of the floor and clears his throat.

"Supper is distributed," he announces in dignified tones.

The Brooklyn Badger is seated at one end of the table and the Omaha Oilcan at the other. The preliminary battle is a plate of soup. From time to time Mr. Solomon is tempted to pelt Mr. Slatz with a Vienna roll, but is prevented by his trainer. The dinner proceeds with more or less smoothness until the last course is devoured. Whereupon Mrs. Whatley nudges her husband to get up and make the announcement, but Mr. Whatley points to the gravy on his vest, so she gets up and makes it herself.

"LADIES and gents!" she bellows through her cupped and jeweled hands, "the feature scrap this evening is an eight-round, no decision boxing contest between Slippery Slatz, at this table"—indicating him with her ostrich fan—"and Groggy Solomon, who will be up from the cellar at any moment." The pugilists appear, bow deeply, and then scrape their feet on the hardwood floor in deadly earnest.

They clamber through the ropes, where the referee coughs delicately and performs the introductory ceremonies.

"Mr. Solomon, Mr. Slatz; Mr. Slatz, Mr. Solomon."

"I ain't twins!" growls the Oilcan, leading with his left. Having mingled with the guests, the fighters mix with each other. A fast clip to the chin spills the Brooklyn Badger to the canvas.

"That-a-time, Mr. Solomon!" screams Mrs. Whatley shrilly. "Paste him again! Remember—I've got my opera diamonds on your beak. Don't be afraid of his rabbit-punch, and follow through your swings. Use the right!"

"He couldn't paste nothin'!" yells Mrs. Ashington, forgetting her imported accent. "Smash him, Badger, smash his funny face even funnier. Change his geography, kid!"

Mrs. Whatley wheels on her neighbor indignantly. "My dear Mrs. Ashington," she says coldly, "I can't have you insulting my guests."

"My deepest apologies, dear Mrs. Whatley," replies Mrs. Ashington humbly. "It was an oversight on my part . . . Look! There they go! Oh, you Badger! Slap that bandy-shanked buffoon! Run him around the canvas, kiddo; you got him dizzy. Wow! Right in the peepers! I guess that puts your boy asleep, Mrs. Whatley," she continues in triumph. "Have the orchestra play a lullaby."

The hostess gazes tensely while Mr. Solomon slowly regains his feet. The crowd gives him a lusty cheer as he plows his left to the Badger's physiognomy.

"Nice work, Oilcan," says Mrs. Whatley with relief. "I knew you wouldn't take a nap this early in the evening." Turning to her neighbor—"Four prizefights a week are proving too much excitement for an old buzzard like me, Mrs. Ashington. I've got a good mind to lay off of society."

"Yeh," jeers Mrs. Ashington, "that's what you've been saying for 56 years."

An unshaven gentleman in an ill-fitting Tuxedo approaches the hostess, thrusts out his jaw and says brusquely: "Are youse Mrs. Whatley?"

"I am," replies the hostess with dignity.

"Well, I'm Mike Hannigan, delivery man for Hogan's meat market. I just brung over your three pounds of hamburger. Listen, will you gimme odds on Slatz? I'll stake my delivery truck against your limousine that the Brooklyn bruiser lasts the limit."

Two or three debutantes within hearing faint away and have to be revived by physicians.

"I DECLARE, Mrs. Ashington," resumes the puffing hostess, "every time I hear the dinner bell I give a nervous start. I think it's the gong for another prizefight." She fans herself with a salad plate.

"But, my dear, you can't disappoint me and turn down my heavyweight bout for May the tenth. I'm reserving a ringside seat."

Suddenly there is a shriek from the assembled debutantes, patrons and patronesses, and Mr. Solomon stows away Mr. Slatz with a terrific crash to the collarbone. To save Slatz from further punishment, his trainer tosses in his napkin. This concludes the evening's social whirl.

The guests leap over the tables, seize their hats and coats, and file past the hostess to depart.

"Clever footwork."

"Powerful swing; excellent dumplings."

Clinging to the arm of the triumphant Mr. Solomon, Mrs. Whatley beams her happiness. But suddenly she commences to weep. "My daughter!" she wails. "I clean forgot. This was to be her coming-out party and she wasn't even here."

"I NEGLECTED to tell you, Grenadine," chimes in Mr. Whatley, "that Elizabeth had another engagement and couldn't come. But what's the difference? I haven't seen her in six years, anyhow."

"N-nobody met her," whimpers Mrs. Whatley. "And on the night of her debut."

"Don't weep, lady," consoles Mr. Solomon. "She probably knows enough guys; and, anyhow, I met her once."

"Honest, Mr. Solomon?" says Mrs. Whatley, staying her handkerchief. "You ain't kidding an old woman?"

"I ain't," says Solomon solemnly. "It was at the Hoofington ball. The night I fit Kid O'Toole. It was nip an' tuck all the way, savvy? And in the tenth round I steps in and"——

"Wonderful girl, our daughter," interrupts Mrs. Whatley. "Educated at Mrs. Giddingham's School for Girls."

"I had a cousin," recalls the Oilcan, "who was brung up in Latonia Park."

"You saphead," hisses his trainer, "that's a race track."

And so ended Miss Whatley's coming-out party. It was too bad she wasn't there, but the party was a knock-out.

THE COVER

THE portrait of General Sir David Dundas which is reproduced upon the cover of this issue of the Post-Dispatch Magazine is from the Charles Parsons collection, now owned by Washington University and being shown at the City Art Museum, through the courtesy of which it is reproduced here. Sir Henry Raeburn, born at Edinburgh, March 4, 1758, was early orphaned and was apprenticed to a goldsmith. He began his career in art by painting miniatures and, later, portraits. Self-taught, he was master of a style peculiarly his own and so strongly individual that when in succeeding years he traveled to Italy, the visit to the pictures of the great masters left no impress upon it. He was starting to Italy when he visited the studio of Sir Joshua Reynolds in London, just after the "Age of Innocence" was completed, and Reynolds, appreciating the work of the Scotchman, offered to pay his expenses to Italy if need be. That was not needed. Raeburn had married a widow, 12 years older than himself, of ample fortune. Their marriage was happy.

THE artist was the friend of Sir Walter Scott and, like the great novelist's, his later years were clouded by financial reverses. His brother Henry, who had been a father to him, had embarked in a mercantile venture which failed and carried away the painter's fortune. That was in 1808. In 1810 Raeburn turned toward London as a possible future home. But Sir Thomas Lawrence, who may have feared a rival, discouraged him and he continued in the North.

Yet he was not without honor there, and the strength of his portraiture won final recognition and knighthood from George IV. In the spring of his last year Raeburn went for a tour of the highlands with Sir Walter Scott and Miss Edgeworth. While painting he grew dizzy and blinded. It was near the end. On July 8, 1823, he died.

The portrait of General Sir David Dundas is characteristic in its strength. The painter has presented in the long narrow finely modeled face of his sitter the characteristics of patrician breeding. There is a fine realization of the weathered flesh, of the clear far-seeing blue eyes, of the wisps of long white hair, as the aged soldier sits for his portrait in full regimentals.—H. R. B.

of the couch and lay rigid, whispering to myself: "Relax, relax!! Perhaps the message may be important. Relax! Relax! Relax! Perhaps Artie's been in an accident. Relax! Relax! Perhaps he's been taken sick. Relax! Perhaps he's found that he has to leave town suddenly. Relax! Relax! Perhaps he wants to come home to lunch."

That last thought sent me to the phone. I was right. He did want to come home.

"I shant shzet you lunsh today, gooby!" I said briefly—and was going to hang up, but he managed to say: "What's the matter with you? Haven't you swallowed those biscuits you baked for breakfast yet?"

"Zshish ishn't bishcuits," I said haughtily. "Ish something I gosh oush of a bottle!"

"What!" he exclaimed. "I'm coming right home!"

"No, no, Arshie," I cried. "You mushn't. You mushn't. You mushn't. I shan't she you ish you do. I oon't iesh you in she housh." And in my agony I swabbed the end of my nose.

"Where'd you get it?" he demanded.

"I shan't shell you, Arshie," I said playfully. "I shan't shell you. Please donth shry to find out my shecret!"

But he hung up the receiver and wouldn't tell me whether he was coming or not. And then the telephone rang again. It was the new lady in the flat below and she said the water from the ice had dripped through and ruined her ceiling and that I'd have to pay to have it fixed! And then the doorbell rang!

I WAS so furious then that I didn't care who saw me! I knew that my nose had twisted to one side and that there was a funny knob on one cheek, and that altogether I looked like a relief map of a lost continent, but anyway I just simply flung the door open and said: "Who shere?"

"The rent collector," said the man facing me.

And then I felt my mouth dropping even further. The knob on my cheek wibble-wobbled, and before I knew it my whole countenance was moving like a landslide!

The collector looked at me for a moment and then, dropping his little book, he turned and ran.

Artie says he sees some use in beauty clay, anyway.

A Machine Which Shaves You

WE ARE living in the age of machinery, which has done wonderful things for the convenience and comfort of us all. But perhaps even the science of mechanics can be pushed too far. Just consider the automaton now on exhibition in a London theater. The invention of Professor John Repjie, the figure can play a piano when the current from the storage batteries and coils is turned on. Or, if an adjustment is made inside the figure, it will shave a man with a safety razor.

Most of us probably would rather undergo the tune than the shave. It is no trouble at all to think of musical compositions which might be adapted to the temperament of this performer. For example, there is "The March of the Wooden Soldiers," from Chauve Souris. And Victor Herbert years ago wrote one called "The March of the Toys." Such compositions probably would sound better than a nocturne of Chopin.

The automaton's ability to shave a man has been proven, but London barbers are not alarmed. It requires some courage to get a shave in this way, even when a safety razor is wielded. The figure stares into space blankly, as indifferent to the customer's grunts or wriggles as a living barber might be. But there is the advantage of getting your shave without any conversation.

The Outline of the Arts By H. G. WELLS

V.—Gothic Architecture and Mediaeval Music

Gothic Art Followed the Christians in Spain as They Drove the Moors Back From Province After Province. Disappearance and Reappearance of Imitation in Art Follow Each Other in Cycles. Music Developed Rapidly in Days of Crusades.

THE new book and idea religions, Christianity and Islam, had this in common: they sought to reach the mind of everyone. The people had to be got together into the place of worship and sacrifice; they had to be reminded of prayer and belief. So Islamic architecture shot up its most delicate flower, the minaret, from which the people could be called and exhorted.

Christianity could no longer do with the small dark temple of the older gods; churches had to be built big, to hold all the believers in the countryside. And the people had to be summoned from the bell tower, the campanile. The type of the imperial temple was abandoned; the need for a roomy building turned the Christian architects to the model of the Roman law courts, the basilicas.

It is almost impossible in the space at our disposal to trace the wide variations of "Romanesque" as it merged into Byzantine art to the east and was modified by Norman, Saxon and Frank. But the phase of stability under Charlemagne gathered together the artistic forces of Western Europe under his protection and it is in such buildings as the Cathedral of Aix-la-Chapelle that the Romanesque style reaches its most distinctive expression.

A parallel, but not as complete a disappearance of the modeled reality which we have noted in Byzantine and Arabic art, went on in Western Europe in these insecure ages. The sculptor who could deal vigorously with the poses of man or beast was no longer to be found on earth west of India.

Painting had taken refuge in the monasteries. The illumination of books had been carried to high levels in the Roman and Hellenic empires and it never altogether died out. The coming and going of the Christian monks kept it alive and freshened it by an exchange of methods and ideas.

Gargoyle, Notre Dame, Paris.

The Irish monasteries were producing manuscripts of great beauty as early as the seventh century. The Book of Kells, a copy of the Gospels, in Trinity College, Dublin, is of this date. Celtic work is curiously parallel to early Arabic work in its decorative suppression of living forms. Its color and design are marvelous, its drawing contemptible. Celtic influences mingled with classical and Byzantine in the artistic revival at the court of Charlemagne. There the illuminated MS. loaded with gold rose to its most brilliant levels.

A disposition to representative art and outline figures appears rebelliously in some of the English and Norman works and presently breaks away toward miniature pictures. But the gradual deterioration of MS. illumination and the disappearance of imitatives, due to the diversion of artistic energy to other media, became marked only in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries.

A CERTAIN architectural and artistic development marks the phases in the history of Christianity from the Romanesque period to the age of doubt and declining faith of which Frederick II was the precursor. There was a great outbreak of cathedral building in the eleventh and twelfth centuries and a rapid development of Western Romanesque architecture into what is called in the stricter sense, Gothic.

The steep roof of the Romanesque towers elongated and became a spire; the cross-grained vaulted roof was introduced and the pointed arch—which had already prevailed in Arabic art for 200 years or more—swept away the rounded arch. With these features came a great development and elaboration of windows—and of stained glass.

It was probably the growth and enrichment of the monastic orders that released the flow of artistic energy that gave the world the Church of Notre Dame in Paris, for example; the Cathedral of Chartres, Amiens Cathedral, the magnificent beginning of Beauvais. And for several centuries the Gothic impulse was sustained.

In the thirteenth century the traceried window was reaching its highest degree of development. In the fourteenth, Gothic became for a time exuberant and then in reaction severe. The English struck out a line of their own in the high, austere "Perpendicular." On large areas of Northern and Eastern Germany, where building stone was rare or inaccessible, the Gothic forms took on a new quality with the use of brick. With the onset of the fifteenth century Gothic architecture waned. The great days of the church in Europe were past and new social conditions had to express themselves in novel forms. In some towns of Belgium and Holland we still have the cathedral incomplete and beside it some great municipal building which robbed the church of its constructive resources. In Ypres, for example, before the destruction of the war, the great Cloth Hall completely overshadowed the cathedral.

IN SPAIN the Gothic followed the Christians as province by province they won back the peninsula from the Moors. The Moresque, Arabic and the Spanish Gothic developed each in its own confines. In Seville, close to the Moresque palace of the Alcazar, rises a great Gothic cathedral, whose towering interior seems to be exulting in somber triumph over the conquered conquerors.

The Gothic never penetrated deeply into Italy. The most prominent example is Milan Cathedral. But Italy, during the Gothic period in Western Europe, was a battleground of ancient traditions and conflicting styles. The Byzantine St. Mark's at Venice balances the Gothic of Milan Cathedral and Norman and Saracen mingle their spirit with the Roman in such buildings as the cathedral at Amalfi. Notably beautiful are the Cathedral and Campanile at Pisa, a most expressive group of Italian buildings of about the twelfth century.

Throughout the Gothic period the passion for representative art so strong in both Aryan and Hamitic peoples is very evidently struggling against the instinctive disposition to suppress that appeared in the Western world after the first prevalence of Christianity and Islam.

There was, it must be understood, no expressed hostility to representative art among the Christians. Classical Roman painting died out in the Catacombs and adorned Christian graves. A certain amount of mural painting of inferior quality struggled on through the Middle Ages and increased in the tenth and eleventh centuries.

WITH increased security came a growing desire to beautify churches and monastic buildings. Painting spread from the cramped work of the illuminator to walls and modern panels. The stiff saints became more flexible, backgrounds became visible behind them and gave the painter scope for naturalistic detail. The painted panel was the ancestor of the independent picture.

For a time, in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, France and Germany were ahead of Italy in this revival of pictorial art. Simultaneously the stonemason was infusing his laborious decoration of the Gothic building with an increasing animation and realism. He turned the waterspout into a grimacing gargoyle; he put faces and figures upon capital and pinnacle; he brought the sculptured saint from relief into solidity.

Here also Germany led. This creeping back of imitation is the most interesting general fact in the artistic history of the Middle Ages.

We have already noted a similar previous disappearance and reappearance of imitation in human history. The later Paleolithic man carved and drew realities with freedom and vigor, but the early Neolithic man has left us neither drawings nor carvings of living things. Plastic art only reappeared with the bronze age.

Exactly the same thing, on a larger scale, happened between the great days of the Roman Empire and the Middle Ages, not only under Christianity but under Islam. There has never been a full and satisfactory explanation of these alternations. Art retreated from reality and devoted itself to formal elaboration.

Since then there has been another great wave of vivid imitativeness, culminating perhaps a little while ago. Both pictures and sculpture were, generally speaking, more fully imitative and representative, less symbolical and indicative, 50 years ago than they are now. Here we can offer no satisfactory explanation for these waves in the general artistic impulse, these alternations of exultant, intensely rendered reality with aloofness and austerity.

It is as if excessive realism, excessive delight in the body and in movement and excitement, and circumstantial detail, produced at last reaction and an instinctive resort to abstraction or formality.

IN THE days of the Crusaders very great changes were happening to music. Hitherto there had been no harmony recognized; music had been a simple affair of rhythm and melody; now began an entirely new development, first a primitive part singing and then the complication of more and more elaborately interwoven melodies. The different voices were made to sing different airs simultaneously which harmonized. Concurrently a notation was evolved capable of expressing and recording the new polyphonic music. The notation was as necessary to the free development of music as writing was to the appearance of a growing literature.

It would seem that the first beginnings of this re-making of music were in Western Europe and probably in Wales and the English midlands. For there it is that we have the first recorded cases of part singing. It may have begun as early as the ninth century; it was certainly established and practiced by the end of the twelfth century.

A fine piece of English part writing dating from about 1240 is still extant. It is the rota, "Summer is i-cummen in." It was probably written by John of Fornsete, a Reading monk, and, says Sir W. H. Hadow, "its part writing is astonishingly sound and satisfying and it can be heard with great pleasure at the present day. . . . It is the first voice in the development of our Western art which can still speak to us in friendly and familiar accents."

Those days of wandering adventurers were also days of wandering music. The Troubadours went from castle to castle; there were many wandering minstrels, and the new conception of harmony spread through France and Italy and into Central Europe.

MOST of the compositions were unaccompanied vocal polyphony; the development of instrumentation came later with the lute, the virginal, the viol and the greater use and range of the organ as the skill of organ builders increased.

The castle and court had yet to reach such a pitch of luxury and elaboration as was necessary for the production of more than mainly vocal and mainly popular secular mus chief laboratories were at fir great monastic cathedral choirs. T the innovating choir masters str against a very strong conservati ligiosity and struggled far.

The dominant form of the p mainly vocal harmony was the m rigal. Palestrina (1526-1594), Italian composer, was the culmin master of this period of choral m

In the sixteenth century the lu makers were already perfecting violin, the modern organ was be evolved, new social conditions w arising, new feelings were seeking pression, and new methods were ing developed that were to render p sible a still broader type of mu composition in which instrumentatio was to play the greater part.

MISS STREBEIGH

who has the coloring of a "strawberry blonde," blue eyes, delicate fair skin and red-gold hair, is particularly charming in this smart sports costume of a light but brilliant green.

Miss BARBARA STREBEIGH daughter of Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte points out that the care of the skin is an important social duty

JUST a year and a half ago, Miss Barbara Strebeigh made her bow to Society. She adored the deluge of parties that followed almost as much as she adores the out-of-doors.

But whether in the formal atmosphere of her mother's New York drawing room, on a steamer de luxe bound for Europe or engaging in the sports she loves so well, Barbara Strebeigh takes those subtle pains with her toilet that the well-born girl is taught to know.

"THERE is one personal obligation" she says, "that follows a girl wherever she goes—the care of her skin. With Pond's Two Creams this is easily and simply accomplished. Swiftly and surely they work to keep the skin exquisite. That is why their use has become a habit with the girls of the younger set."

During the day, when your skin needs cleansing, particularly after exposure, apply Pond's Cold Cream. Leave it on a few moments so that its pure oils may penetrate every pore. Wipe off cream and dirt and repeat the process, finishing with a dash of cold water. At night give your skin this same cleansing. If it is dry pat on more Pond's Cold Cream and leave until morning.

After every such cleansing except the bedtime one, apply Pond's Vanishing Cream to your skin. It gives you a soft, even finish, a freshened, velvety look—and your powder goes on better and stays longer with this delicate Cream as a base. Furthermore Pond's Vanishing Cream acts as a protection against weather, dust and soot. The Pond's Extract Company, 131 Hudson Street, New York City.

"MY FOUR-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER was afflicted with styes; her hair was thin and brittle, her lips pale. When I brought home my Fleischmann's Yeast she would eat some. The styes disappeared, her hair is now thick, her lips have a good color, and she has a beautiful complexion. Both in 1923 and 1924 she won the silver cup in baby parades held in Utica."

"I AM A GIRL OF SEVENTEEN. I began to get worried when my skin lost its freshness. I was desperate. One day in school a friend offered me one of her Fleischmann's Yeast sandwiches, which she told me were tasty and beneficial. I began to eat Yeast sandwiches. In two weeks I was feeling better; in about three my skin had regained its natural freshness. Now, I feel and look as a girl of seventeen should. The credit is all due to Fleischmann's Yeast."
Anna Waldron, Bloomfield, N. J.

Now–
Life At Its Best

People typical of thousands who conquered their ills—found youthful energy, superb vitality—by eating one simple food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion — clear the skin — banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, nibbled from the cake. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-908, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion—clears the skin—banishes constipation. Eat 2 or 3 cakes regularly every day before meals.

"AFTER THE WORLD WAR, I returned home with health greatly impaired. I suffered from numerous ailments, including constipation. One day by chance I saw Yeast cakes served in a restaurant. I decided to try them. I soon noticed I was getting back my appetite and my constipation was leaving me. I am now feeling fine—due to Fleischmann's Yeast." L. H. Kleeber, St. Louis, Mo.

"I WAS BOTHERED WITH CONSTIPATION. I was also troubled with indigestion, accompanied by disagreeable skin eruptions. I am very grateful to the friend who recommended Fleischmann's Yeast. I took three cakes a day faithfully. The results were amazing. My digestive troubles vanished. My complexion cleared. I can now eat all the sweets I wish." Alma L. Brothers, Norfolk, Va.

"The delicious, cooling and refreshing flavor of the FRESH FRUIT"

DIFFERENT . . perfect . . it's the same story everywhere!

From Colorado to Connecticut, from Florida to Maine, they write to us—the women who have been using Royal Fruit Gelatin—to tell us how delighted they are with it, how different it is from anything else.

"A delicious flavor not found in any other gelatin I have tried," writes an enthusiast from Ohio. "The good fruit taste which other gelatins lack," says a Pennsylvania woman.

89% emphasize the real fresh fruit taste as something entirely new.

99% specially mark its "fruity taste and fragrance" . . how delightful, how refreshing, how perfectly delicious they are!

IT'S obvious that these marvelous flavors come only from the fresh fruits. From lemons and oranges, or from the rich, ripe juices of strawberries, raspberries, cherries, these delicious flavors are made, and combined with the finest gelatin.

Pure, perfect gelatin, neutral to taste and smell (pure gelatin has neither), does not mar the fresh fruit flavor in any way. No "synthetics" or artificial flavors are ever used.

Such purity is especially essential in gelatin, because of its value in the diet of children. You know you are safe with Royal Fruit Gelatin, made by the same standards, marked with the same seal of merit, that you have known and used for years. We are proud to offer it to our Royal Baking Powder friends, who write us . . "Like the Baking Powder, it's A1!"

Buy some for yourself. Note its fruity fragrance when you first break the package, when you pour on the boiling water . . You'll be delighted with it from start to finish. There are five delicious flavors.

"You don't have to guess the flavor — you know it at once."

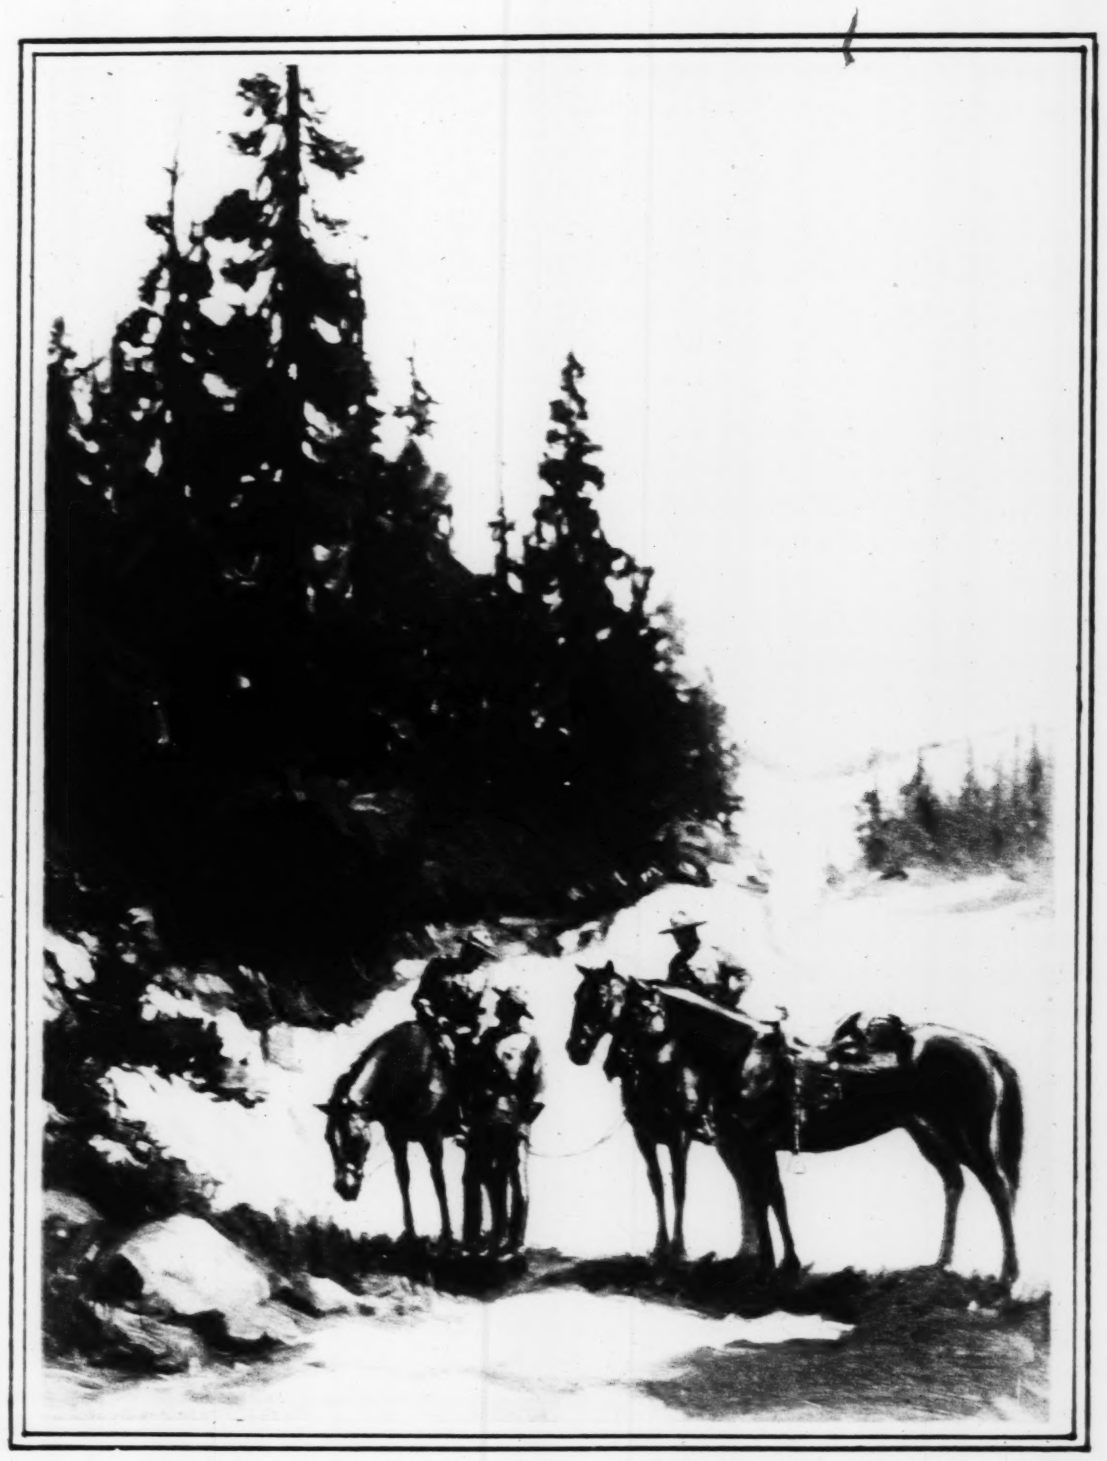
Down from Canada came tales of a wonderful beverage



FOR years and years, visitors to Canada had come back with tales of a wonderful ginger ale. They described its exquisite flavor—they told of drinking it in the Houses of Parliament in Ottawa, in the residence of the Governor-General, and in the Royal Canadian Yacht Club.

Friends would listen and smack their lips and ask if there wasn't some way to purchase it in this country. And the answer was always "No."

Finally, however, the demand became so insistent that it was decided to open a branch in this country, and in 1921 "Canada Dry," for the first time, was officially brought to the United States.

An amazing story of success

For two years this fine old ginger ale was served only in the most exclusive clubs and hotels in New York and it was little known outside of those select circles.

But gradually the story of the flavor of "Canada Dry" spread throughout the States, even as it had come across the border from Canada, and it was soon necessary to establish a separate plant in this country to care for the demand.

Today "Canada Dry" is known the wide world over and its phenomenal growth in public favor is one of the most inspiring stories of success in the history of American business. The reason for the remarkable success of "Canada Dry" is simply that it is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger.

This is an important point to remember when you are selecting a beverage for your home. For many so-called ginger ales are not ginger ales at all, but get that strong, biting taste artificially from the use of capsicum, or plain, everyday red pepper. There is no capsicum in "Canada Dry."

Because it is real ginger ale, and is made from real Jamaica ginger and other absolutely pure ingredients, "Canada Dry" blends delightfully with other beverages—it will not bite the tongue or burn the lips—it leaves no "brassy" after-taste or recurring "kick back," as some people call it—it is friendly to the stomach.

The minute you break the seal of the beautiful bottle and pour a bit of "Canada Dry" slowly down the side of the thin-edge glass, you will know that here, at last, is real ginger ale.

"The Champagne of Ginger Ales"

Hold it to the light! See how clear it is! How it gleams and sparkles! The life and vitality of it! The pale, "dry" champagne-like color!

And then taste it! Here is a revelation in ginger ale quality—a delicate, alluring "dry" flavor that intrigues your taste—a flavor unlike that of any other ginger ale you ever have tasted!

Truly it has been said that until you try "Canada Dry" you have no idea how good ginger ale ought to be. In quality, in purity, in the witchery of its matchless flavor it is, indeed, "The Champagne of Ginger Ales."

REGARDING IMITATIONS

For your own protection, remember that not every ginger ale sold in a green bottle is "Canada Dry." Always look for the name "Canada Dry" on the bottle cap. It pays to be particular.

U. S. COMMISSION TO INSIST FRANCE REVISE DEBT OFFER

One of Principal Differences Is on Amount to Be Paid in Early Years of Liquidation.

SENATE ACCEPTS BELGIAN TERMS

Vote Is 55 to 20 on $417,780,000 Settlement—Ratification Now Goes to the President.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—France must revise its new offer for settlement of its war debt to this country, the American Debt Commission decided today.

The decision was reached at the second meeting of the American Commission to study the proposal put forward last week by French Ambassador Berenger. Secretary Mellon will confer with the Ambassador before negotiations are resumed.

Although France will be asked to modify its offer, it was emphasized today by the American Commission that the latest discussions have not been terminated.

One of the principal hitches is how much France shall pay at the outset. Berenger proposed first payment of $25,000,000 annually, but the commission is understood to desire higher first payments.

The $417,780,000 Belgian war debt agreement was approved by the Senate this afternoon. The vote was 55 to 20. The agreement comes into force as soon as President Coolidge signs the bill of ratification, which already has been approved by the House.

Previously the Senate rejected 21 to 52, amendments by Senator Howell (Rep.) of Nebraska providing for the issuance of interest-bearing bonds by Belgium to cover the indebtedness at the request of the Secretary of the Treasury.

FRENCH PROPOSAL IS $500,000,000 MORE THAN LAST YEAR

By CHARLES MICHELSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The French debt offer not only goes half a billion higher on the total than did the Caillaux plan, but does not contain the safeguard clause that was the most potent factor in the rejection of that plan last year.

Chance of Delay in Senate.

Certain Senators have stated that whatever arrangement was made at this time would be only academic, meaning there is little chance of the agreement being ratified during the present session of Congress. It took four months from the date of the agreement of the debt commission with Italy to ratify that, and nobody expects the Senate to remain in session until August to ratify the French agreement.

The Debt Commission was much interested in an interview published this morning in which Leo Blum, Socialist leader of the French Chamber of Deputies, insisted that unless there was included in the Berenger agreemen some security for French exchang the Socialists would oppose it.

M. Blum's idea is that a committeee of three, one French, on American and one neutral, supe vise the transfer of any paymen agreed upon, with the power hold up the payments wheneve in their judgment, the shipment such amounts would imperil th financial stability of the countr

No Transfer Supervision.

There is no such provision the proposals submitted by Am bassador Berenger. One of th American Commissioners said th such a thing would be constru as a variation of the safegua principle that proved a stumbli block last year and would not considered in as much as it wou make the payments dependent the German reparations, even the reparations were not mention specifically.

Such an arrangement was talk about during the visit of the Ca laux commission. It was discu only informally and had no m support from the French than fr the Americans. The French a tude then was that their na would not consent to be put in same category as Germany. an outside body insulting Fra by superintending her finances saying what she could and c not do with her funds.
